"All talk of a large loan to Germany in return for partial disarmament is absolutely unofficial and purely academic, and moreover is harmful because it may prejudice the Anglo-Soviet talks," a Foreign Office spokesman said.

Talk about a huge international loan being granted to Germany to aid the Reich's domestic economy and settle European tension has centred about the visit here of Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, German trade ambassador. He conferred recently with Sir Horace Wilson, Permanent Secretary to the Treasury.

Royal Family Cheered By 70,000 Persons At Weymouth

Weymouth, England, July 22 (CP) —The King and Queen, accompanied by Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, sailed from here last night aboard the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert for a two-day visit to the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth.

On arriving at Weymouth, the Royal Family was cheered by 70,000 gathered in this seaport, whose normal population is about 20,000.

A violent downpour gave way to sunshine during the passage of the Royal party. The rain came down again just after the Victoria and Albert sailed.

BATTLE OF NERVES VICTORY CLAIMED BY GERMANY

GERMAN REACTION

By LOUIS LOCKNER

Associated Press Foreign Staff

Berlin, July 22—(AP)—Official Germany congratulated itself today on what it regarded as victory in the latest round of the "battle of nerves."

This was the reaction as reports poured in, especially from Great Britain, of the "sensational" effect created by yesterday's statement by an authorized German spokesman that Germany is confident Danzig will be returned to the Reich within a few months without bloodshed and on Germany's terms.

That Germany demands unconditional return of Danzig, it is pointed out here, has always been known. That Germany does not want to go to war about it should also have been known abroad, Nazi officials said today.

The officially inspired commentator drew the following conclusion: If Britain's attitude concerning the future is so great that the people tumble into fits of nerves on the other and are prepared in the same breath to ascribe every folly policy every weakness to German policy.

Reiterating that the German position remains unchanged, this commentator continued: "The German people of Danzig and of the Reich are deeply imbued with the conviction that this is not a question of war but a persistent struggle for justice, the natural outcome of which can only be a German solution and no other."

Deputation Will Ask For 50 Cts Ounce On Silver

Cobalt, Ont., July 22 (CP)—A deputation from this mining town will go to Ottawa to ask the Dominion Government to purchase Canadian silver at 50 cents an ounce, it was decided at conference last night between municipal representatives, mine operators and Walter Little, M. P. for Timiskaming, and Hon. P. Nixon, M.L.A. for the district.

The meeting appointed a committee of five to prepare data for a brief which will be forwarded to Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of Labor for study before the deputation interviews him in Ottawa.

An increase in unemployment would occur if silver mines were compelled to close down. Mr. Little said. He would prefer some form of bonus to avert this, he added.

Killed with them in the accident, which occurred yesterday at Middle Wallop, Hants, was a South Australian J. A. Lovery of Durham, the wireless operator.

THEIR FATHERS FRAMED CONFEDERATION

By GUY BROADES

London, July 22 (CP)—Nostalgia reached out from the Northwest to touch the hearts of few Canadians living here, bringing recollections of the great, muddy, green-backed rivers that flow down to the western Arctic.

In a gallery of the Imperial Institute hung a collection of pastel portraits of the men and women of the north, portraits which Kathleen Shackleton did for the historical section of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Along the walls were the faces of such internationally-known men as Airman Wop May and those or others like Mickey and Pat Burns, Montreal, Ind., transport owners and proprietors who don't mean much to those who haven't been to Yellowknife or over the portage between Fitzgerald and Fort Smith alongside the 14-mile Slave River rapids.

Visitors can look at the face of nonogenarian John Firth who lives at Fort McPherson, miles north of Waterways with a mixed and bright Loucheux Indian wife. On the label they can read how old John retired more than twenty years ago, thought he would revisit his native Scotland, how he reached Edmonton, hated civilization and went home to McPherson.

From the wall there gleam the black eyes of Johnny Berens, Mac Kenzie River pilot from Fort Smith who has probably seen more water slip around the snub noses of river craft than any man in the north.

Leonard Erikson is there, too—the sharp-featured cook at the Ryans' "Half-way House", a Swede born in Scotland.

There is the squiline profile of Colin Fraser, Chipewyan's oldest citizen and son of the famous Colin Fraser who was piper to Sir George Simpson when the governor of "the company" travelled the routes of the 66 "brigades".

Nearby is a portrait of old Chief Jonas Lavallette of the Chipewyan Band who almost died three years ago from the infected bite of a muskrat.

Then there is Inspector D. J. Marion of the Fort Smith Royal Canadian Mounted Police, North West Territories headquarters. The big, ruddy inspector was attached to the police of Lord Tweedsmuir when he voyaged down the Mackenzie two summers ago to the Arctic.

AGREEMENT SEEN ON POLISH LOAN

Report Says British and French Representatives Waive Some Objectons

London, July 22—(AP)—What was described in financial circles as a "gentlemen's agreement" was drafted today to reconcile the British, French and Polish governments on terms designed to forestall rearmament loan to Poland of around £8,500,000 ($42,500,000).

A protracted hitch in negotiations was caused by a Polish request for permission to spend outside of Britain £1,000,000 of part of the loan for armament and other essential war reserves. It also was understood Poland waited a part of the loan in gold.

It is reported now that the British and French representatives waived objections to the Polish demands on condition that they be informed of Polish purchases in other countries and have a certain minimum of control over expenditures. It was believed a considerable portion of the Polish purchases might be made in the United States.

FRANCE DENIES STORY OF PACT OF FIVE POWERS

Newspaper Dispatch Names Britain, France, Italy, Germany, Poland

9 MAJOR POINTS

Philadelphia Inquirer Article Says Latter Agreed to Nations to Meet in 2 Weeks

Philadelphia, July 22—(AP)—The Philadelphia Inquirer publishes a copyright dispatch from its Washington Bureau today saying a five-power agreement exists on "virtually every outstanding European problem" has been reached tentatively by Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Poland.

The newspaper says Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini will meet Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premier Daladier and Joseph Beck, Foreign Minister of Poland, probably within two weeks, to ratify the agreement.

Nine Major Points

The account, the Inquirer reported, consists of nine major points:

"1. Danzig would be returned to Germany, but under the technical classification of a free port, thus leaving it open to Polish commerce.

"2. The status of the Polish Corridor would be modified to satisfy both Germany and Poland, with Germany presumably having free access to East Prussia and Poland

GALA EVENTS MARK CLOSE OF CELEBRATION

Week-Long Observance of 75th Anniversary of Confederation at Charlottetown

MILITARY TATTOO

Charlottetown, July 22—(CP)—The Visitors who came here for the week-long celebration commemorating the 75th anniversary of Confederation 75 years ago which led to Confederation, packed the Capital Theatre for the celebration ended.

Sports yesterday included the most spectacular event in the modern history of Prince Edward Island. Kilted Highlanders competed in the tug-of-war bagpipes in a military tattoo as the program concluded.

The observances reached a high point earlier in the week when the fishermen who came here to honor the Fathers of Confederation held their first meeting of the Dominion Fisheries Council outside of Ottawa. They mentioned the Confederation but inet conducted Treasury business as they sat around the Conference table where the fathers drafted plans for a Dominion of Canada three-quarters of a century ago.

Williams Lake, B.C., July 22—Residents in the Chilcotin district of central British Columbia, eastern Canada, reported a blinding flash and explosion which occurred in the heavens Thursday night. They believed a meteor exploded and described how reverberations of the explosion rocked the earth for a minute, shaking houses in the town.

Mrs. Mary Cowley of nearby Rose Creek, said he was tossed from his horse when the explosion and flash occurred. Mrs. William Williams, also a residents said a prospector set out for the hills to search for the meteor, thought to have exploded over Williams Lake about 10 minutes southwest of here and about the same distance north of Vancouver where reports of a meteor being seen were received Thursday night.

Force of the explosion, said to have left a huge hole of white smoke in the twilight sky for 15 minutes, was reported felt at Quesnel, 60 miles north of here, where residents claimed windows rattled as a bolt of fire streaked through the sky and burst at an estimated 10,000 feet.

Efforts to Salvage Submarine Thwarted Today as Winches Broke While Towing Vessel to Shore

MAY TRY AGAIN

Director of Salvage Association Stated He Was Disappointed When "Things Were Going So Well"

Liverpool, July 22 (CP) — Dramatic failure of an attempt to move the submarine Thetis with its dead from the bottom of Liverpool Bay turned attention today to suggestions that the vessel be left where it is as a memorial to the men who died when it failed to rise from a test dive June 1.

Conditions for the salvage effort seemed perfect when the submersible was lifted 7ast night from the seabed for the first time since it went down seven weeks ago. Then two winches on the salvage vessel Zelo broke.

G. R. Critchley, joint director of the Liverpool and Glasgow Salvage Association, told reporters: "I am very disappointed particularly when things were going so well."

It was believed the mishap occurred as the salvage vessel was attempted to move towards the shore with the submarine.

Although the immediate belief was that the salvage attempt would be resumed, attention was called to questions posed in the House of Commons by Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, who asked the Prime Minister to state whether, in view of the difficulties, doubts and misgivings existing in the case of the Thetis, he would consider leaving it where it is to be a memorial to the dead.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Electric currents of the air! Lightning and St. Elmo's Fire (a brush discharge of electricity from tops of masts and ends of yards of vessels, seen in thundery weather) are the most evident currents of electricity in the atmosphere. There are others also but not evident to the unaided senses. Falling moisture of all kinds brings down electricity as all times of the year. Then there are the puzzling upward and downward currents which are always going on and which for the earth as a whole are immense—100 megamperes. The puzzle is how the charge to produce this immense current is maintained.

Alex. P. Campbell at 100-Year Mark Has Started to 'Take It Easy'

Maxville, Ont., July 22 (CP)—Alexander J. Campbell admits that he has "slowed down" considerably but he isn't as young as he used to be. He celebrated his 100th birthday quietly yesterday at his farm home here, 30 miles southeast of Ottawa.

Mr. Campbell planted his own potato crop this spring and cut his hay with a scythe last year, but said he had been taking it easy lately.

Born July 21, 1839 on the Isle of Skye, Mr. Campbell spent his early youth at sea, either on his father's fishing boat or before the mast of a sailing ship. He came to Canada with his parents at the age of 15 and settled at De Salaberry, Argenteuil County, Quebec, later moving to Ontario's Glengarry County to farm at Baillie's Corners, then at Maxville.

Mr. Campbell was twice married. His first wife died in 1909 and his second wife predeceased him in 1924. He has three daughters and four sons living, including Mrs. A. Calder, Hamilton, Ont.; Philip A. Campbell, Vancouver; John Campbell, Fort William; and William Campbell, Passifern, Ont.

GEORGE STREET DUMP FIRE BATTLED

Chalked up as the sixteenth consecutive grass fire in a period of six days, flames swept the city dump on George Street yesterday afternoon, giving city fire squads a strenuous two-hour battle before it was finally gotten under control.

The fire, origin of which is unknown, smouldered deep in piles of garbage, causing firemen to aim several holes in order to get at the seat of the blaze. Clouds of smoke arising from the fire drew the attention of crowds of curious citizens.

Firemen were handicapped due to the fact that a number of the personnel were fighting a serious blaze on College Street at the same time.

HEAVY OFFERING ON CITY MARKET ATTRACTS BUYERS

Raspberries, New Corn, Feature Largest Display of Produce of the Season

PRICES STEADY

A city market fairly glutted with the colorful produce of the summer garden in its most productive season of the year, attracted one of the largest crowds of Saturday morning shoppers today.

Potential buyers, housewives, merchants the crossroads of city life thronged the pavements of the town within the police lines which produce in a manner that bespoke anything but drought or shortage the harvest of these particular crops.

Prices maintained a general uniformity with those of the previous session, but on the part of the purchasing public there was much interest, however, but this fact seemed to have little effect on the general price levels.

There was plenty of color. The ladies with their green or tomatoes mingled with the reds and blacks of fresh cherries and luscious fruits and vegetables adding to the general brightness of the whole.

Raspberries Plentiful

Raspberries were plentiful although the quantity did not come up to expectations, the no doubt to the fact that canning factories of the district have started preserving operations in some parts.

Beets were offered at ten cents per box and in some quarters three boxes for 25 cents. Red and white beets were sold at ten cents per box with the tasty shade variety offered at twenty-five cents per box or three for 25 cents.

Huckleberries were abundant with some choice stock selling at from 20 to 25 cents for six-quart baskets and eleven-quart containers at from 35 to 40 cents each. Gooseberries of the large variety were quoted at four boxes for 25 cents.

The first "Yellow Transparents" of the season were offered for sale at six-quart baskets quoted at 20 cents each.

New Corn.

New green corn "on the ear" proved popular with the buying public in the vegetable section of the market with dozens quoted at from 25 and 30 cents per dozen ears. Potatoes were firm with choice quality "spuds" offered at 90 and 35 cents per peck, and bushel lots quoted at $1.30.

Onions, beets and carrots sold at 5 cents per bunch. Radishes were quoted at three bunches for 10 cents with new cabbage at 40 cents per dozen heads. A few cauliflower of choice quality was offered at 10 cents per head and slightly inferior heads at 5 cents each.

A large crowd of shoppers thronged the inside market where a selected table array of fruits and farm products were offered. Eggs were firm at 25 cents per dozen for A-selects, medians were offered at 21 and 22 cents per dozen.

Cheese weighty broiler chickens were offered at from 65 to 95 cents per pair. Spring chickens sold at 75 and 85 cents each and yearlings were available at from 90c to $1.10 each. Fowl was quoted at from 60 cents each.

Lovers of fish found their favorite food in plenty. Whitefish and fresh lake trout were the only varieties offered with the former selling at 18 and 17 cents per pound and trout at 20 cents.

FRONT ROAD S.S. PICNIC IS HELD

The beautiful sunshine and clear blue sky made an ideal setting for the Front Road Presbyterian School picnic held Wednesday in Mr. T. J. Brown's grove overlooking the Bay of Quinte. It was a quiet day for both young and old, and real picnic spirit prevailed throughout. At noon the tables were spread under shady greenwood, and were laden with good things to eat, which was done ample justice to by all present.

The dinner over, social intercourse was enjoyed for a time, and old acquaintances renewed, while the young people had a game of baseball, and enjoyed swimming and wading in the cool waters of the Bay. About twenty-five sports began under the supervision of Mr. A. Chute, assisted by Messrs. Donald Bradshaw, Robert Bell and Douglas Mitchell.

Young Men's race—Walter Bradshaw, Glenn Bradshaw, Douglas Mitchell.

The peanut scramble for all children under 12 years of age provided much merriment as well as a feed of peanuts.

The booth in charge of the committee, Madeline Bell, Helen Hall and Douglas Mitchell was in great demand and well patronized throughout the day.

Late in the afternoon all departed for home after ..njoying a well-spent day.

Obituary

LATE PATRICK HART

The funeral of the late Patrick Hart took place this morning from his late residence, 11 Murney Street to St. Michael's Church, where Requiem Mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock by Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G., who also officiated at the graveside rites.

Interment was in St. James Cemetery, pall bearers being Messrs. Chas. Meagher, John McDermott, James McAvoy, Carl Kiser, Peter Hart and James Lynch.

A niece of the Duchess of Marlborough Audrey Gray, 21-year-old society girl disappeared with her mother after being released on $1,500 bail following a reckless driving charge. The charge arose after an accident in which two boys were injured. Miss Gray's car in Putnam, Conn. One lad may die and the other will lose an arm as a result o the accident.

Police Blotter

Provincial Police today were informed that 500 pounds of copper wire had been stolen from the property of the Bay Mines, north of Cloyne some time this week. The theft was first noticed by operated at the time.

"Some months ago a large quantity of copper wire was stolen from off the same property," Inspector Frank Gardiner revealed today after receiving the information of the latest robbery.

Several teen-aged boys were apprehended by Sergeant Arthur Booth yesterday following an investigation looking into the theft of $2.80 taken from the cash drawer at the Uptown Tire shop on Thursday.

After an extensive investigation, Sergeant Booth apprehended three teen-age boys, who had shared the loot. One of the trio had ensered the store and stolen the money while attendants were otherwise engaged. The money was divided and spent for soft drinks and candy.

Chief William Carey, Cobourg, asked local police be on the lookout for transients found, in possession of an excessive amount of cigarettes and tobaccos. Last night a large quantity of cigarettes, tobacco and chocolate bars were stolen from a Cobourg store and Chief Carey was of the opinion that transients were responsible.

Leslie Potts, 51 South Front St., parked his bicycle near the intersection of Dundas and Ann Sts., yesterday. Later a lady motorist, failing to see the bike, drove her car over the rear wheel. The lady immediately offered to pay for it, readily agreed to pay for the damage, which was quite accidental.

Jet Black Kitten Shows Gratitude

Just a year ago Mrs. Elizabeth Toff ant her son Gordon of Sidney Cottage rescued from a mongrel dog which killed her mother, a jet black kitten and nursed it on a bottle to maturity. Yesterday the cat, named "Nigger" brought and laid at the feet of Mrs. Toff with silent gratitude for motherhood and gratitude four jet black kittens which had been nestled away among the complicated old joists and crevices of Sidney Cottage below the rooms where Col. Ponton was born 85 years ago.

The front part of Sidney Cottage was built by Col. Ponton's grandfather, William Hutton, in 1834 and the rear part of the house by Archibald McEachan in 1805. Isaac Bpack and his officers slept in the present dining room on the way to Queenston Heights three months before he was killed.

Evidently the black cat, if articulate, would have a tale to tell. Anyway "You took care of me, now take care of my offspring."

They will find a good and historic home.

FLAMES SWEEP 30-ACRE FIELD

Eleven Head of Pure Bred Jerseys Driven From Blazing Mass

By far the most disastrous of the epidemic of grass fires that has been raging in the city for the past week, flames swept the thirty acre pasture field owned by John Fox, that borders College Street, reducing 75 per cent of it to a blackened charred area of stubble.

A cedar bush in the field was ruined as the flames that swept rapidly across the tinder dry grass and quickly destroyed the trees. Posts of two of the four fences that encircle the field are badly charred to day while nearby telephone poles also suffered severely from the flames.

Eleven head of pure-bred Jersey cattle grazing in the field at the time were driven from the blazing mass by Belleville fire fighters who were quick on the scene and with pails, brooms and water which was doused on grass as they fought valiantly in an effort to stem the sweeping flames.

The Belleville Fire Department raced to the blaze and fought it for upwards of one and one-half hours before the flames were finally under it to the field.

The fire believed to have been started by two young boys who were seen cooking an impromptu meal in the field. After were apprehended by a nearby resident James Jackson and after being reprimanded were allowed to go.

Mr. Pox whose house is some distance from the field said that was unaware, of the fire until notified by neighbors. Mrs. Jackson of 30 College Street who observed the dense clouds of smoke rising from the burning grass from her home

BELLEVILLE RINK WINS AT MADOC

In the men's singles Fred Harper of Belleville won from Percy Locke of Campbellford by the score of 21 to 20 after a hard fought contest.

In the rink's bowlers, however, the Belleville rinks triumphed, beating Madoc 20-19 in the semi-final and Peterboro 21-13 in the finals. In the finals by beating Campbellford 21-13 Belleville rink was composed of Austin Watkin, Charlie McCourte, Joe Black and George Watkin. In the semi-finals Watkin, 15-year-old son of Skip George Watkin is the youngest player to ever participate in a provincial district playoff.

On Saturday afternoon men's doubles will be played on the Madoc greens. Belleville, Tweed, Stirling and Campbellford, Peterbrough and Madoc competing.

HEAD-ON CRASH INJURES TWO

Accident Happens on Boardman's Hill North of Chatterton

Injury to two persons and considerable property damage resulted from a head-on motor accident on the Oak Hills road early today. Miss Jean Murney Stirling, sustained head and leg injuries, while Miss Dorothy Lockwood, Montreal, and Hugh Cameron, Trenton R.C.A.F., suffered from facial lacerations, the result of the crash.

The injured persons were attended to by Dr. C. A. Carleton at Stirling.

The accident occurred when Leonard Lockwood, 21 was making the turn off Highway No. 14 onto the old Boardman's Hill and drove his car head-on into a passing bread car, proceeding up the hill and driven by Arthur Griffin, Stirling. Miss Munroe was riding with Griffin, while the other two were Mr. Lockwood's car.

Motorcycle Patrolman Alan Irvine investigated and found both cars badly wrecked, with the Lockwood vehicle having suffered the worst property damage. Traffic officer Irvin stated it was quite evident Lockwood had got off the highway by mistake. Charges are now being laid against Lockwood, the officer added.

NO AGREEMENT

"Before any scheme for a general settlement can be considered by the British Government," the spokesman said, "there must be some evidence of Germany's willingness to change her policy.

"For example it is extremely unlikely that Britain could ever negotiate a settlement as long as the Germans are in Prague".

This was a reference to establishment of the German protectorate over Bohemia and Moravia, heart of the old Czecho-Slovakian Republic, last March.

The Anglo-Soviet talks are those in which Great Britain and France are seeking to bind Russia to a mutual assistance pact.

The Associated Press said that in spite of the spokesman's statement it is known in London that Prime Minister Chamberlain has in fact discussed a plan to change Germany from wartime to peacetime economy.

Plan Discussed

One leading diplomat in London, the Associated Press said, has for a long time had a plan for a general settlement which included a large loan to Germany and this has been put before Mr. Chamberlain and is even said by this diplomat to have the support of Field Marshal Herrmann Goering, the Reich's economic Plan Chief.

Various reports of preliminaries to negotiation of Europe's "problems" followed a week of growing optimism that they would be solved peacefully.

Poland was standing firm against German pressure, but she agreed to the possibility of unpredicated Soviet Russia joining hands with Germany. A Soviet announcement last night disclosed that trade talks with Germany had been resumed after an interruption of preliminaries last January.

New Peace Deal

One version of a new "peace deal" was set forth by Vernon Bartlett, Member of Parliament and foreign affairs writer in the Liberal News Chronicle. This purported plan, he said, would call for the return of France to point out to Germany that she could no longer hope to win a "lightning war" and suggest:—

"Therefore she should disarm and, in order to help her through a very difficult period of transition from wartime to peacetime economy, other governments should guarantee her a loan of about £100,000,000, (£400,000,000)."

"There would, of course, be strictest international control of German disarmament."

Another rumor, published by the Daily Mirror (Independent), was that Chancellor Hitler already has hinted a readiness to promise George peace on condition that he get a £50,000,000 loan, "backed by all the Democratic powers."

Partial Disarmament

Still another and more conservative version of the peace talk background heard in frequently well-informed circles was that Wohlthat was told of a plan, long considered by "certain persons" in Great Britain and the United States, which would enable Germany to turn away from militarism and develop a healthy economic system.

The plan was reported to be:—

1. Partial disarmament by German-Polish agreement supervised by neutrals or by arms production.

2. An £1,000,000,000 loan to help convert German industry to normal peacetime activities.

3. An international pool plan for colonial development in which Germany would share but in which colonial sovereignty would remain undisturbed.

Official quarters denied all appeasement reports and greeted publication of another suggestion that Great Britain press Poland for settlement of the Danzig issue.

FRANCE DENIES

"3. Italy would be given patriotic feeling fitting the railroad linking Addis Ababa with French-owned Djibouti.

"3. A neutralized zone would be established in North Africa opposite Gibraltar to protect British sovereignty there.

"4. The present border between France and Italy would be permanently guaranteed.

"5. The present border between France and Germany would be permanently guaranteed.

"6. All other existing European frontiers would be guaranteed for 25 years.

"9. The two powers would limit their regular armies to not more than 300,000 men for 25 years."

The proposal was said to U. S. The Inquirer said it had learned the proposal was current and been in negotiation for several months. "thus accounting for the recent built in substantially turbulent European".

The text of the tentative pact, the dispatch added, was sent to the United States and the American Ambassador whose "identity has been kept secret" for the information of President Roosevelt.

Paris, July 22—(AP)—An official French communique declared today that reports published in the United States that a 25-year peace agreement had been reached tentatively by Great Britain, France, Germany and Poland were "without foundation."

REGATTA RUMBLINGS

They'll tell you that a prizefighter reaches his prime at 27 years of age—a professional hockey player one year later; baseball stars have been known to stay up in the "big time" in fact some of them are there now, at the tender age of forty; wrestlers generally ring down the curtain at thirty-one or two. So it would seem that the hoppiness is the phase of athletics are youthful or nearly so.

But don't tell Jackie "Pops" Cooper, silver-haired Kansan, or Reggie Jaile, seventy-nine-year-old Ohioan, veteran speed-boat drivers, that the old fellows can't hold their own with flaming youth insofar as their favorite sport is concerned....They will laugh long and loud at you.....

"Young fellow," Bob Jaite snorted, at the recent Dominion Day Regatta held in Picton, after he had been presented with the beautiful 9000 Prince Edward Gold Trophy, emblematic of the Ontario 225 cubic inch hydroplane championship, "Huh, they had better hang around us oldsters if they want to know how to drive these boats. They tell us we should have been put on the shelf at forty but that's a lot of hooey. Look at me, I am sixty-one years old and any young gaffer who is full of energy and wind to get out there and race with me."

Jaite, who won the Gold Trophy after trailing Cooper, who won it during the past two years, is repeating when a battery burned out forcing him to finish in fourth place, waged a friendly verbal war with his rival, Cooper, at the conclusion of the race. Driver hair flashed beneath a make-believe helmet.

"Look at that ole cuss", he roared, pointing toward Cooper. "Why that sixty-eight years old and I beat him."

"That old duck", retorted Cooper, goodnaturedly, "he should be home. He has a grand-daughter that's older than I. But he is a grand driver and I consider it a privilege to be beaten by such a splendid sportsman."

And proof of the fine sportmanship of "Pops" himself was seen last year when, after the records of the 225 heats for the Gold Cup class had crack Rockledge, Florida, boat, driven by Hugh Ginegras, had rounded the first buoy when she suddenly sideslipped, threw her bow high in the air and capsized, precipitating Gingras into the water ..... Cooper, who had rounded the buoy a few lengths ahead of Gingras, saw the accident, throttled down his speeding craft, took a look at the spinning wake of his competitors, gave "Pops", the gun and roared away in full pursuit. Near the opposite buoy, Cooper caught his first view ..... He plowed in a cloud of silver spray, roared over the short jaunt at the eastern end of the course and took the lead as the boats raced into the stretch ..... Cooper crossed the line a winner by a scant length over the second-place boat....

It is sportsmen of this type that will be here on Civic Holiday, men daring all to give the public thrills, clutching at thrills, yet gentlemen and sportsman all.....

—"Rotary Joe."

OTTAWA AGREEMENTS PRAISED

Canadians read with much interest the other day that the Ottawa Trade agreements if carried out into the world would do more for peace and settlement than almost any other factor.

The Empire has many ties, its Throne, its languages, its ideals, and its intra-empire trade relations.

Every person realizes that recovery or restoration of world confidence and development of world trade would give the world a great fillip forward to prosperity and to the elimination of much of the unemployment and the rancour and bitter feelings and fantastic ideas which pour from so many minds, in fact would make a sane world.

GERMANS AND MEAT-EATING

Another story comes out of Germany—Germans have been eating more meat and are warned that it is not good for them. Really the meaning is that Germany may be hastening the independence of her food supplies and therefore Germans should go lighter on meat meals.

Germany, the armed nation, has a problem—how to make her people want less and less so that more and more can be used or spent on armaments.

This is the strange situation that militarism has forced the German who was supposed to be hardheaded to accept—that increased consumption of goods is treason against the state, since he could do without it. Windsor Star points out that most nations would like to see increased consumption as a sign of a higher standard of living.

But Nazi Germany has had other plans.

ANOTHER FLIGHT

British airmen have taken another long flight over France. This is proof of the increasing co-ordination of the two democracies of Britain and France.

There is now talk of a flight to Poland by way of the Mediterranean, Egypt and Turkey.

BUILDING OPERATIONS

At the present time there is witnessed in this city, a contrast with houses being torn down because they were outworn, and the city endeavoring to have their sites built up with modern structures, and with a series of building operations.

This shows how time and conditions have changed. Demands of living conditions are met. Formerly many of those requirements in the past. In one of the lots just cleared of an old home was a filled-in well, a symbol of the time when public water-works and other conveniences were not so enjoyed as they are now, as a substantial house in the days when people did not mind carrying water a quarter of a mile in a season of drought.

Now these modern houses which are going up will be the source of comfort and accommodation. They have so many things the older homes lacked. These accommodations cost money and are only possible as community wealth grows. The new homes will in time bring in a substantial revenue to the municipality, whereas the outworn houses had reached the stage where they had ceased to appeal and to produce taxes.

So the whirligig of time moves on. The newer type of houses of today should last sometime longer than the older houses when some of the principles of building were not so adhered to as today. They will have lasting quality, and though new devices may become possible it is doubtful if the modern type of home can become outmoded. As long as the roof and other woodwork are protected from the weather the houses will last. To the modern house the foundation has meant a great guarantee of lastingness and about the only requirement of the owner is to see that the roof is replaced or repaired when necessary.

THE BUSTLE COMING BACK

Those who have in years past gone through attics may have discovered queer devices of wires covered with light cloth. Such things have a prehistoric air about them, but grandmothers could tell what they were. They are very rare today.

They were bustles which women wore in the days before yesterday.

Now word comes from the fashion designers that bustle-like effects are in order for autumn 1939.

Those bustles of the nineties were large. Probably the designs of 1939 will be miniatures.

No one thought so seemingly artificial a style of apparel as a gown which would require a bustle would come back. People will wait and see. Likely the fashion style ists will do it, for they are the moulds of customers. Recently we set ladies to work cutting off strips from the hems of their skirts to shorten them.

AWAY AHEAD OF HIS TIME

71 years ago in an eastern paper, the following news item appeared:

"A man about forty-six years of age, giving the name of Joshua Coppersmith, has been arrested in New York for attempting to extort funds from ignorant and superstitious people by exhibiting a device which he says will convey the human voice any distance over metallic wires so that it will be heard by the listener at the other end.

"He calls the instrument a 'telephone', which is obviously to imitate the word 'telegraph' and win the confidence of those who know not the meaning of the latter instrument without understanding the principles on which it is based. Well-informed people know it is impossible to transmit the human voice over wires, as they are done with dots and dashes and signals of the Morse Code, and that were it possible to do so, the thing would be of no practical use or value.

"The authorities who apprehended this criminal are to be congratulated, and it is to be hoped that his punishment will be prompt and fitting, that it may serve as an example to other conscienceless schemers who enrich themselves at the expense of their fellow creatures."

We wonder what the sceptical writer would think if he were to be resurrected today and could see our talking pictures, television, trans-Atlantic airplanes and all the other marvels of modern science. If anyone had predicted these things 71 years ago doubtless the world would be promptly chucked into a padded cell.

GREATER THAN NAPOLEON

While working in construction camps some years ago the writer came in contact with some of the toughest men who ever took off a shirt (or didn't take off a shirt) to get to bed. The bunkhouse stories I listened to were many and varied, ranging from the humorous to the lurid and startling, stories packed with drama and gripping human interest.

One night I recall in particular a group of ex-army men were reminiscing. A garrulous old campaigner was jawing about his experiences during the Boer War.

"Aw—Boer War!" scoffed a veteran of the 1914-18 vintage, "That was only a bloomin- bow-and-arrow war."

"Bow-and-arrow-war be d.....!" replied the enthusiastic old soldier, "I helped the Queen's shilling as he hurled a variety of invectives that he never learned in Sunday School.

When the old chap's anger finally subsided to muttered grumbling the talk switched to generals. One had it that Napoleon was the greatest general of all time, while others championed Hannibal, Wellington and Foch. There was a spirited debate and the argument waxed loud and long.

At last the verbal combatants appealed to an old cynic, sitting in a corner complacently puffing at his pipe. Old Bill was considered to be something of a philosopher and was noted for his wit and sagacity. He unclamped the pipe from between his teeth and his eyes twinkled.

"Generals both!" he snapped, without so much as a grin.

I joined in the burst of uproarious laughter that followed but it was not until years later, when some of the immortal names of youth had begun to wear off, that the conviction impinged on my mind that Old Bill never spoke a truer word, whether he realized it or not.

Checking up in my encyclopedia (every one should have an encyclopedia) I find that General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army began his fight against the devil in 1865. He worked among the slums of London, using the most unconventional methods, and continued until his death in 1912. The Salvation Army still carries on the fight; still champions the weak, the oppressed, the unfortunate, battles where others disdain to tread. Who can deny that such a general and such an army are the greatest in the world's history?

LOOKING BACKWARD

20 YEARS AGO

July 22nd, 1919.

Mrs. A. Dutton is visiting friends in Cobourg.

Mrs. Johnson of Prairie City, Sask., wife of Mr. George Johnson, at one time a cigar manufacturer in this city, is visiting friends here.

Major J. R. McConkell left yesterday to enter upon his duties in a position which he has accepted in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cummins and family of Chicago, Ill., are visiting relatives in the city. Mr. Cummins is an old Belleville boy.

30 YEARS AGO

July 22nd, 1909.

Mrs. W. M. Cronk is visiting friends in Colborne.

Messrs. W. Ketchenson and L. C. Pascoe are in Kingston today attending the annual meeting of the I.O.O.F. Ballot association.

In a baseball match between Belleville and Demorestville which was played here yesterday the former team won the score being 14 to 1. The following players represented Belleville.—Delaney, Brown, Green, Reeves, Connelly, Brennan, Mc-Nell, Watkins and Thomas. Demorestville.—Collier, Gerow, Howard, Coulidge, Divet, Williams, Rochefort, Solmes and Thompson.

40 YEARS AGO

July 22, 1899.

We learn from Mr. Harry McIninch, tally clerk at the boom, that in the recent drive down the Moira River there were 162,-048 pieces for the Rathbun Company, being divided as follows:—Logs 116,853, jobs 14,800, postes 6,622, cedars 8,312 and floats 15,-460. In the drive there were 4 replaces for Mr. C. P. Holton. It required 26 days to put the drive through the gap.

Mr. W. Lattimer of this city was yesterday appointed D. D. G. M. for this district at the meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge.

Mr. William Paterson of the Syndicate Store is in Toronto on business.

Mr. Kenrick of the local staff of the Bank of Montreal has been transferred to Dresden.

50 YEARS AGO

July 22nd, 1889.

Mr. George A. Kingston, who has been appointed to Messrs. Clute and Williams in this city for the past two years, has secured a desirable position in the law office of Messrs. Mulock, Tilt & Company, Toronto, and will leave Belleville on Aug. 5th. We predict that his integrity and careful business qualities will ensure his success and advancement in the Queen City.

Work will be commenced soon upon the city brick.

Mr. Robert Day was the successful competitor in the Forest and Stream Club's trap shooting contest yesterday.

Mr. William Maddrell, Public School Inspector for North Hastings, was in town to-day.

An Australian Looks at Ontario

"What's in a name?" asked Juliet of the moonlit sky. It is doubtful if the residents of and south of Kawartha Lakes she would probably agree that there is quite a lot to a name. This part of Ontario is redolent of the Old Country. The west strong in the early days. English, Irish, Scots and Welsh, they settled here bringing their memories of home with them to found Peterborough, Enniskillen, Lindsay and Pontypool.

It was the same with the Australian pioneers. In a land where the aborigines had such places as Woolloomooloo, Boomanoomanah and Woorooroke, they still remembered home and planted Melbourne, Sydney and Perth. Even to-day you may hear third-generation Australians who have never been out of the country refer to Great Britain as "Home."

Ontario's Lake Simcoe district is old, solid, comfortable, full of such farms as Dunrobin which pronounces to passers-by that it was established in 1830. It is an English scene, rather like Hampshire. Avenues of trees lead the way into Bracebridge and along the streets. There is something restful, Queen Victoria about Beaverton with its lilacs scenting the air and often running wild into unstrimmed hedges. I was sure that one would turn the corner any moment on Holsteins and Guernseys as vernacle looking over the waters of Simcoe sparkling in the sun.

The road through busy Lindsay to Peterborough runs through pastoral land. Corn waved knee high with bovine detachment. One suddenly realized they were deliberately a superior people who knew a good thing when they saw it. Holsteins and Guernseys as vernacle the most of their dairyman's paradise, relished the real value of greenness whether for eating or shade. For once, like Walt Whitman, I felt a kinship with the cows. I wondered whether their promised Elysian fields could hold out rich-er promises than Ontario's meadows.

Peterborough, 25,000, a city of churches, had the atmosphere of an English county town which had grown to advantage in crossing the Atlantic. Towering over the treed streets from a hilltop was the spire of the Cathedral of St. Peter in Chains. I recalled visiting the original Peterborough in England where a lovely rambling cathedral stands in centre of architecture of the year round. Today it is the only beautiful thing in Peterborough which has not swallowed up in the march of industry, and is ugly. Peterborough, Ontario, England is what Peterborough, England must once have been.

Ontario has some of the oddities of engineering, a sort of hydraulic staircase, a double block which citizens, without putting tongues in cheeks, can tell Anna Maria is the largest in the world. A ship comes into one 135-foot-long lock, water is poured into the other driving it down and forcing the other up 65 feet, and seems no limit to the ingenuity of the modern engineer. The Trent Canal below is a system of locks through which pleasure craft can sail. There is a sure target for any photographer.

And so we came through the Gap to Kingston, where the history of Canada has shuttled back and forth for 300 years. Kingston, or Cataraqui, which I thought was French and rhymed with "smoke" before I found it was pronounced "Cananokhay," Mark Twain was not the only interested visitor.

The town lights shone across the water of the river, stars also ascended the heavens, an outboard motor put-putted sounding like a machine gun. It was a place to dream, and dreaming comes easily in Kingston. By day it is a border-town for the ships displayed the china, woollens and linen which Americans demand.

By the St. Lawrence, even here two miles wide, goes the highway to the south soon to Ivy Lea and the suspension bridge, which is a small Gate bridges in Vancouver. Down below the beautiful sun threw into relief the Thousand Islands, a scene to take the breath away. Swiftly I thought of Byron's "the Isles of Greece," the time when I was a kid and made mouth maps of plasticine and water, and how grand it would be to live on one of those islands always.

No chain of lakes could be as lovely as the Kawartha. Nor could any in Canada is more magnificent. Lake Louise at midnight under a full moon. Lake Simcoe from a float on the water, like ships as sheltered moorings. Lake ships you can hear from the muddled mist till a mental pinch told that the only morning liner was from the great river itself.

It was here we had our international difficulties. Not knowing that I would be coming to the Thousand Islands I did not have an Australian passport. Deciding to drive over the two bridges into the states I was soon wrapped and entangled in immigration tape. No questions were asked of my three Canadian friends, but I had a polite barrage of interrogation. Returning to Canada with cheerful immigration officer there had to be satisfied that the years of warfare and jealousy on the faces of my friends could be heard a mile away. There was something to live down after all.

Past a little trim church, painted blue, which had looked over the river for nearly 150 years, through Prescott and the old historic ruins of Port Wellington which could tell a thousand stories of the war of 1812, we came to a beacon, a five-storey white tower. Here the plaques recalled the Battle of the Windmill in 1838 while Canadians fought for freedom from the oligarchists whose influence since it was born? It is a prospect that would scare most men, but Mitchell doesn't scare easily. He has been a newspaper man ever since he left school at 15 and in the composing rooms and came downstairs into the ranks of the reporters. Another minister (rest it!) That was back in the 90's. Quotes at the time of what happened since then, quite a number of good stories he knows and tells with gusto. Then a spell of writing in one capacity or another, either directly years ago by writing about them or indirectly by editing other peoples' reporting of them. That, one would think, would take the edge off any man's energy and enthusiasm but it hasn't dulled or dampened Mitchell's. I has simply added to his fund of experience and matured and confirmed his judgment. And that, in turn, is why his appointment to this new post may prove and exacting job is a mighty good appointment and has met with favorable comment from many hard-headed and vigilant gentlemen whose business is the editing and publishing of newspapers from Sydney to Victoria.

Genological researchers do not disclose that the newspaper virus ever bites out in Mitchell family till this generation. But it made up for lost time. It made up with the intensity with which it infected him, almost from childhood. Mitchell has always had the knack to sit at a desk without the smell of news-print and ink to be offensive and the crumble of a running press under foot it passes his understanding. Only one thing could ever lure him away from the office until the paper was put to bed and that was a good play. With an instinctive liking for and knowledge of good drama he is one of the best-equipped dramatic critics in Canada and his lamentations over the lack of good plays to see in Canadian cities have been eloquent and deep. His appreciation of the best in literature is equally instinctive and accurate: he has not many pictures and prints but those he has are worth looking at, once he thought a bit about playing golf and dabbled a little with the game. The annual result that he gave it up. It is to be hoped that he will yield to pressure and resume the game. Golf exercises involved will be interesting.

But to return to the beginning, directing the operation of Canadian Press is a big job; a very big job. It is the big job in Canada. Science has applied itself to the communications problems and the world has shrunk in terms of space-time to a pocket handkerchief. Canadian Press in Canada now gets a news service that the London Times would have dreamed of a couple of generations ago. The news pours in and out in a steady flood. Some is sifted and shunted and shuttled back and forth, some is rushed with the speed of light itself. And it must be as accurate and as nearly free from bias as human effort is and as untainted from contaminated sources as it is humanly possible—something that gets harder, and harder in these days.

Making Alexander McNeil ("Jack" or "Alec" or "Mac" as you like) responsible for both, or all, political parties during election time is another of the services he merely the other fellows propaganda. And some people will say that is the atmosphere of the capitalists and another that it is a big time waster. Most any how—he—it never has been—any place for a man who can't keep his head down and work. McNeil has been keeping both for some years now, and he's having a good time at it, so continue—Montreal Standard.

New Boss of Canadian Press

Slow would you like to have a pet with almost one hundred distinct and indirect bosses no two of whom have quite similar interests and in consequence no two of whom will have quite the same idea of how you should carry on? How would you like to spread this business over, roughly, five thousand miles of land in two countries and considerable water with a couple of oceans, handle it from eight main distribution points all spradded out over a continent, with hours and hours of time lag between them? How would you like to be dealing in your business almost instantaneously perishable stuff, so that efficiency in handling it was a matter of seconds and not even minutes, hence this very great extent of territory you operated over was an added worry, owing to time differences? Furthermore how would you like it if a lot of this most perishable stuff was so explosive that if it wasn't handled just right it might go off and blow you and your bosses and your bosses' bosses into the middle of next week, metaphorically speaking? How would you like to have to run as busy as a bee nearly all the time and be tactful at the same time, courageous, combining quick action and good judgment, all the time?

In other words, how would you like to be Jack or Alec or Mac or McNeil who is about to take over the General Manager-ship of Canadian Press in succession to J. P. B. Livesay whom ill health has forced to retire after putting Canadian Press on a par with any organization almost since it was born? It is a prospect that would scare most men but McNeil doesn't scare easily. He has been a newspaper man ever since he left school at 15 and in the composing rooms and came downstairs into the ranks of the reporters. Another minister (rest it!) That was back in the 90's. THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Causes and Treatment of Asthma

I write often about asthma because so many suffer from it, and because, as medical students, we were taught that the cause was unknown and there was no specific cure. Then an attack was affected by the use of nitroglycerin or amyl nitrite. The use of injections of adrenalin—adrenalin—is now more generally used.

Today while the cause of some cases is unknown, a cause for the majority of cases has been discovered and a specific cure is made. Research workers are now agreed that asthma is due to a disturbance in the nervous system with not one but a number of causes.

Drs. P. De Bersaques and A. Berat, in Archives of Medicine-Surgery, Liege, state the importance of the "constitutional" factor in the production of the disease and show that effective treatment can be realized only when the true nature of the make-up or constitution of the asthmatic is fully understood. They examined forty asthmatics thoroughly. They found that the asthmatic is a tall, lean and strong, nervous type, much like sufferers with hay fever. There was a tendency to double block which citizens, without putting tongues in cheeks, can tell Anna Maria is the largest in the world. A ship comes into one 135-foot-long lock, water is poured into the other driving it down and forcing the other up 65 feet, and seems no limit to the ingenuity of the modern engineer. THE "WRENS" RETURN

Women are to be enlisted again for special naval service. The Admiralty announced that a Women's Royal Naval Service is to be started. The "Wrens" of the Great War were the smallest women's service numerically, of all those raised for national service. They never exceeded 5,000, but they did remarkable work.

Under the Humber Defence Command many of them were put on to mechanics' work, cleaning and oiling torpedoes and guns of anti-submarine nets. At the Battersea experimental station they did drawings and tracings for all kinds of new machines and guns. A few of them qualified in the delicate work of adjusting gyro-compasses and the early work on confidential coding and decoding, and some of the outstanding successes among the "Wrens" were accurate among the "Wrens" were accurate among the "Wrens" were accurate

Some stores quoted prices in foreign currencies.

Still others continued to do business in Chinese dollars and were thronged with customers, but every once in a while the proprietors would raise the prices with this announcement to the crowds: "Higher prices are effective this instant lest we go bankrupt."

Unable to Handle Calls

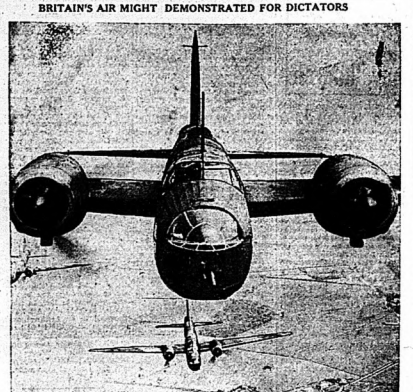
The city's automatic telephone system was unable to handle an avalanche of calls concerned with the money crisis, and consequently a horde of coolies ran to and fro carrying notes from excited would-be customers.

Postage stamps circulated as money as virtually all coppers disappeared, working a hardship on the vast population of the city which customarily deals in small amounts.

In an effort to assist in this "small money" emergency Chinese authorities, it was reported, were planning to inject $2,000,000 Chinese (about $180,000) worth of notes in the foreign areas of Shanghai in denominations of from 1 1-2 to five Chinese cents (from about 1-8 to 1-2 of a Canadian cent).

The Chinese dollar reached a high of 9 1-8 Canadian cents today and closed at 8 3-4. Yesterday's low was 7 1-2 cents. The dollar plummeted Tuesday following withdrawal of stabilization fund support.

BRITAIN'S AIR MIGHT DEMONSTRATED FOR DICTATORS



Although this picture was not made while the British ships were flying over France, it was snapped for the express purpose of showing the planes and formations used. The planes are Wellington bombers as the distance was the same as it of the very latest issue. On July 14th, during the French national celebrations, five squadrons of these bombers and fighters, flew to the southwest of France and back, on informal training flights. Inasmuch would be to leading industrial centres of Germany, the parade of England's air might became an impressive factor in the present European game of "power politics." The flights were concluded without the slightest mishap.

ENGLAND'S "MOST PREPARED" COMPANY

"Air raid!" When such a announced by siren or other signal, these 6,000 telephone company employees file out in orderly fashion to the sled-doored concrete tunnels which act as shelters. After witnessing this A.R.P. demonstration, Sir John Anderson called the Standard Telephones and Cables Ltd., the "most prepared" firm in London.

BRITAIN, JAPAN

Cabinet approval cleared the way for conferences unless London disapproves the agreement made by Arita and the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie. The sessions probably will start next week.

Neutral sources conceded that Japan had scored in the agreement, but Japanese exultation was dampened somewhat by the fact that London has failed to reply in the more than 24 hours elapsed since Sir Robert and Arita came to terms.

Arita was said to have informed the cabinet that "the most crucial points were related to British recognition of the necessity by Britain of all moves calculated to give assistance to Japan's enemy (China), and our proposal that general questions relating to Tientsin should be negotiated first."

Postage Stamps Used

Shanghai, July 22—(AP)—Coolies were substituted for telephones and postage stamps were used for currency today as Shanghai's money crisis spread to affect nearly everyone in the city.

WATERPUMP ON CRUISER BREAKS

Five in Disabled Cruiser on Lake Ontario Glad to See Plane

Rochester, N.Y., July 22—(AP)—Towed by a coast guard boat, the Canadian cruiser with the Royal Rochester Yacht Club last night bearing five men who spent 27 hours adrift on Lake Ontario before they were sighted by a searching plane.

"It sounds a lot worse than it really was," said Raymond W. Statt, owner and skipper of the cruiser, "but we were glad to see the plane."

Statt explained that he and four companions, like himself Rochester business men, were en route to Presqu'ile, Ont., for a week-end fishing when the waterpump on their craft broke.

They were in no danger, Statt said. They had plenty of food and drinking water and were working steadily to repair the pump when the rescuing plane, sent out by the Gannett Newspapers after Mrs. Statt raised an alarm, hove into view.

Two Charged With Abandoning Child

Ottawa, July 22—(CP)—Charged with abandoning a six-day-old baby on a doorstep in Hawkesbury, Ont., Jean Portelance, 21, of Hull, Que., and Mrs. F. Seguin, Ottawa, were arrested yesterday and were taken to Hawkesbury. They will be arraigned in police court there Monday.

A Hawkesbury householder found the baby crying on his doorstep early Wednesday and turned the child over to Hawkesbury Police. An identification tag on the baby's ankle indicated the baby might have been born in a large hospital, and a check revealed the child had been removed from an Ottawa hospital, where it has since been restored to the mother.

Police said the child was legally removed from the hospital by a man and a woman who were to place it in a foundling home in Montreal.

Name of the baby's mother was not revealed.

SIX YOUTHS PAY COSTS

Kingston, Ont., July 22—(CP)—Six teen-age youths were assessed costs of $27.35 when convicted yesterday by Magistrate J. A. Shea on charges of assaulting a chum while the boys were bathing at a swimming hole three miles west of here.

The boy's father laid the charges against the youths, saying his son had been stripped and pulled into the water.

CUBA HOLDING SLIGHT EDGE IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

Bruce Hall, Canadian, Defeated in Singles, but Tarshis Ahead When Rain Came

DOUBLES TODAY

Pedlar and Pearson Have Chance to Keep Canadians in Running

Havana, July 22—(CP) — Bill Pedlar and Phil Pearson, the former Vancouver boys who moved east to Toronto to win places on Canada's Davis Cup team, meet the veteran Cuban combination of Richardo Morales and Lorenzo Rodarsa today in a doubles match which may decide whether the youthful Canadians or the experienced Cubans go up against the powerful Australians in the American Zone Davis Cup final.

Cuba went into the second day's play in their first-round series today with a slight edge. Morales, Cuban title champion, handed Bruce Hall, 20-year-old Toronto Divinity student, a 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 thumping in the opening singles match. Hall, who suffered from a severe attack of gripes early this week, wasn't up to the kind of game Morales played.

The second singles encounter, sending Hal Tarshis, 24-year-old "veteran" of the Canadian squad, against Jose Aguero, was an even affair until rain halted it in the third set. It will be finished today before the doubles match, and the indications point to Tarshis as winner.

Each won 4-7-5 set and Tarshis was leading 2-0 in the third when the rain interrupted yesterday.

That seems to put it up to the doubles to decide things, although Hall has a good chance for Cuba to take the last two singles matches when the order of play is reversed tomorrow. Morales and Nodarse have won the Cuban doubles title for years straight and are a smooth working team. Pedlar and Pearson haven't had so much experience, but they play well together to hold the Ontario title and look good on their side.

Robert Forster, non-playing captain of the Canadian team, declared Hall did remarkably well under the circumstances. Hall had been weakened by his illness, Forster said, and was exhausted by the heat.

WEST WELCOMES THUNDERSHOWERS

Many Sections of Western Canada Visited by Heavy Rains

Winnipeg, July 22—(CP)—Thundershowers brought joy to farmers in many sections of the Prairie West Friday and relieved, somewhat, the dry conditions which have threatened Western Canada's spring grain crop. Further rains can be expected, say meteorological experts.

A violent electrical storm swept along by an almost cyclonic wind, broke over Brandon, Man., Thursday night, leaving sidewalks and roads littered with uprooted trees and broken branches. Several power line poles were blown down.

At Shoal Lake, in the northwest part of the Province, lightning during an electrical storm knocked one man unconscious and lifted another three feet into the air.

ERROR IN ADV. OMITS PRICE OF MINTS

In Friday's paper an error in the advertisement of Canadian Department Stores resulted in the prices of Mints not being given, under heading of "Week End Candy Features". Mints are being offered during the week-end at 25c the pound, which the adv. failed to specify.

Beauty in the Bank

By HELEN POLLETT

NO WOMAN of sense will use up her last bit of energy, or strength until she is spent and exhausted. If she follows that practice she will find herself possessed of a fine crop of wrinkles, and wrinkling don't iron themselves out in a hurry.

The tired woman makes little headway with her activities. She is not efficient. Let her indulge in half an hour of relaxation, and she can pick up the job again.

Everyone should have a reserve fund of time, health and strength that will tide one through emergencies. This fund can't be banked up by the woman who is always in a hurry, who drives herself no matter how she feels. The human machine has limitations. Break the laws of health and you pay heavy fines in the form of being overcome, a nerve-ing nervous system, a digestive system that doesn't digest.

The tired woman seldom laughs, and laughter is a beauty aid. It relieves the tension, helps a sluggish circulation, gives relief to congested capillaries, makes women whose skins are pale and clinched to be dry, who find that baths-in-bed are a boon and a blessing. Laughter will find them a help and a comfort.

Girls who are pale and whose

Weddings

COOK—SWORD

A quiet wedding took place at St. Michael's at eight o'clock on Thursday evening, when Margaret Olive, daughter of Major and Mrs. J. O. Bruce Sword, became the bride of Mr. Cecil Albert Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cook. Rev. C. E. Baker officiated.

The bride wore a black net frock with allover white embroidery, fashioned in redingote style over black taffeta and carried Hollywood roses and bridal flowers. She was attended by Mrs. Harold Smith who was attired in black taffeta with white accessories. Mr. Harold Smith was groomsman. Wedding music was played by the bride's mother, at the organ.

A wedding supper was served to immediate friends, at the Perfect Cafe, the wedding being of a very quiet nature owing to the illness of the bride's father.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook left on a short motor trip to the Thousand Islands, the bride travelling in black and white with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside at 304 Church Street.

WAGNER—ARNOLD

Miss Violet Arnold, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arnold, Picton, and Mr. Carl Wagner and Charles Wagner son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wagner, Herchimer Ave., were married quietly in Christ Church, Belleville, on Wednesday evening, July 19th, the Rev. G. L. Wright officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Wagner are residing on Herchimer Avenue.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

YOUR VACATION MANNERS ARE ON PARADE"

Vacation-time is relaxation-time. Worry, care, strain, are left behind. To yourself", you will consciously or unconsciously reveal your real manners.

If you are by nature and training a considerate person, your kindnesses will be so sure that everything you do or say will be a reflection of your fine manners. This is an idea conditioning of your manners to display the courtesies between the manners you show when you are on a vacation and your manners at any other time.

But how very, very often we observe that the "vacation spirit" leads to the easy temptation of letting down, thoughtlessness when they let down the tempo of their non-vacation activities. Instead of regarding these pending days as a most personal opportunity to bolster or supplement their manners by getting with new surroundings and with new people, they thoughtlessly throw away their priceless chance for self-development.

Vacation-places are usually places where "a few are gathered together" and in this concentrated atmosphere our attractive qualities are usually appreciated and given full scope. Conversely, the unattractive qualities are revealed in bold relief. So, by your vacation manners, come out in the sun and have a fine time. On the other hand, keep yourself conscious of the effect that your less fortunate qualities have on other people. You may deplore the fact that people are especially "summer people" are critical. Don't let them get you down. Instead, rally you as ill-bred, unmannerly, selfish, loud or common.

I am always interested in observing, in a group of people, young or old, the ones who have the tendency to lower the general tone of the group. Usually these others will be by the highly-sensitized quality of their spirit, elevate the tone. It is also interesting to people in later group are high-brows, not that they have humorous, but they are apt to not fun-loving. On the contrary, they usually add to the humor, the zest, the general enjoyment of the group. When a person of this type joins a group, the tone comes to the group, even unconsciously, the stimulating feeling of "Here is a pleasant person.

NTS ARE LOW IN EEN

PETER BENEDICT

She looked at the ring, where it lay in the palm of her hand, all its diamonds shining still in the waning light. Then slowly she began to retrace her steps, following where Lyddon had led her so unexpectedly, almost as if there had been some hypnotic quality in his last advice to her.

At the crossroads she, too, hesitated; then she turned to the right along the lane, and walked steadily past the gates of the new houses to Adam Probert's office.

CHAPTER XXI

SUBMISSION

Catherine tapped at the office door, and then, without a word, "Come in!" without very much interest. She was not sure whose voice it was, but she did not think it was his. It was a singular and disturbing thing that 'his' could apply now only to one person in her mind, without question, without reserve, as if there existed no other man, and that one was Adam Probert.

She went in. A light was switched on over the desk. It lit only the face of the desk itself, and the forms of Adam Probert and Kenworth from the waists downward, where they stood close before it. Their faces were lost in the dusk above, but she saw them dimly, and knew that they were staring at her as if at a ghost.

Kenworth had a slim despatch case and the evening paper tucked under his arm, and every paper was cleared from the normally untidy desk. She guessed that in five minutes more they would both have been gone.

She stood just within the doorway, and slowly closed the door behind her, until the latch clicked into place.

"I'm sorry," she said, "to break in upon you at this hour; and you should very much like to talk to you, Mr. Probert, if you will spare me a few minutes."

Adam stepped back, and felt for the main switch upon the wall, and pressed it; and with dazzling suddenness the room was filled with the blaze of light, eyes fixed with the intensity of hypnosis, he and she staring at each other as they had stared at each other beside the sleeping body now some many ages ago. Kenworth looked at them both, and stirred uneasily, somewhere in the background of their thoughts.

"Of course!" said Adam.

"I won't interrupt you," said Kenworth. "As a matter of fact, I was just leaving, in any case. Perhaps, sir, you'll take the keys for tonight—I can call for them to-morrow."

"Yes, I'll see to them. Good-night, Kenworth!"

"Goodnight!" He passed close to Catherine; she saw his smile as something warm and friendly, for she was no longer an enemy; and there was something personally kind in the very young partisan's glance now, as if he found something positive to like about her by virtue of the negative fact that she had withdrawn from enmity from his old. She supposed, with something of a shock, that even Micky Dennis would like her now; and Court Brandon, too, would ask at her in the same way. This man had become the touchstone of his place; she could communicate with the human part of her valley only through him. Well, she had always, from the night when she had walked into his arms in the darkness sensed the power in him. "Good night, Mrs. Court!" said Kenworth, and was gone. They were left alone.

"Will you smoke?" asked Adam, pointing his case.

"No, thank you."

"Do you mind if I do?"

She made a small gesture of deprecation. "Please!"

He lit his cigarette. The silence, after the scrape of the match, was unbearable. He moved to the blind window and stood with his face averted from her, frowning darkly into the circle his hand and forefinger made, with the glow of the cigarette set in it—exactly like a ruby in a ring. He turned, spinning on his heel with the suddenness of a thunder-clap, and the light-strain taut over all the planes of his face.

"Why did you come here?" he said, quietly enough. "Was it necessary? I'm a patient man, Mrs. Court, but why should I be haunted like this? Do you think there is any pleasure for me in this meeting?"

"I'm sorry!" said Catherine gently. "I don't blame you for taking that attitude, and I'm glad that you let me see it. After all, you're right; I never had any right to trouble you at all, and any reparation I can make now will be outbalanced before it's over. He hindered that very well."

He smiled. "Do you! Did I say once that we seemed born with the talent for misunderstanding each other?"

Catherine hesitated, for the thread of her own voice so labouriously schooled for this interview, was already broken.

"I'm sorry, too, you very long. But there is something I can do, and—"

"But, Mrs. Court," he said, with a little laugh of vexation and what she could only suppose to be bitterness of outraged pride, "I don't want any reparation from you; you should know me by now one none."

"I didn't expect you to accept it very gratefully." She smiled for the first time. "But, you see, this is something you haven't the right to refuse. I want to give you my dingle."

"Dingle—to give me your dingle?" Adam came back to the desk, and stood staring at her across it. "You mean that? You really want— But why?"

"Because I know now what you wanted with it ;and I should like to do you. You can't—you can't care for me. It isn't possible?"

"Can you—Nancy and the others —"

"Nancy?" he said dazedly.

"Micky Mrs. Dunning, and she lives in the first house; and she loves trees. Once you asked me to sell it to you. Now will you let me give it to them? Please! I mean it."

"I believe you do," said Probert. "And you'll take it? I'll get my lawyer to arrange it; the legal part of it—But just now I wanted you to know that I meant what I said; done; that it was all over."

She put her hands upon the desk, and they shook; fell limp upon them as she leaned towards him in eagerness. "It wasn't that I surrendered to any power of yours, you see; but I really found out that I was wrong, and you began this work; and after that— I was by your side every step of the way; I had to be. And the glade—you see, it's all I have."

She laughed, but no longer listening to her more than that attitude, and felt that she was concentrated behind those fine eyes which had first troubled her consciousness in the dusk and forefinger made, with the glow of the cigarette set in it—exactly like a ruby in a ring. He turned, spinning on his heel with the suddenness of a thunder-clap, and the light-strain taut over all the planes of his face.

"Why did you come here?" he said, quietly enough. "Was it necessary? I'm a patient man, Mrs. Court, but why should I be haunted like this? Do you think there is any pleasure for me in this meeting?"

"I'm sorry!" said Catherine gently. "I don't blame you for taking that attitude, and I'm glad that you let me see it. After all, you're right; I never had any right to trouble you at all, and any reparation I can make now will be outbalanced before it's over. He hindered that very well."

He smiled. "Do you! Did I say once that we seemed born with the talent for misunderstanding each other?"

Catherine hesitated, for the thread of her own voice so laboriously schooled for this interview, was already broken.

"I'm sorry, too, very long. But there is something I can do, and—"

"But, Mrs. Court," he said, with a little laugh of vexation and what she could only suppose to be bitterness of outraged pride, "I don't want any reparation from you; you should know me by now one none."

"I didn't expect you to accept it very gratefully." She smiled for the first time. "But, you see, this is something you haven't the right to refuse. I want to give you my dingle."

"Dingle—to give me your dingle?" Adam came back to the desk, and stood staring at her across it. "You mean that? You really want— But why?"

"Because I know now what you wanted with it ;and I should like to do you. You can't—you can't care for me. It isn't possible?"

"What have I done—and the possible?" said Adam Probert, with the old, cold-blooded arrogance. "Dingle! Bring the dingle, and you walked on, and the trees that leaned over you, before ever I set eyes on you! And haven't I been in love with you from the distance where you kept me, ever since I was a boy? And dare you tell me, now, this moment, that you never knew it?

"I never did. I never realised that there could be—"

"That there was—"

"That there was—anything, but enmity between us."

He laughed. "Listen! Let us be clear. Catherine, I love you. Will you marry me?"

She was silent, but she raised her head and looked at him suddenly there was nothing left to be done, except to fasten her arms around him, and hide her eyes and her laugh and laugh. Until all the remaining doubts and regrets were swept away like thin autumn cobwebs before a high wind; and now, looking back, not even the labour and pain by which they had reached each other, but only the sweetness of each; all that mattered was that the moment had come to them, that she had the moon in her hands at last, and it was not all she had known it would be for beauty and grandeur.

She went on laughing softly into his shoulder, that cleaning, refreshing merriment, which for years were laughed away from them, and they were like two very young children, just about to enter on the queer pilgrimage of their lives. "I never knew it must be like this," he said at last still smiling "I knew from the very beginning that you were the one and only one. But sometimes, do you know, I doubted whether you would ever know it."

And presently they stirred reluctantly, and time came back into some sort of consequence, and they were able to fix full consciousness and locked the office door behind them upon the echoes and fragrance of their laughter, which filled it from varnished floor to panelled ceiling.

They walked on the grass, their linked arms, Adam and Catherine together, in the afternoon with her mother, Mrs. Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Cruickshanks and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cruickshanks spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Moy.

Ease Wheat Crisis By Buying Wheat Urged on Government

London, July 21—(CP Cable)—The Financial Times today called on the government to ease the world wheat situation by augmenting war reserves of the cereal and to strengthen its hand internationally by judiciously-placed purchases.

The newspaper said in an editorial that if wheat prices do not result in a more remunerative level, increasing financial stringency will result in producing countries and a resultant loss of markets for imported goods.

The editorial said British could take advantage of the urgent need of the wheat-growing countries to unload supplies to break the economic stranglehold on those countries and secure a foothold for British goods.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon — July is the great holiday month. Picnics of various organizations are held weekly. Those this week that interested were: Tuesday, the family reunion at Coe Hill, the Kelly and Tuft and Stapley reunions at Lake Dunns. These reunions have a two fold benefit, first they seem to give every one at least some of the dull routine of daily labor and anxiety, friends have an opportunity of meeting relatives that perhaps they never would in any other way.

Endeavors Class

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Wright entertained the Endeavors Class for their July social evening. There was an extra large attendance present of members and visitors. Mrs. Clifford Lansing of Oak Hills was the special speaker and gave a fine address on "Getting the Most Out of the Little Things of Life". Mrs. Raymond Chambers gave a fine reading. Some solos were given by Georgia Pitman and Joan McCarthy.

Mr. Phillip Carr read the Scripture lesson and gave the opening part of same. Mr. Kenneth Stewart gave a brief address. A vote of thanks was given to the visitors who assisted with the programme and lunch was served.

Picton

Picton — Canning of raspberries commenced at the Kinney factory yesterday and other canning plants are expected to start on Friday. The crop is a good one and was benefited by recent rains.

Prof. L. M. Arkley of Queen's University was guest speaker at the local Kiwanis Club at the noon hour luncheon in Globe Hotel, Thursday.

Mr. Michael Bohan, formerly of Picton, who has been here for two weeks left Wednesday for Montreal.

Mrs. J. Miller, Miss Vera Foster, Rev. N. Miles Millis Dodds and Mrs. Margery Dodds left Thursday morning for Penetanguishene, where they will be guests of Dr. and Mrs. Wesley E. Smart.

Harry Pargeter, local athlete, has been accepted as a student at the R.C.A.F. at Trenton and before leaving Picton was presented with a handsome club bag by friends. Several other local young men are seeking to enter this branch of training.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hodgson are spending this week on a motor trip through the mountains to Portland, Maine.

Mr. Gordon Bell came down from Toronto with his cruiser "Virginia" and with Mrs. Bell and friends is spending a holiday on the Bay of Quinte.

Mrs. L. M. Dench has returned to San Diego, California, after visiting Mr. and Mrs. T. Y. Hess and Mrs. C. H. Rutlan.

Chuck Klein Runs Hit Streak To 20 Consecutive Games Hitting Homer with Two On

Bucky Walters of Reds Also Hero by Winning 16th Game of Season

YANKS TRIMMED

Southpaw Smith of White Sox Limits Champions to Five Hits

By BILL WHITE

If you think all good sports stories end on a happy note, take the case of poor Cecil Haley, who at the tender age of 19 failed in his debut as a member of New York Giants.

Cecil, a negro mascot, was given a Giant uniform yesterday, allowed to sit in the dugout for the first time, and promised a trip west if he'd bring the Giants some badly-needed luck. The net result of his work? Pirates 4, Giants 3.

He didn't do a bit better than two old recruits, third-baseman Tom Haley, recalled from Jersey City, and shortstop Frank Scheib, recently declared a free agent by Rosemall Commissioner K. M. Landis and signed for a cool fee by the Giants. Haley did provide all the Giant fans with a homer but he later hit into a double play with the corners crammed.

Although Cecil and Tom and Frank couldn't help the Giants out of their seven-straight losing streak, there were some interesting things at happy Hogan's endings elsewhere in the major leagues.

Lengthened Hitting Streak

Opposed to Cecil, for example, was Chuck Klein of Phillies, who stretched his consecutive game hitting streak to twenty when he and Frankhed all the Merrimells put together by hitting a homer in the fifth with two on to give the Bucs their victory.

Here's what they did: Walters kept his record as baseball's "winningest" pitcher intact by winning his sixteenth game from the Dodgers. He beat them 4-1 with a fine six-hit job after the fire department had closed the gates on 54,313 Brooklyn fans. Some two hours later the Reds' four game spurt was ended when Lon Casey outlasted and outpitched Lee Grissom, Johnny Vander Meer and Lloyd Moore to win for Brooklyn 4-3.

Smith Beat Yankees

Ed Smith turned in probably the day's best pitching feat when he limited the Yankees to five hits and beat them, 4-1. It was Ed's second straight over the champions and ended a five-game victory streak.

Williams' stickwork in the Boston-St. Louis marathon earned a round of applause, for he singled home Johnny Foxx in the ninth to tie the score and connected again in the 14th eleventh to bring Doerr home with the run that beat the Browns, 6-5.

Reynolds provided all the Cubs' runs in a 3-1 victory over Hubbell by lining in the clutches and Dario Lodigiani knocked in three runs to help beat Detroit Tigers, 6-2. And Al Milnar hurled seven-hit ball to stop Cleveland Indians to a 5-2 triumph over Washington Senators.

WHEELMEN STAGE SIX-DAY RACE

Will Race on New Veldrome Erected by Tobacco Growers at Delhi

Delhi, Ont., July 22 (CP) — New styles in bicycle racing will be set here next week when the Canadian Wheelmen's Association stages a six-day amateur race in the evenings on the six-lap concrete track built by Belgian-Canadian tobacco growers.

Taking a leaf from the book of the professionals, the C.W.A. plans a week-long event with sprint competitions and match racing.

But unlike the metropolitan six-day races, the Delhi marathon will run only four hours a night, allowing some of the local contestants to go home to the family or tend to the tobacco crops in the daytime.

Built for speed, the track has the wooden bowl on which far-famed velodromes are comped for about the time of $600 is a recent addition to Norfolk's athletic equipment. The six days officially May 30 and has been kept warm ever since by Belgian-Canadian tobacco growers in the national sport of their European ancestors.

The track measures eight laps to the mile and has a steep curve to all the way around. Floodlight are being installed for next week's twilight heats.

Entrants for the event include well known Ontario, Quebec and United States pedallers. Perron and Cyr of Montreal, Hurlburt of California, Bunch of Buffalo, and Salvator of Quebec are the chief drawing cards in which Delhi officials expect will more than fill the 1,500-seat covered stand overlooking the bowl.

SHELL 'OILERS' FINISH FIRST IN SOFTBALL LOOP

Defeat Corbys in Sudden Death Contest by 7-4 Score

TRIPLE PLAY PULLED

"Funk" Murray Gets Two and Throws to Third for the Third Out

When the chips were down and all concerned were shooting towards victory, once again Johnnie Bawden proved the capable second artist he has demonstrated all season as he limited the Corby's A. C. to seven base hits, only one being of the extra base nature, as the Shell Oilers humbled the Corby's A. C. in a sudden death softball game at the Collegiate Institute last evening to the tune of 7 to 4 to assure the Oilers of first place in the City Softball League in a game that rang down the league schedule curtain.

In victory the Oilers earned for themselves the right to enter the city softball championship O.A.S.A. final play-offs while in defeat the Corby "gang" must now meet the Drayton "Premiers" in the O.A.S.A. semi-finals which opens at the C.I. diamond this evening.

Punching out six extra base hits the Shell Oilers made the Corby pitching ace on the night's play and generally well deserved victory. The Corby's took a three run lead in the second frame by virtue of hits by Ronald Richardson and Schleber. The Oilers came back to score two in the bottom half of the inning as Whalen doubled and circuit with Ronsky parked on second after hitting. Corby's were held scoreless by Bawden until the sixth when Murray walked and Richardson was safe on an infield hit. In the meantime the Secord-led squad had chalked up another tally in the fourth and fifth innings, making it two more for good measure in the sixth. Ronsky, O'Neill and Whalen doubles in succession and Bawden helped his own cause with a single.

The feature play of the game was supplied by "Funk" Murray, Corby's second baseman, who nailed Dickey's line drive to middle and then he stepped on second for a second hand down and Bawden to first to complete the first triple play of the season. Both Bawden with two each hit well for the winners as Whalen, hit for the circuit, Ronsky and Cy Barrage with two hits each were the best bets against Bawden.

Jim Barrage's running catch of Whalen's hard drive in the sixth was a stunning effort. The game was well handled by Umpires Thomas and Marshall.

JOHNSTOWN GOES IN ARLINGTON

Not Expected More Than Five Will Start in $50,000 Stake

Chicago, July 22 (AP)—Johnstown, reigning king of the American turf, goes to the post in the $50,000 Arlington classic today seeking his sixth major triumph of the year.

Only his performance in the Kentucky Derby, the Belmont, the Withers, the Preakness and the Wood Memorial Stakes, the long striding son of Jamestown, owned by Wilson Wood, of New York, probably will be the shortest priced favorite in the history of the race. The only defeat he suffered in a major event this season was in the mud at Pimlico when some home in the muddy Preakness.

Seven other three-year-old rivals were named for today's race at 1¼ miles, but it is believed no more than five will start. Challedon, Sun Derby, Heather Broom, Thunderhead and Bimelech, the latter two running as an entry for Herbert Woolf of Kansas City, complete the list of starters in the field. Total Eclipse, Yale O'Neil and Mahmoudy likely will be scratched. Indications are for a dry, fast track, which would be to Johnstown's liking.

FOXBORO VOTED OUT OF PLAYOFFS

Old Rule of Loop Resurrected to Force Team to the Sidelines

Foxboro, July 22 (Special)—With Foxboro's chances of attaining a play-off berth in the South Hastings League depending entirely upon whether they were allowed the right to replay a tied game with Latta, team representatives from the other three clubs stood solidly together last night at an executive meeting at Cannifton, and voted acceptance of the standing as on July 15, thereby forcing Foxboro to the sidelines for the first time in the history of the league.

Going back three years to resurrect the almost forgotten rule to the effect that teams of the South Hastings League were in the position to take one point each in the case of a tie game, Secretary Arthur W. Hall declared the motion still to be in effect, and accordingly the Foxboro club was left holding the short end of the bag, having only nine points in the final standing to fall just one point short of the playoff berth. Thus the three teams to participate in the playdowns this year will be Cannifton, Latta and Shannonville, they finishing the season in the semi-finals leaving Foxboro on the side lines.

Semi-Finals Open.

The first game of the semi-finals between Latta and Shannonville will get under way at Latta on Monday evening, July 24, with the second game at Shannonville on the following Wednesday. If the series goes the limit of three games, the third game will be back in Latta on Friday, July 28. Following the semi-finals the final series will start at Cannifton either on Friday, July 28 or on the next Monday, July 31, depending upon whether the first series goes the limit. The same rule will alternate between either Shannonville or Latta each succeeding year.

All games in the play-offs are to start at 8.30 standard time and seven innings to constitute a complete game regardless of whether the score is tied at the end of the seventh or not. It was decided to appoint neutral umpires and the names of three were mentioned, viz., Jack Thomas "Red" Townsend, "Jim" Carson, J. Mahale and Nick Sero, with the two to be chosen from the above for each game.

The final standing of the South Hastings League:

	W.	L.	T.	P.
Cannifton	8	4	0	16
Latta	6	5	1	13
Shannonville ..	4	7	1	9
Foxboro	4	7	1	9

Porter Goes Route.

Montreal pounded out 17 hits, four by Chris Hartje, and bunched them for a six-run third inning that decided Orioles' fate, Thursday, this old Bobby Porter managed to go the route although he was touched for 11 hits.

Harris gave the most remarkable performance of several months when he has turned in this season. He faced just thirty men in nine innings, walking one and passing none at all. He didn't get much support and the Orioles' bats in the Little Giants fell on Jake Mooty for seven hits.

Kroner and Myers made the two singles off Harris in the eighth and the only threat Orioles had before then arrived on an error in the second inning.

ONE OUTSIDER IN SEMI-FINALS

Lex Robson "Real Hot" in Beating Medallist Winner and Vic Corbett

Toronto, July 22—(CP)— Down through the years the Millar Trophy Golf Tournament has been Lex Robson's pet event. The Lakeview pro never has been so good in any other event as in this $1,000 competition for Canadian professionals.

It little mattered to Robson's tournament temperament yesterday that Vic Corbett of Toronto Hunt, with a one-up victory, submerging through sheer steadiness the fiery Lex in the afternoon, enabled Gray to score a course-record 67 in the morning round. Thanks to the veteran Robson five times winner of the Millar, and Corbett, Toronto Hunt pro, the whipping Vic Corbett of Port Hope 4 and 3.

Robson qualified to meet Gordon Brydon of Toronto Mississauga, who won the tournament two years ago, while Bill Lamb of Toronto Lambton Club defeated Ernie Cantlon, the out-of-town survivor Lloyd Tucker of Kitchener Rockway Club.

Gray, Brydon, Lamb and Robson annexe on the course to matching Bowmanville pros, Jack Cassidy, aside Gordon Watson of Cobourg, 5 and 3 and Norman Sutherland to meet the bold bid of Bobby Reith of Windsor Essex, former Ontario amateur star, two up.

Lamb ousted a tourney favorite, Bobby Cowan of Toronto, Ontario open champion, 4 and 2, and then had his work cut out to defeat Sutherland, runner-up of London Kunning-ham. There they all smare after 16 holes but Lamb took the last two.

Tucker defeated Clare Chinery of Toronto York Downs in the morning and fought a lone dog-fight with Bill Kerr of Toronto Hillcrest before winning at the last hole. They were all square coming to the 18th where Tucker earned a curvine eight-foot putt for a birdie 3cer, while Kerr's approach shot just missed a four-footer in his bid for a birdie.

ORIOLES FAVORED BY GOOD HITTING IN THE CLUTCHES

Convert Seven-Run Deficit to Defeat Newark Bears 9 to 8

TORONTO LOSES

Montreal Royals Pound Out Seventeen Hits to Win 10 to 6

Baltimore Orioles may not be going anywhere this season in the International League pennant grind, but that doesn't necessarily mean they don't have a pretty good ball club. They get beaten often enough for their seventh-place record shows, but it can't be done without displaying a good brand of double-A baseball.

One big thing in favor of the Orioles is that they can—and do—hit. Sometimes the other team does the same, but as the flock showed last night, it's not safe to take any liberties with the kind of power that's scattered around the Baltimore line-up.

It just took a couple of lapses on Newark's part to get the Orioles batting and again they broke away, they were halted again they had converted a seven-run deficit into a 9-8 victory. Hank Borowy started for the Bears, pitched 10 innings and had relief help in hand going into the seventh.

Climaxed With Homer.

The Orioles started clouting in the fifth inning when Baltimore provided a grand climax for a seven-run rally by hitting a homer inside the park, with two aboard. Then Billy Holm, pressed into service at second, got a roller go through his legs and a moment later Mikey Wilson hoisted a long fly to centre and his winning run.

Art Hilsz didn't have any serious effect upon the standing, for the sixth-place Montreal Royals had built up a lead before the Orioles to whip Toronto, 10-6, while Jersey City's Little Giants were trimming Buffalo, on the two-hit pitching of Bill Harris. Rochester and Buffalo were idle.

Porter Goes Route.

Montreal pounded out 17 hits, four by Chris Hartje, and bunched them for a six-run third inning that decided Orioles' fate, this old Bobby Porter managed to go the route although he was touched for 11 hits.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

In undoubtedly the best softball game played this season, the Shell 'Oilers' proved their superiority by taking the Corby's A.C. into camp in last night's sudden death game to determine the leadership of the city softball loop. Everything was crammed into the pastime to make it one of those affairs that send the patrons home satisfied with their lot. Once again, however, it was a case of too much Johnnie (Pokerface) Bawden, who scattered seven hits in a splendid manner. The fact that only one extra base hit was registered by Bawden was perhaps the feature that saved the day for the 'Oilers'. Some fine fielding was seen, topped by a lightning fast triple play by the Corbys in one eighth with "Funk" Murray getting two and an assist on the play. The chips were down in both camps with the result a splendid tussle was seen. The Oilers' had six extra base hits, including Whalen's circuit blow and therein lies the answer between victory and defeat.

Now we find Corbys meeting the Draxup "Tiremen" in the first round O.A.S.A. playdowns. The city softball executive met Thursday night and voted to compete the city O.A.S.A. playdowns and declare a winner as the city representative softball play-offs in the intermediate "A" series. All clubs in the league have been declared eligible, with the winner of last night's game being given a bye into the series finals. The Corbys' victory last night automatically gave Draxups insofar as they have the choice of inning in the first or second game of the series. The series get under way on Monday with the second game slated for Wednesday and the possible third game next Friday. However, if either team win in two straight, the finals, between the 'Oilers' and the above winner will commence next Friday night. Incidentally, with the declaration of the O.A.S.A. winner in Belleville as the city representative, the latter is under way for the Canadian Bank of Commerce trophy. . . . The schedule for the district ball boys are:

Picton Intermediates beat the Ale Force 11 to 6 on Thursday and thereby materially assisted the cause of the local intermediates. Picton are referred to the local baseball team as the "Orfuns" after an old time baseball player who tended to steal Cec. Perdue's thunder. . . . Another baseball item noted that name for the Lifflock City rugby squad some years ago. However, we can assure Cecil that our ball club are orphans in every sense of the word, as a fair sized receipt is "big potatoes" in Belleville these days. There is baseball scheduled every day next week, except Friday. On Monday Belleville goes to Napanee, while on Thursday the Ale Force come to Belleville. Two ball games each week would just about clinch a play-off berth for Bud Wilkinson's charges.

OTTAWA TEAM ON WAY TO TOP

Senators Are Now Only Two Games From First Division

Ahead of Cornwall Bisons again, Ottawa Senators were pointing today for fourth place in the standing, the fourth that brings participation in the Canadian-American Baseball League's post-season playoffs.

The Senators mounted past Cornwall into fifth place in the last five days of league competition, they downed the fourth-berth Colonels, 7-1, yesterday and are only two full games out of the first division with a doubleheader scheduled against Cornwall at Ottawa today.

Cornwall kept a half-game behind Senators yesterday by downing the Utica Braves, 4-0, at Cornwall. Lefty Thrumbore allowed three hits while his mates snapped Norm Stafford's string of consecutive innings in which they rallied for a run in the fifth.

Ogdensburg Colts hauled the loop-leading Watertown Rugmakers down a notch when they rallied for two runs in the ninth and a 4-3 decision over Rugmakers at Ogdensburg. Zachias hurled the victory for the third-place Colts, allowing Amsterdam seven hits but spacing them well.

At Oswego, the second-place Nelhi-schen Cubs took advantage of Amsterdam's loss, gaining a full game when they clouted out a 9-8 decision over Gloversville Glovers. Oswego banged 21 hits off four pitchers, including a pair of homers, and all their runs into the first five innings.

Eastern Playgrounds Team Triumphs

The East End playground triumphed over their West End rivals, 21-11, in a baseball home and pitching tournament yesterday, the last event in connection with the district ball boys' sports.

In the senior girls' group Norma Smith (West End) defeated Rita Thompson (West End), 21-11; 6-21 and 21-12.

In the boys' senior doubles however, the West End pitcher-catcher combination of Wm. Fitzgibbon and Wm. Fitzgibbon (West End) 21-7 and 21-12.

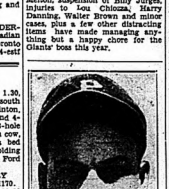
TROUBLES? A-PLENTY!

"Nobody knows the troubles I've seen," moans Bill Terry, manager of New York Giants. And the Cheerless Leader has some cause for gloom these hot summer days as just about every time he looks up out of the dugout he sees one of his men being carried off the field. Pitching troubles with Carl Hubbell, Slick Castleman, Cliff Melton, suspension of Billy Jurges, injuries to Lou Chiozza, Harry Danning, Walter Brown and minor cases, plus a few other disturbing items have made managing anything but a happy chore for the Giants' boss this year.



TURNED NEAT TRICK

One of the major leagues' most consistent batters, and best shortstop in the National League, is Arky Vaughan, above, currently in his eighth full season of play with Pittsburgh Pirates. Vaughan boasts of a life time batting mark of .322 and is climbing into that region again this year. Recently against the Giants he "ran true to form" by banging out a homer triple, double and single in one game, the second time he had turned the trick and the first time it had been done in the National League in four years.

Leading the way in money earnings and points counted for the Varden trophy, awarded annually by the American Professional Golfers' Association to the tournament player with the best record for the year, is Henry Picard, ABOVE, who took the lead with his recent extra-hole win over Byron Nelson in the U.S. P.G.A. tournament. Since the beginning of the year Henry has picked up over $8,000 in various parts of the continent and leads Sam Snead, last year's best, Byron Nelson, Ralph Guldahl and Dick Metz in that order for the 1939 honors.

England's Turf Champion

Champion of the English turf this eligible, the 2,000 Guineas and the year is Lord Rosebery's Blue Peter, Derby, and when the St. Legre is born here as he was led in after winning the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown Park. Blue Peter has already won a position he holds at the moment the two "classics" for which he is at 6-4.

Leading Pro Golfer So Far this Year

EXPECTED TO BE YOUNGEST MAJOR BALL LEAGUE OWNER

Youngest owner of a major league baseball team is expected to be Charles A. Comiskey, above, 13-year-old son of the late J. Louis Comiskey, owner of Chicago White Sox in the American League. The Sox have been a Comiskey team ever since they were founded by Charles A. Comiskey, father of the late owner, at the beginning of the century and it is expected that ownership will fall to the youngest of the clan, although control of the club until he reaches maturity is expected to be in the hands of Harry Grabiner, executive for a quarter of a century.

Joe Louis Signs for Eighth Defence of his Crown

There's nothing small fry about the future bout for the world's heavyweight championship — even in these days when so many critics are prone to designate the bouts as hardly worthy of the name. Here's the scene in Detroit as Joe Louis, the champion's second appearance in his home town as a pro. The bout will take place on Sept. 20, over a 20-round (or less) route. On hand for the signature-affixing are the champion, signing; John Hetiche, Michigan boxing commissioner, sitting next to him; and his manager, Johnston, loud and last holering manager of Pastor.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

THE CHECKED APRON

By FLORENCE MELLISH

Janice Meade rose in the gray dawn and looked across the green strip that separated his own home from Ellen Platt's.

"I am going to do it," she resolved.

She slipped into her gray kimono and opened the third drawer of her little oak bureau. This drawer contained mostly aprons. The apron at the top was a green check; all the others were blue checked. She tied the green one securely and slid down stairs, not to wake her half-brother, Donald, in his chamber across the landing.

Janice knew what she meant to do. Mrs. Fall's parlor window was raised about nine inches from the sill. She had forgotten to close it overnight. Janice meant to thrust her supple arm and to take from its bracket the little Parisian marble image of Ruth among the sheaves. She had coveted this ornament for two years until the desire for it had become an obsession.

She had offered her neighbor everything on her whatnot from the "Song of the Lark" in shell frame to the crocheted basket of bead blackberries, but Ellen Fall had steadfastly refused to part with the treasure, not perhaps because she valued it so much, but from a malicious satisfaction in withholding it.

Ellen was somewhat envious of Janice's quiet pleasure in her trim little home with neat flower beds outside and the various ornaments within.

"Now," she thought, "Roxy Holden will be here by ten o'clock and she is likely to see something in the house and sure to ask questions—I know the woodpile!"

Janice moved the heavy chopping-block, made a hole with the flat shovel and buried the green bundle tenderly. Then she replaced the block and went quietly upstairs for an hour's sleep under her rising-sun quilt. Donald was not yet astir.

Janice was not enjoying her cousin's visit as one who has she usually did. As the two sat on the porch in the afternoon, Roxy asked impatiently, "What in the world are you looking for, Janice?"

Janice started guiltily. "Why? what do you mean?"

"You look over at that woodpile every other minute."

Janice flushed. "I like to look at those tall pines beyond," she apologized.

"Do those pines belong to Hollis Webber? I thought so. Such a pity you and Hollis had to break—fifteen years ago, wasn't it? I've thought since his wife died' And now his sister Hollis is going to be married and live out west, and who will take care of that pretty little Idella?"

"I don't know, Roxy. Idella's a dear child."

"Hollis is forehanded, isn't he?" Roxy pursued. "Donald is getting round-shouldered; she added as the boy passed them whistling.

"Yes. He ought to go to school, but I don't see my way clear to manage it yet."

Roxy's keen eyes scrutinized her cousin's face.

"Janice," she began.

Janice rose hastily. "Now don't go to building air castles, Roxy. It's time to start the fire for supper. Do you like apple slump as well as pies?"

Monday afternoon as soon as the wagon which was taking Roxy to the station was out of sight Janice started for the woodpile.

"Now for Ruth! I'll put her back if I ever can. I was crazy to take her."

Straining, she moved away the block and prodded with the shovel. But the apron and the image were gone. Janice paled with terror. Had she been watched and followed? Was Ellen Fall or some one else keeping the evidence of her theft?

She sat down on the porch settee to think it over. Hollis Webber drove into the yard.

"My harrow is out of commission gone to the repair shop. Can you lend me yours for a little, Janice?"

"Oh, certainly! Keep it as long as you like."

When the harrow had been packed, Hollis dropped down on the porch step. He looked wistfully at Janice.

"Edith is going to leave us."

"So I hear."

"Janice," he said abruptly, "you and I ought to have tied up fifteen years ago."

"Oh, Hollis! Don't say that: it seems like wronging the dead."

She looked at his strong, kind, furrowed face. Her own was wistful, too. But what if she was suddenly branded a thief? Wouldn't he turn from her in horror? Could she bear the reproachful wonder in Idella's innocent blue eyes?

"Hollis," she said at last, "there's a reason why I can't—a reason I can't tell you. Don't urge me, please."

"I won't now, Janice," he answered gently.

They talked for a while, of Edith's marriage, of Idella, of Janice's small farm. Then he rose.

"Good-bye, Janice. I'll be around in two or three weeks with the harrow. Then perhaps that obstacle you spoke of will be removed."

She shook her head. "I don't think it ever can."

Janice's life began to droop. She worked listlessly and seldom went far from home. There were even a few weeds in her flower-bed. She discontinued her neighborly calls at Ellen Fall's. She feared the small, sharp eyes of Ellen and the look of gratified malice that might be in them.

Then," she said abruptly at dinner, "what would you do if you'd stolen something from one of the girls?"

"Gracious, Janice! Do you take me for a thief?"

"Of course not. I was just supposing a case."

"But supposing you'd lost it?"

"Oh, what's the use of supposing?" He pushed back his chair. "Say, Janice, did you know Mrs. Fall is sick? Hitty Barrows is taking care of her."

Janice sprang to her feet. "Mercy! I haven't been in since Roy was here. I'll go right over and take her some of this Dutch cheese, and some spiced pears, and a lemon pie, too. She likes them with two crusts.

Hitty Barrows ushered Janice into the parlor.

"I've got her in here. Her chamber was close. Oh, yes, she's better. She can see you."

"How good you are, Janice!" Her eyes followed Janice's startled gaze to Ruth on her bracket.

"You may have that pesky little image if you want it, and you needn't give me anything off your whatnot, either."

"Oh, no, Ellen. I don't care for it now. But where did you find it?" gasped Janice.

"Find it? Why my aunt gave it to me for a present—"

But didn't you lose it?"

"Why, no. It has stood there for five years."

She hurried home and ran up third drawer of her little oak bureau. The green-checked apron lay folded smoothly on the top of the pile.

"The Lord be praised!" she cried. "I never touched that little white Ruth. It was all a miserable dream. If Hollis Webber should come with the harrow tonight, I'd ask him to supper, and we'd have warm gingerbread with whipped cream on it."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 22 (CP)—Scattered gains posted the gold mix in the industrial share lists at the close of today's two-hour session while the base metal and the western oil stocks showed practically no change. Trading was quiet and only about 125,000 shares changed hands.

Perron gold advanced to a new high for the year at 2.02, up 9 cents for the day. Little Long Lac added 5 cents and the market was slightly improved for Bend Malartic, Conlaurum, McKenzie, Kirkland Lake, Stadacona, Preston, Sullivan, Hayhob and some other penny issues. The long run was firm for the senior golds.

Aluminis continued the advance launched on Thursday, the common going to 1.10, up 15 cents and the preferred to 7.50 7-8, up 5-8. Other papers were firm to strong and prices were higher for the utilities, steels, foods and building shares.. C.P.R. was in demand at an advance of 1-2. Abitibi common added 3-4 and Ford A and Brazilian were up minor fractions. Bendix olib showed practically no change and in the foods Laura Secord and Maple Leaf Pfd. were among the strong spots. Building Products gained 1-2.

Senior base metal issues held steady, Falconbridge and Noranda were up and Ventures lower, Eldorado and the other silvers held steady.

The western oil share market was dull. Home firmed 3 cents and Anglo-Canadian, Calgary-Edmonton and East Crest came out at unchanged prices.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 22.—(AP)—The stock market took another rallying stride today, and, despite late profit-selling, closing issues retained gains running to around 2 points.

Volume picked up appreciably on the enthusiasm Friday's rally, with transfers of approximately 800,000 shares for the two-hour proceeding being the best for a Saturday since April 8.

Steel and Motors, along with an assortment of Specialities, were out in front at the start, but virtually all departments gave a good account of themselves. A number of New Year's highs were in evidence at the close.

Domestic business optimism, brokers said, remained the prime speculative and investment stimulant.

Celanese, Bayuk Cigar, Brooklyn Union Gas and American Airlines made new tops and strength was shown by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Great Northern, Anaconda, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Standard Oil of N. J., and Johns-Manville.

GRAIN ELEVATORS TO HANDLE CROP

Capacity, However, Will be Taxed With Bumper Crop at Large Country

Ottawa, July 22—(CP)—A near-record carryover of wheat combined with a bumper 1939 crop may tax the capacity of Canada's grain elevators this autumn but officials here are showing no alarm over the prospects.

Bigger crops have been handled without difficulty, they point out, if this is likely to be the biggest crop yet sold on the world board at a price substantially above the market level.

The capacity of the country's 5,622 elevators is 422,000,000 bushels. This year's crop is generally estimated at about 400,000,000 bushels, although many things can happen to it between now and harvest. The carryover from the 1938-39 crop year is expected to be about 100,000,000 bushels.

At the end of last week Canadian elevators had 92,046,000 bushels of wheat in store, compared to only 22,645,000 at the same time last year.

Greatest Crop in 1928

The greatest amount of wheat ever handled in Canada was the all-time record production of 568,000,000 bushels in 1928 combined with a carryover from 1927-28 of 77,000,000 bushels, or a total of 643,000,000 bushels which passed through the country's elevators. Of that amount 104,000,000 bushels were carried over at July 31, 1929.

While this year's prospects for a crop that large are remote the total is considerably less than that year, a new factor which has to be considered is that western growers may sell their grain to the wheat board and immediately receive an initial price based on 70 cents or No. 1 northern at Fort William, about 17 cents above the present market price at Winnipeg.

In an eagerness to cash in on their crop, farmers might theoretically all deliver their wheat to the Board at the same time as soon as it is harvested.

However, this situation is unlikely to happen, although deliveries are always heaviest during the three months preceding the close of navigation on the Great Lakes in early December.

TAX BILLS NOW BEING SENT OUT

"Tax bills are now being sent out from the city hall, and an examination of the bills shows that taxrate this year is again one mill low, or than last year. This added to the three and one half mill reduction the year before makes a total reduction of four and one half mills", commented Mayor Jamieson Bone this morning.

"Taxpayers will also find the taxes for local improvements this year are also materially down".

ELECTION PLANS IN FORMATIVE STAGE

No information or intimation has been received by local Liberals regarding any probable date of the Federal election, it was stated this morning, and as yet no plans or preparations have been made.

In Toronto yesterday it was work for the general election which is tentatively scheduled for the week of October 16th is already underway, it is reported.

"It looks as if an election will be held this fall though that will probably depend upon the European situation", stated a leading member of the executive. "Things over there will probably come to a head by the end of September by the latest.

Mr. Sexsmith was a member of the Federal House for 10 years.

GAELIC COLLEGE IN LOG CABIN

Premier Macdonald of Nova Scotia Will Officiate at Opening

St. Ann's, N.S., July 22 (CP)—A log cabin, built to house the first Gaelic college in North America, stood complete in the Cape Breton Highland village today.

Descendants of Scottish pioneers who came here more than a century ago put the finishing touches on the building yesterday when they placed on its door an old-fashioned string latch.

Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, Nova Scotia's Gaelic-speaking premier, will pull the latch string for the first time at a ceremony next Wednesday when the college will be formally opened.

Conceived by members of the Cape Breton Gaelic foundation seeking to preserve the ancient language and customs of the Celts, the college will offer instruction in Gaelic.

The cabin was built from spruce logs felled on land settled by Rev. Norman MacLeod and his band of Scottish followers. Early in the last century the Highland preacher brought his flock to this country when Scottish landlords banished them from the estates where they lived.

TANK IS DRAWN BY TEAM THRU FENCE TO PUT OUT FIRE

Wallaceburg, Ont., July 22 (CP)—When water supplies were needed for a volunteer bucket brigade fighting a fire at the farm of William Richmond, Jr., in Chatham Gore Township yesterday, Carson Richmond driving a team of horses attached to a water tank, put them right through a wire fence with the heavily loaded vehicle. Several lines were made over the same route to keep the men supplied with water.

The fire occurred at the farm during threshing operations and was caused by a spark that came from the blower of Fraser Turner's threshing outfit. The loss, approximately $5,000, includes a large barn, with stocked grain and implements shed. Several members of the volunteer bucket brigade suffered burns on arms and hands.

BUCKMAN SPEAKS ON 'GUIDANCE OR GUNS'

Monterey, Calif., July 22—(AP)—Dr. Frank Buckman called for the establishment of a new world order based on an understanding among rich man and class into class as the "second world assembly for moral rearmament" entered the second day' today of its four days meeting.

The founder of the Oxford Group addressed more than 1,000 members last night on the topic, "Guidance or Guns." The meeting was closed to the public.

DUCKS MUST KNOW GAME LAWS BY HEART

Wild ducks of this district must know how the game laws by heart or keep close track of the season by calendar, observes Wilfred Bosquet, local commercial fisherman.

Lately the ducks have returned to the bay in numbers, the resident of Deseronto district in heavy numbers, reports the fisherman. Numbers so heavy that they threaten to impede the passage of a boat through their flocks.

Yet, will they budge or move from the path of the boat? They do not, he reports but grudgingly and half heartedly, moving only the space of an arm length or so to let the boat pass.

Yet, just as soon as the duck shooting season starts they will be as scary as wild hares. You won't be able to get near them, even if you don't intend them any harm. Just now they can almost pick them out of the water by hand reports the fisherman.

SUDBURY WANTS TO CHANGE NAME OF BERLIN STREET

Sudbury, Ont., July 22 (CP)—The situation in Europe being what it is, residents of Sudbury think perhaps the movement to have Berlin avenue changed to Kitchener avenue may meet with some measure of success. The move failed just after the Great War and now it is before the city council for approval.

REINDEER TREK IS RECALLED

Arthur J. Baldwin, Backer of Reindeer Corporation, Dies

Edmonton, July 22 (CP)—Death in Enid Orange, N.J., yesterday of Arthur J. Baldwin, one of the backers of the Lomen Reindeer Corporation, recalled an epic reindeer trek across the north.

Herding of 2,000 reindeer from Western Alaska to a pasture near Aklavik at the mouth of the Mackenzie River for the Canadian Government was regarded by many students of Arctic lore as one of the greatest sagas of the Northland.

In 1929 the Lomen Reindeer Corporation and the Reindeer to the Dominion Government and agreed to deliver them at the preserve near Aklavik.

5 Years to Reach Destination

On Christmas Day, 1929, the herd was started on its trek—expected to be finished in six months. But it was five years before the herd reached its destination.

The late Andrew Bahr of Seattle, Field Superintendent for the Lomen Corporation, was in charge of the herders. Some families spent the whole five years with the herd and several children were born.

The reindeer were driven along the rugged Arctic Coast, through wolf packs and fierce Arctic storms. Sometimes storms scattered the herd and it was weeks before the animals were collected and the trek could be resumed.

Few of Original Herd

Finally Bahr delivered 2,300 reindeer but there were few of the original herd. Many had died or had been killed by wolves but a great number were born during the trek.

Bahr said that Natalone were out 3,000 pairs of mukluks, Arctic footwear, during the trek.

Egg Scarcity Sends Produce Higher

Continued scarcity of eggs on the local market yesterday boosted top-grades to still higher price levels, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Country shipments during the past two days evidently have been diverted to Montreal in view of the better prices prevailing on the market.

Meanwhile, as producers sent their eggs to Montreal instead of Toronto, the Toronto market grew in strength, prices yesterday reaching a range of 24c to 24½c for grade A-large eggs in the graded section. A strong demand was reported for upper grades. Grade A-medium eggs in the graded group were selling at 22c to 22½c, while in the ungraded section, grade A-large advanced to 22c and grade A-medium to 20c. Prices to retailers followed suit, with grade A-large selling at 27c and grade A-medium at 26c, up to five from Thursday's quotations.

Butter prices were unchanged on a quiet market. Trading was spotty but sufficient to keep receipts moving. Offerings were light, which tightened the supply situation and served as a steadying influence on the market. Buyers showed little interest. A few sales of western butter were reported at 22c, and one at 22¼c.

Montreal Eggs Up.

Montreal, July 22 (CP)—Cheese weakened about ½ of a cent, while eggs strengthened about ¼ on open produce markets, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Quebec new crop potatoes firmed a little, but N.B. and Maine and P.E.I. 75's were unchanged. Creamery butter prints solids lost ¼, while Quebec No. 1 pasteurized added ¼.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 23½-24 cents a pound and solids for 22-22½ cents. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21¾ cents. Receipts: 501 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 25¼-26 cents a dozen for A-large, 23¼-24 for A-medium, 18 for B-large, 14½-15 for C. Receipts: 318 cases.

Potatoes—N.B. and Maine No. 1's Mtz. 75's 1.30-1.35; P.E.I. No. 1 Mtz. 75's 1.35-1.40; Quebec new crop 75's 90-1.15.

BRITISH GOV'T TAKES 'REALIST' VIEW IN ORIENT

Premier Denies Proposal Considered for German Loan

Hudson's Talk With Dr. Wohlthat Quite Unofficial

Prime Minister Chamberlain Tells House There is No Proposal for German Loan Under Consideration

CABINET UNINFORMED

Chamberlain Also Discloses the Government Has No Intention of Initiating Discussion of Appeasement

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 24—(CP Cable)—The British government has no intention of making a loan to Germany or of taking any action which might look like bribery to buy peace, Prime Minister Chamberlain today assured the House of Commons.

Questioned about rumors that Robert Hudson, Secretary for Overseas Trade, and Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, German trade expert, had discussed a scheme to lend Germany as high as a reported £1,000,000,000, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"The cabinet knew nothing about these conversations nor did any other Minister other than the Minister concerned."

Arthur Greenwood, Deputy Leader of the Labor party who earlier in the day had warned against flirting with the idea of appeasement, said and asked:

"Can we take it....that there is no intention on the part of the government now to begin discussions

Why the Weather!

Air pilots! Sailors, farmers and air pilots are among the professional classes who use their weather lore constantly in their work, and many of them are good meteorologists. A knowledge of weather is essential to the air pilot; he is more "on his own" than the ocean captain who can, in case of a bad storm, throw out an extra anchor and "let her ride". The airplane pilot of weather information should begin before he touches the "stick". He should know, and they do know, enough about the weather to discuss with the professional meteorologist the present and future weather along the line of a proposed flight. What means he must know the structure of the atmosphere, the mechanics of storms and how to judge the present weather appearances.

Canadian Army 'Pitifully Weak' Says Col. Drew

Brantford, Ont., July 24—(CP)—Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, told a Conservative picnic gathering in Mohawk on Saturday night that the Canadian army is "pitifully weak" and that Canadian militia equipment is "hopelessly obsolete."

Speaking at the Rally under the auspices of the Brantford and Brant Conservative Associations, Col. Drew contended the Canadian army was weaker, in proportion to those of foreign powers, than at any time in the history of the country. He charged Canadian armament contracts were being let for political reasons and to the advantage of "profiteering friends" of the government.

"We have the right to insist that the money, if it has to be spent, shall be spent properly and not for the benefit of profiteer friends of the Government," he said.

Chairman Manion of Propaganda Goebbels is an amateur compared to Hon. Ian MacKenzie (Federal Minister of National Defence)" Col. Drew said. He charged that reports emanating from the Department of National Defence were "misleading" and give false reassurance.

Canadian army rifles are of "Great War vintage" and lack of ammunition in Militia districts is due to lack of efficient steps to have Canadian requirements in this respect met by Canadian workmen, Col. Drew contended.

TEST HOLES SUNK NEAR FRANKFORD

Surveyors Stake Out Property, Checking Boundaries of Options of Land

Forerunner of what is thought to be actual excavation operations, test holes to ascertain the nature of the terrain on which buildings will be erected, were sunk this week by surveyors working for the Power Company's land near Frankford.

Residents there have been staking out property and checking boundaries of the land under option by the company.

With ons large shed already filled with machinery, a second "power room" will be needed to house the gas-engines when this is expected to arrive at the company's location this week by rail.

Hopper Outbreak Curbed by Poison

LONDON, Ont., July 24.—(CP)—Liberal use of poison has curbed a grasshopper outbreak in North Dorchester township and other parts of the County appears endangered, the District Office of the Ontario Department of Agriculture reported today.

Tobacco crops particularly were affected by the invasion. Ed. Varevack said he had poisoned millions of grasshoppers on his farm and more were destroyed when he ploughed up a portion of the farm.

Old-Time Religion Antidote To Social Evils Says Governor

Detroit, July 24.—(AP)—Old time religion, Governor Murphy declared, believes in the best possible antidote to the social evils he has described publicly on several occasions since attending the national conference of Governors.

"A return to the old time religion with its wholesome principles of daily life," the octogenarian told more than 1,000 persons last night at a union church service in suburban Royal Oak.

"There is anything that can't be solved by old time religion? Has it ever been tried?" he asked. "Churches nowadays spend too much money trying to draw a congregation. The old time religion would bring the people back to the church."

Chairman said some newspapers in reporting his condemnation of drinking at the meeting of Governors, referred to alcohol as what he termed "my pipeline to God." He went on to explain:

"There is no place on God's earth where there is no connection to God, and that's what I mean by the pipeline. I can make a connection through the pipeline to God any time I want to. I am on the pipeline now, and I won't give up an inch."

This last remark was taken to mean that he wouldn't recede from his assertions that "high life" created a "hellish brink" over which young women could easily fall.

COUPLES START SERIOUS BUSINESS KEEPING HOUSE

105 Couples Married in Mass Ceremony in Montreal Stadium Sunday

NUPTIAL MASS

Crucifix and Rosary Presented to Each Groom and Each Bride

Montreal, July 24—(CP)—While Montreal talked of the first mass marriage in its 297-year history, 210 young French-Canadians began today to test that theory about the ability of two to live as cheaply as one.

Married yesterday before 20,000 persons in Montreal Stadium, the 105 couples went after the ceremony to a picnic at nearby St. Helen's Island, attended a labor pageant last night in the stadium and then started the serious business of keeping house. Most will defer honeymoons for at least a month.

They were among the estimated 200 persons who collapsed at the stadium because of the strenuous activities of the day.

HEAT WAVE OVER EASTERN CANADA

Toronto, July 24—(CP)— Heat drifting in from central United States today brought a heat wave to central and eastern Canada, the Dominion Meteorological Bureau reported today.

Temperatures moved into the high 80s in Ontario and Bureau officials forecast similar marks during the next few days.

BRITISH GUNBOAT DISPATCHED TO PORT OF TANGKU

Action Emphasizes Unrest Behind China's Battle lines

PROPERTY DAMAGED

Shanghai, July 24—(AP)— Dispatch of a British gunboat to a new North China trouble spot — Tangku, Tientsin deep-water port—and the posting of a machine-gun guard against Shanghai terrorists today emphasized the unrest behind China's battlelines.

H.M.S. Sandwich moved down the Hai River from Tientsin to Tangku, about 25 miles away, to back up an investigation of an anti-British riot yesterday in which 700 frenzied coolies damaged the property of a British shipping concern.

300 Overcome by Heat And Exertion During Mass Marriage Rites

Police estimated that at least 300 were stricken during ceremonies in the stadium but only 70 were taken to hospital where all but the eight were released after treatment. The eight—all girls—were just too weary to go home, authorities said.

Described by Miss Aline Landriault, Superintendent of No. 57 nursing division of the St. John Ambulance Brigade as "the worst I have ever experienced," the mass prostrations came during ceremonies in the stadium climaxing a day in which the city's first mass marriage took place.

Fourteen 20,000 persons yesterday morning, 105 young French Canadian couples were married simultaneously. Authorities said none of the couples suffered illness although they joined in the stadium parade at night.

CANADA'S LIST VIOLENT DEATHS SET AT SEVENTEEN

List is Topped by Four Fatalities in the Sudbury District

KILLED BY PROPELLER

By The Canadian Press

Topped by Sudbury's four fatalities, this week's total of violent deaths stood at 17 today. Of six drownings in Canadian waters, two were in the Sudbury district. Six died of injuries resulting from highway accidents, two were killed in railway mishaps and one man was almost decapitated by an airplane propeller.

Six of the fatalities were in Quebec, three in Western Ontario, two in the Ottawa area, one at Toronto and one in Alberta.

Joseph Paquette, 38, and Patrick Quilty, 35, Sudbury, were killed Sunday night at Fairbanks Lake, 22 miles from Sudbury, Luke Pauglo, 50, Sudbury. Canadian National Railways brakeman, and Joseph Gauthier died in hospital after being run over by a train.

The fourth fatality in that district occurred when Milton McEvoy, 25, Sudbury, died in hospital of head injuries suffered when he walked into a revolving airplane propeller.

In Ottawa Thomas Dolley, 62, a lumber worker in Northern Ontario and Quebec for years, died from injuries suffered in colliding with an automobile on the street.

BIGGEST TOBACCO CROP IN ONTARIO IN THE MAKING

Cash Revenue to the Growers in Eight Counties May Total $22,000,000

4,000 GROWERS

By ROBERT K. TAYLOR

Ontario's biggest tobacco crop was in the making today in the eight counties that constitute Ontario's tobacco belt.

Cash revenue to growers may soar to the $20,000,000 mark, a new high in the record-making progress of this industry. A survey by The Canadian Press of growers and government sources indicated acreage for 1939 had topped the 77,000-acre mark for the first time.

Approximately 4,000 growers in this industry which has grown 200 per cent in the past nine years although every other major division of Ontario agriculture has seen the acreage cut, nearly one-third, since the turn of $22,329,000.

Growers prescribed warmth and rain as "must" medicins for the tobacco crop now vitally in weather danger but the season produced uneven growth. Harvesting difficulties were forecast this fall unless dame nature deals more kindly with the crop during the next few weeks.

Crops Damaged In Torrential Rainstorm

ROADS WASHED OUT

Toronto, July 23—(CP)— Many Central Ontario farmers surveyed their farm lands with mixed emotions today, following a storm which brought rain, hail and lightning.

While thousands of dollars of damage was estimated by Toronto area farmers, many saw their crops flattened in yesterday's storm, only a few miles distant, as torrential downpours considered the rain as of indifferent value.

The violent storm which struck in a narrow path at Toronto, left a trail of destruction. Grain and vegetable crops were ruined, barns were burned, windows smashed and roads washed out.

Grains Flattened

In one of the richest grain belts in Southern Ontario, thousands of bushels of wheat, barley and oats were flattened. Harvesting of many of the destroyed crops would have started this week.

Grains flattened in the Hamilton area said the hail did no damage.

Japan Sees Belligerent Rights Granted by Agreement

'Sweeping Victory' for Tokyo Claimed

Tokyo, July 24 (CP)—Great Britain's recognition of Japan's "special circumstances" in China was hailed here today as practically granting Japan belligerent rights in the Japanese-Chinese war.

Today was the interpretation of Japanese informants who described the new Anglo-Japanese formula as "a sweeping diplomatic victory" for Japan.

(Prime Minister Chamberlain in London said the British government did not consider Japan's special requirements for "maintaining public order" in certain parts of China, declared that it meant de facto recognition of Japan's sovereignty over any Chinese territory or any change in British policy regarding China and declared that negotiations on the Tientsin dispute would be confined to local issues.

MADMAN KILLS SECOND STEWARD ON OIL TANKER

Attacks Oiler Coming Into Galley but Leaves Room and Jumps Overboard

PLANE IS USED

Victims of Attack, one Dead the Other Injured, Brought to Hospital

MADMAN
By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, July 24—(AP)— The tanker Dungannon steamed through the morning mists off Cape Hatteras, and the second steward busied himself about the cabin preparatory to a crouching figure at the door.

Turning from the ice box with a side of beef, the steward was confronted by the second pumpman, in a fit of murderous frenzy, wielding a sledge hammer....

The assailant raised the hammer and crashed it down on the steward's skull—once, twice....s down times....

Into the galley stepped an oiler from the night watch, intent on his morning coffee....The crazed man leapt on him. The hammer thrashed through the air again. Then the madman raced out onto the deck and plunged overboard, pursued by a dozen shouting crew members.

That was the story of a coast-guard seaplane, which flew from Cape May, N.J., to the Diamond Shoals off Norfolk, Va., to pick up the survivors brought back yesterday from the tanker Dungannon.

The details have been a tale from Joseph Conrad—only the plane brought back to the Norfolk Marine Hospital the bodies of victims, one dead, the other severely injured.

The dead man was Jens Orieon, 27, the steward. The other was Robert J. Dean, 24, oiler.

Meanwhile the Dungannon, out of Port Arthur, Tex., steamed up the Atlantic coast today, bound for Providence, R.I. Manacled in its cabin, confined under guard with officers and British nationals in China that they should refrain from such acts and measures."

Mr. Chamberlain, before reading the text, said that at the outset of the Tokyo discussions which began July 12 Japanese government expressed the view that if progress was to be made in removing misunderstandings and establishing better relations it was essential to recognize the circumstances under which the Tientsin situation should be reviewed.

This had nothing to do with Britain's policy in China, he said, but was a question of fact.

The Prime Minister said it was a fact that hostilities and military proceeding in China and that the Japanese army had to provide for its own security as well as public order, and therefore was obliged to take action to see that these causes were not predicated.

Ten Years Ago Kellogg Peace Pact Designed to End War Proclaimed

By ANDRUE BERDING
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, July 24—(AP)—Ten years ago today President Herbert Hoover proclaimed the Kellogg Pact designed to end war by outlawing it.

Beside the President stood Henry Stimson, Secretary of State, and his predecessor, Frank B. Kellogg who had helped write the pact. Behind them were Vice President Calvin Coolidge and the Diplomatic representatives of 43 nations.

Then in Spain, Germany has accelerated its long preparations for a national broadcast of the ceremony. They were removed for a moment while pictures were being taken.

Mr. Hoover, forgetting the absence of the microphones, began reading his speech. The text for which a nation was waiting died on the air with the first words.

Announcers snatched up copies of the proclamation and hastily began reading it into the microphones. What had been intended to be a dignified broadcast was a confusion.

And what had been intended to be an era of peace has become, 10 years later, an era of war and war threats, international uncertainty and tension. Frank B. Kellogg and his predecessor, Calvin Coolidge, are little Roland of France, are dead.

But the ideals for which they died continents—Japan against China, Italy against Ethiopia and the civil war in Spain. Germany has acquired large additions to her territory.

Through the stirring events of recent months, the pact itself has been emblazoned in silence. Only in the hopes of a new statesman does the Kellogg Pact now appear as an instrument that eventually may come to the fore. No nation, what-ever its acts, has denounced the pact.

Agreement Says Jap Army Must Preserve Security

Prime Minister Chamberlain Denies This Means De Facto Recognition by British of Japanese Sovereignty in Controlled Areas in China

PREMIER QUIZZED

British Government Has No Intention of Countenancing Acts or Measures Prejudicial to Attainment of Japanese Army Safeguarding Own Security and Maintaining Public Order

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 24—(CP Cable)— The British government has agreed that Japanese military forces in China must safeguard their own security and maintain public order in regions under their control, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today.

The agreement, reached in Tokyo last Friday after preliminary talks between Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita of Japan and British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie, is the basis for negotiations now going on regarding the Tientsin dispute.

Text of Agreement

The text follows:

"His Majesty's government in the United Kingdom now recognize the actual situation in China where hostilities on a large scale are in progress and note that as long as that state of affairs continues to exist the Japanese forces in China have special requirements for the purpose of safeguarding their own security and maintaining public order in the regions under their control and that they have to suppress or remove any cause or thing there as will obstruct them or benefit their enemy.

"His Majesty's government have no intention of countenancing any acts or measures prejudicial to the attainment of the above-mentioned objects by the Japanese forces or to they will take this opportunity to confirm their policy in this respect by making it plain to all British authorities and British nationals in China that they should refrain from such acts and measures."

Mr. Chamberlain, before reading the text, said that at the outset of the Tokyo discussions which began July 12 Japanese government expressed the view that if progress was to be made in removing misunderstandings and establishing better relations it was essential to recognize the circumstances under which the Tientsin situation should be reviewed.

Women Aviators Grow Numerous

Washington, July 24—(AP)—Women aviators are nearly twice as numerous in the United States as they were 2 1-2 years ago.

The number of pilots' licences has jumped from 444 to 761 since February, 1937. In addition, there are 10 girl pilots in Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Alaska. The women fly big and light aircraft and are licensed to pilot gliders.

Most of them fly for fun, records at the civil aeronautics authority show. Although there are no women airline pilots at present, they have flown the 200 solo hours required to see that these courses were not predicated.

The oldest woman pilot recorded is Edith Clark, 61, of Porterville, Calif., who has flown more than 200 hours since she got her first licence at 55. Six are 17 years old and 16 ar 18.

DESERONTO STATION BEING TORN DOWN

Workmen are engaged at the present time in tearing down the Canadian National Railway station in Deseronto. Since the elimination of passenger service through the town some years ago, the building has been idle with windows boarded up. No progress for the building otherwise opening up again has resulted in the offer made by the Mohawk Trains still run to and from Deseronto to Napanee in connection with freight service, but only bus lines are available for passengers.

BUSINESS SLOW AT GOVT. DOCK

Except for oil and gasoline ladings carried in by tankers of the larger companies, and consignments of package freight in and out of ports, business so far this year has been slow at the local government dock, it is reported by Harbormaster Alex Waddell. This season coal shipments into the city have been lighter than last season and the year previous, though some activity at this end is predicted before the end of the season. According to reports received locally, grain carriers on the lakes are commencing the first of the season's trips. Boats have been, and will have been light up to the present with low bushel prices into effect.

"MIKE" CAPTURES 2-POUND CARP

"Mike", diminutive wire-haired terrier owned by a Rosamore resident and pet of the neighborhood, earned the right to be known as one of the district's best fishermen on Saturday by capturing and landing alive a struggling eight-pound carp from the Bay of Quinte, a fish as heavy as himself.

Surprising the fish in shallow water sunning near the shore after a fifteen minute struggle on top and under the water during which time it was repeatedly dragged into deep water, the pup managed to subdue the carp and haul it high and dry.

DISTRICT ENTERS THIRD WEEK OF DRYNESS

While the district entered its third consecutive week of dryness and drought, reports from stations surrounding Belleville today indicated that it presented the driest situation one of the driest seasons on record. Veterans agriculturists, faithfully recording weather events for decades past, this week expressed the belief that this season was much drier than it has been for the past forty years.

In spite of the fact that pastures are burned and dry, and that in the latest and other war crops are suffering from the drought, not so much damage has been caused by the scarcity of rain as is reported in some sections. Through the Campbellford and Peterborough sections a particularly severe drought is said, while the district section fields are also burned and brown, it is stated by local agricultural officials.

TWO FINE 'LUNGE HOOKED IN HAY BAY

Mr. Orville Drummond, Brussels, Ontario, and his nephew, Arthur Gibson, Dundas Street, Belleville, were successful in landing two 'lunge on Saturday at Hay Bay, the one weighing 15 pounds and the other nearly twenty-one pounds and measuring 46 inches. The 'lunge were caught trolling with a Williams spoon.

SHORT-STALKED GRAIN PREVENT IN DISTRICT

Though short-stalked grain is reported from the north and south ends of the Belleville area, hay prices here will not be affected and should increased due to a shortage this summer, it was said by feed supply houses at the city today.

"Many of the farmers are carrying over a fairly heavy supply of hay this year, one of the best hay and clover years in many a season. Also, this year there has been no actual scarcity of growth of hay, though like the grain, it is of short stalk," stated one supply house.

FIRE THREATENS ROSSMORE HOMES

A tiny blaze believed to have been started from a lighted cigaret end thrown from a passing car licked rapidly through the dry grass of Rossmore area on Saturday, finally spreading into a dangerous fire that threatened frame houses in the community. While flames crested and raced through the fields around the homes, residents of the village equipped themselves with wet blankets and bags, finally emerging victorious but burned and blackened after a stiff fight. They were helped by several motorists who stopped passing cars and offered their aid.

LARGE COPPERS ARE IN DEMAND

Large Canadian one-cent pieces are in demand in the district in the country, and lately have been considerably in demand among tourists to the country as curios or souvenirs, it was stated by a local banking assistant this morning.

One tourist recently made the request of a city bank for two dollars worth of the old large coins to distribute among friends upon his return home.

MILITARY CAMPS OPEN AT BARRIEFIELD

Military camp for the militia units of Military District No. 3, comprising Barriefield area camp, will be opened on Saturday, July 24, it was announced by Lt.-Col. Wesley Atkinson, D.O. the district, in camp commandant. Among the local units which will be encamped in the Hastings Rifles Regiment, under Lt.-Col. Sherrold Young, Picton, as his first command. Major Howard Graham of Trenton will be second in command, and Percy Folgett of Belleville will be Company Sergeant Major.

NO BLAME ATTACHED TO CAR DRIVER

Colliding with a passing motor car in the village of Odessa yesterday, 61-year-old Annie Benn of that village sustained a severely lacerated lip as he was knocked off the bicycle he was riding. The elderly Mr. Benn was attended by Dr. Huntsville and later removed to the Kingston General Hospital.

The automobile with which the cyclist collided was driven by Rev. Wesley Atkinson of Belleville, Ohio. No blame was attached the motorist by Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine, who investigated the accident. Mr. Benn was coming out of a side street and collided with the fender of the passing car.

CONSTABLE MUFFITT GOES TO ARCTIC

Chosen as one of the postillions and attendants for their Majesties King and Queen during the Royal visit to Ottawa, Royal Canadian Mounted Police Constable Ted Muffitt, Coe Hill, left last week for Ottawa after spending three weeks in connection with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Muffitt, at the northern village.

Constable Muffitt who has already spent three years in the Arctic, leaves on August 2 for Churchill, Man., via Winnipeg and York Fort. He will embark on board the S. S. Nascopie, chartered by the Hon. the Hudson's Bay Company, for Craig Harbor, Ellesmere, Island.

Craig Harbor is inhabited by two families of Greenland Eskimoes. So Constable Moffitt, who with other members of the R.C.M.P. will be engaged in research work, and survey for the government, will not be bothered by crowds.

TOWNSHIPS MAY FORM NEW SCHOOL AREA

Voters of Monteagle and Herschel Townships will vote on the forming of township area schools at a special provincial election, if a by-law introduced at the last council meeting receives approval of council. In the event of a favorable decision, the by-law will not cause an election, it was stated by Reeve Joseph Davis.

Township school area will be presided by Inspector H. J. Clarke to the Hastings Inspectorate. At the first session, are divisions of a township in which the schools are located. The areas will be administered by a board of trustees comprised of one representative from each school. It is understood that special government grants will be made to townships forming such school areas within their confines.

MISS FRANCES MOLLOY WINS WARDEN'S MEDAL

Winner of the Warden of the County of Hastings Medal for the highest standing in the recent high school entrance examinations is Miss Frances Molloy, of Ormsby school. The successful young student is a pupil of Miss Gertrude Gunter.

NEW VERANDAH AND STEPS POSSIBILITY

Hastings County Home will be treated to a brand new verandah and steps if a recommendation to that effect passed by the Property Board of Hastings County Council at a special meeting to be held on Friday of this week.

Members of the Advisory Board, with an accompanying delegation from Madoc, will meet the Council on Friday last, and inspected the building with a view to put final decision to build was withheld until following the meeting called for this week.

TWELVE BLACK BASS WEIGHED 45 POUNDS

Marmora, July 24 (Special) — A nice string of bass twelve in number, weighing forty-five pounds, was caught by Yaro Cermack and Chas. Unger of Cleveland, O., in Crowe Lake on Saturday. They also got a 13-pound muskie and were very pleased with their day's fishing. Messrs. Cermack and Unger are guests at Tipperary House and have been coming to Crowe Lake every summer for the past eight years.

SAMPLE SWEET CLOVER IS 8-FEET HIGH

Farmers of the southern townships had better look to their hay-growing laurels. The other day a sample of sweet clover taller than seven feet fully matured, that measured 8-feet in height was taken from the farm owned by Henry Stringer of Port Stewart.

SPLENDID WORK DONE AT DEER LAKE HATCHERY

Deer Lake fish hatchery near Cordova has exceeded all expectations in numbers raising, according to H. H. McKay of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries. Mr. McKay predicted in his address to Toronto Kiwanians on Saturday a great increase in the game fish population of the lakes of Hastings and other county districts. One thousand muskinonge fingerlings have been recovered from the hatchery pens this year, 1,750,000 fry have been released, it was stated.

WEST LAKE FAVORED FISHING SPOT

West Lake in Prince Edward has become one of the more favored fishing spots, and the catches have been excellent lately. After a struggle lasting for nearly half an hour, Ken Aitchison of Westmoreland avenue, Toronto, managed to land a maskinonge in the lake, Saturday, July 15, and on Friday of last week. The fish, caught on a plug, was 52 inches long.

BRUIN TOPS OFF MEAL ON BERRIES LEFT

Perhaps these northern bears are not so tough after all. The other day when Mr. Stanley Hartley of Faraday Township was contiently picking berries, she heard a noise in the bush and looking up saw a friendly Bruin picking his share of the delicious fruit.

The bear showed no inclination to be nasty and was apparently satisfied at an equal division of the spoils.

Couple Touring Lakes In 12-Foot Canoe

In a home-built, twelve foot canvas canoe equipped with lateen sail and outboard motor and constructed at a cost of ten dollars, Frank Berchie and wife of Upper Montclair, New Jersey, are sailing the Great Lakes and are expected to visit Belleville early this week, en route to Trenton and Toronto.

Bronzed after an eventful twelve day trip from Oswego, Mr. Berchie and wife landed at Kingston on Saturday, bearing greetings to the many friends and citizens of Kingston from New Jersey.

Kingston they consider the first lap of their Canadian trip. Armed with letters of introduction from ex-Governor Hoffman of New Jersey to the mayors of Kingston, Trenton and Toronto, the travellers intend with the help of sail and motor to cruise through Lake Ontario on the Canadian side, through the Trent Canal to Georgian Bay and thence back through the Great Lakes to Oswego. The trip is planned as a good will tour, Mr. Berchie declared.

The canoe is his third attempt at boat building. The hit, consisting of fifty pounds of lifebells, cooking and camping equipment, and other necessities, is stowed completely around the captain and mate, leaving room only to lay the paddles. Mr. Berache is a teacher of mathematics in Upper Montclair.

Sleek Black Lamb Uses Cake, Coffee

'Miss Lusitania' is Gift to British Princesses

London, July 24 (CP Cable) — "Miss Lusitania," a sleek Canadian black lamb that eats cake, drinks coffee although only four months old arrived aboard the Athenia yesterday to visit Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose but would stay in the pets' corner of the Queen's Park Zoo.

"Miss Lusitania" a gift to the Princesses from Mrs. Rosa Brown, 80-year-old Great War widow of Kirkland Lake, Ont., landed at the Surrey quarantine docks and was taken to the Zoo in a truck where she was delivered in the name of the Princesses at the Queen Elizabeth.

The octogenarian war widow addressed the lamb to Buckingham Palace bearing a collar on which the name "Miss Lusitania" was inscribed and the words "I am a royal lamb." But the Queen believed the children's corner at the Zoo was a more appropriate place for her daughters' new pet.

BELVIDERE HOTEL NEWLY DECORATED

A colorful product of the master-craftsman's art, the Belvidere Hotel one of Front Street's popular hostelries is presenting a bright attractive appearance in its new summer apparel.

Large baskets of cut flowers enhance the blending hues of new cream shades of tan, walls in the lobby, and the white of freshly painted ceilings. The dark brown of the wainscoting forms a perfect background for the fresh greens of potted ferns that are placed at intervals in the homelike lobby.

Easy chairs, the acme of comfort, have been newly renovated while floors in an attractive coloring of mottled chocolate brown form a contrasting effect that adds to the whole of the general color scheme.

Upstairs, bedrooms have likewise undergone a magical transformation under the decorators hands. New furnishings have been installed and in general the entire scheme is one of change and comfort marks the hostelries in the city.

DIG IN SNOW FOR VICTIMS

Glacier, Wash., July 24 (AP)— Workers dug into the snow on the precipitous face of Mt. Baker today, in search for the bodies of four of six students trapped Saturday in an avalanche.

Bodies of two of the victims, Alice James and Julius Dohnbulut, have been recovered. The missing are Vera Fisher, Maynard Howat, Hope Weltman and Beulah Lindbergh.

Members of the searching party, who returned last night to Glacier from the foot of the mountain to rest after an all-day search, were without hope of finding any of the missing alive.

GORDON STEWART GIVEN 2 YEARS

Muskoka Engineer Convicted of Fraud in Local Police Court

Gordon Stewart, Muskoka engineer, who was arrested in Belleville some time ago on a charge of fraud, that a man was victimizing householders by representing himself as a civil engineer, collecting money and lodging and later money by false pretenses, today was sentenced to two years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today, Stewart appeared in local police court facing four charges of obtaining money by false pretenses, to wit, fraud. A plea of guilty was accepted in each incident and consecutive sentences given in three of the cases.

Stewart was originally charged with obtaining $8.00 from Mrs. John Carter, of this city, and by subsequent investigation charges were tendered by allegedly victimized persons at Picton, Wellington and Bethel. In no case did any of the amounts exceed $7.00.

Crown Attorney J. C. Donnan, K.C., introduced Stewart's list of previous convictions, and the accused had pleaded guilty in the four charges and a second conviction was registered. One Belleville incident. The list of convictions Stewart's record, which covers over a dozen and including most every petty crime from vagrancy to forgery.

"I have charged this man with a second offence, that the law may be possible for the court to sentence him to a reformatory rather than the penitentiary," suggested Mr. Donnan.

His Worship took a more lenient stand and gave the accused two years definite in the penitentiary, six months on each of the three subsequent charges, to run concurrent.

Frank Runnals, Springbrook trapper under the influence of liquor after being convicted on a charge of reckless driving, his license was suspended for a month. The charge arose out of an accident during which Runnals' car was driven and collided with the North Front St. Bridge railing late June 20th and two were injured.

Obituary

N. B. DUFFIN

News of the death of N.B. Duffin, which occurred in Harvey, Illinois, on Saturday, July 22nd, after a brief attack, is contained in the South Bend, Indiana, Tribune.

The late Mr. Duffin is well remembered in Belleville where he was at one time publisher and owner of the Belleville Free Press, a well-known Liberal paper, and member of the famous Killiles Band and other Canadian musical orchestras and bands. He played with the Studebaker Band of South Bend for 18 years. He had lived for many years in the Middle West and leaves a wife, one daughter, Mrs. Marvel Duffin of Belleville, Mrs. Robert Sherman and Mrs. Mina Mitchell, both South Bend, Indianna and Mrs. Milo Kimball, Mishawaka, Indiana. Three sons, George and Archie Duffin of South Bend, and Frank Duffin of Palmerston, Ontario, and three sisters in Canada also survive.

His funeral was held from Harvey, Illinois, to the Greenwood Cemetery, Cassopolis, Michigan, with interment in Edwardsburg, Michigan, a state in which he had resided for many years.

SAMUEL G. DAFOE, Sr.

Tweed, July 24 (Special)—Mr. Samuel G. Dafoe, Sr., paried away at his home in Tweed on Monday evening at an advanced age following an illness of some duration. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon at 2 p.m. from his late residence. Rev. H. L. Morrison, B.A., pastor of Tweed United Church was in charge of the service.

LOST 36 HOURS FARMER IS FOUND

Bruce County Man Has Good Chance of Recovery Though Exhausted

Kincardine, Ont., July 24 (CP)— Lost for 36 hours in heavily-wooded Greenock swamp, 10 miles north of Port of the Bruce County town, 80-year-old Murdoch McKenzie, Kincardine township farmer, was found in an exhausted condition last night by search parties. He is considered to have a "good chance" of recovery.

McKenzie subsisted on wild berries and water as he wandered about the swamp after he had left entering the swamp Saturday morning.

McKenzie was found by a neighbor, Grant McKay, in a thicket a half-mile in the swamp. He was lying on the ground in a pool of water. In his aimless wanderings he had lost his hat and sweater and shoes and stockings. McKay was one of a party of 100 searchers.

MAN STARVING WHEN DISCOVERED
Trapper, Too Ill to Move from Cabin, is Flown to Hospital
Parry Sound, Ont., July 24 (CP)— Too'ill to move from his remote trappers cabin on Pickerel River, Thomas Teeples, 53, was starving to death when found Saturday by friends. He was flown to hospital here by O. Norman Irwin, Whitby pilot.
Teeples, who works with the Forestry Department during the summer and trap in fall and winter, was helpless from a stomach ailment which came on suddenly more than a week ago. On Monday his food ran out.
His nearest point of contact with civilization was the railway point of Marion, seven miles away. A party of friends found. him. They packsaded Irwin, who was on a fishing trip in Muskoka, to the lake plane into the nearest landing spot, Buck from Lake, about three quarters of a mile from the cabin.
Irwin assisted the sick man to the plane and brought him up the Georgian Bay shore to this town. His condition is reported to be "not critical."

BAPTISTS TOLD OF REPRESSIONS

World Alliance Meeting at Atlanta, Georgia, is Urged to Act

Atlanta, Ga., July 24 (AP)—Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke of London, Secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, appealed to the sixth Baptist World Congress today for definite action on "persecutions" in foreign countries — particularly Rumania and Russia.

"Among all evil omens of the past five years, the most menacing is the activity of secular and ecclesiastical powers in narrowing the bounds of human freedom. "In much less than half of the European continent does religious toleration today exist in fact."

In Rumania, the Secretary said, the Prime Minister "doubtless with the sympathy and support" of King Carol has ordered police to permit reopening of Baptist Churches. This is an uncertain freedom, however, he declared, because the Administrative Ordinance of June 14, 1938 "which ordered churches to be closed" was withdrawn.

Alliance messengers (delegates) were informed repression continues in Russia and that up to the present direct intervention there has been impossible.

"As to Asia," the report continued, "no feature of our time is as gravely alarming to the missionary enterprise as the multiplication of restrictions and demands in the emerging Japanese-controlled area."

Police Bluster

Minor investigations kept city police quite busy over the week-end. Several small motor accidents resulted with only fender and other such minor damage resulting.

Arthur Charleton, Bellevue, sustained a nasty bruised knee, head, when the car he was riding in was in collision at the intersection of Williams and Bridge Streets. Mr. Charleton was riding in a motor car driven by C. E. Hutchison, 86 Queen Street, while the other vehicle involved was driven by Herb Codling of the city. The matter of damages was amicably settled between the parties concerned. Other lesser accidents were brought to the attention of the police.

Morley Smith, 356 Front Street, reported the theft of a tire from off his parked motor car on Saturday night. The tire was being used as a spare, while the vehicle was left on a city parking lot.

George Wood, 32-year-old Tweed man, was arrested by Chief Hayes of that village over the week end and lodged in the county jail on a serious charge which authorities say implicates a teen-aged girl friend. Wood will appear in County Police Court at Tweed on Thursday. Tweed and Belleville police are seeking another Tweed man on a more serious charge, it was learned today.

While the family was absent attending church yesterday morning, burglars entered the home of Mrs. Nellie Morrison, Tweed, and after ransacking the premises stole some valuable papers.

Rev. A. L. Geen 90 Years of Age

Rev. A. L. Geen celebrated his ninetieth birthday on Saturday by attending business at his drug store on Front St. for a part of his advancing years. Mr. Geen professes a keen interest in every movement and every human activity.

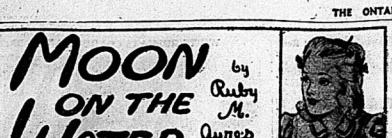
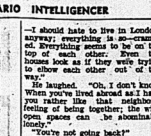
The FAMILY NEXT DOOR

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby M. Ayres





Jane had always been considered by her friends and scholarship one of the family until the never-to-be-forgotten morning when the news arrived that a little-known godmother had suddenly died, leaving her the sum of three thousand pounds.

Three thousand pounds.

It was Dulcie who first recovered sufficiently to gasp:

"But we haven't seen her for years and years!" And Mrs. Brookes who added blankly: "She can't even remember the child's impossible. And every time we looked at Jane, gawky and long-limbed at sixteen, with a mop of unruly hair and a freckled nose—who had hitherto been the thorn in every one's flesh because of her wilfulness and disobedience.

The morning sunlight, shining through the breakfast room window seemed all at once to adorn her with a halo of benevolence in which was oddly at variance with the unconcern of her expression as she said breezily:

"Well, at that time she did something; she's been no use as a godmother so far. Five shillings on her birthday, and half a crown at Christmas."

"I think my god-mother would die and leave me some money," Pamela said reverently.

Mr. Brookes leaned back in her chair rather helplessly.

"Three thousand pounds! . . . It's a lot of money," she said; and added as nobody spoke: "I have always looked upon godmothers as a whole—as just a little outside us."

Jane swallowed a sip of toast and added a slight qualification: "How soon can I have it, do you think?"

And again four pairs of feminine eyes turned to the head of the table in eager expectancy.

Mr. Brookes laid down the letter he had been carefully studying as if even yet he was not sure of its accuracy.

"The money is to be held in trust for you until you are twenty-one," he said.

Jane said, "Coo! what a shame! . . . But I suppose it will be worth a lot more by then," and Dulcie said: "You'll be an heiress," Dulcie said curiously.

"And people will try to marry you for your money," Pamela added.

There was a profound silence while every one tried to see ahead to the moment when Jane would would be of age and worthy of the respect and reverence which it seemed to her family.

Mr. Brookes glanced at his watch.

"Well, I must be off," he said casually. It was as if nothing in the least exciting had happened to disturb the routine of life. He pushed back his chair and rose, and his wife, dragging herself from her stupor, got up hastily to attend to the front door.

As soon as they departed the three girls all began to talk at once.

"Of course you'll give us some, Jane," Dulcie said.

"You are a lucky girl."

"What will you do with it all? Buy a motor car, I suppose."

Jane shrugged her thin shoulders.

"We may all be dead by then," she said cheerfully. "So what's the use of worrying? Come on, or we shall be late for school again."

Jane walked round the table to peer down at the typewritten letter which her father had left lying beside his plate.

"Five years is a frightfully long time," she said dolefully. "I think they might let me have a bit on account—say fifteen shillings would be useful."

"You'll get it when I'm twenty-one," Jane answered, and picked off for her hat and coat.

"Lucky cat!" Pamela murmured.

Mrs. Brookes came back from speeding her husband on his way.

"Jane ought to be made to divide it among all," Dulcie said. "It's not fair that she should have three thousand pounds all to herself."

"She hasn't got it yet," Pamela said with satisfaction. "Anything may happen before she is twenty-one."

"Darlings," their mother pleaded. "You'll be late for school." And she dutifully escorted her three daughters to the front door, mechanically watching them until they reached the gate, and sighing a little as she turned away.

It seemed odd, she thought, that Jane—like herself, the only child really, should have received this unexpected windfall.

Jane would so definitely make ducks and drakes of her legacy as soon as it came into her possession, whereas Dulcie would have spent it wisely, and Pamela—well, Pamela, even at seventeen, was saving and careful.

Mrs. Brookes had never ceased to marvel how it was that she should have brought into the world three daughters who were so totally unlike.

One after the other, with only eleven months between their births, they had all disappointed her hopes of a son and heir, and each time her disappointment had been a little keener, until in tomboyish, "different" Jane she imagined she could see many of the attributes of a son, and had dimly realized her own inability to cope with them.

Dulcie, the eldest, and the beauty of the family! Pamela, the clever "useful" one; and Jane—well all ready Jane had been removed "by request" from her first school and had never known what it meant to receive a prize or a good report.

Warmhearted, generous to a fault, an odd mixture of tenderness and philosophy, Mrs. Brookes never knew what to expect of her youngest-born, and had long since relinquished the idea of ever being able to "manage" her.

As she went about her household duties that morning Jane was very much in her mind, and between the ordering of meals, and of rearranging flowers little memories of the girl kept coming back to her, each one a message of goodwill to the other.

Jane, crying herself sick over the death of a beloved spaniel; Jane trying to be brave and stupid in every way about anything, because you couldn't alter life, no matter how you tried; Jane refusing to help to do her home-work, and then admitting with a sob what little difference that made to anything.

"I don't know—" she said helplessly. "But it seems to have made all the difference. I hate the thought—" she added.

But even the greatest sorrow cannot last for ever in the same overwhelming degree, and the world became a beautiful place once more in which to live, and life went on, and the spring came, and with it Gavin Monford to teach Jane the meaning of happiness.

Their paths converged one April evening when the last sunset rays were fading into a blue-black sky, and a faint breeze trembled overhead through the new green tendrils of the leaves.

Jane, driving home from town in the very second-hand car the girls shared, found it had come to a surprising standstill which her slight knowledge of mechanics failed to explain or to correct and she was standing forlornly by its open hood when Monford came walking up the road.

Either Pamela and Dulcie might have felt slightly dubious when he stopped to ask if he could render assistance, but Jane accepted unhesitatingly.

"It won't go," she said, in her clear voice.

He peered down at her through the dusk.

"I'll have a look," he said.

"I've got a torch," Jane informed him and produced one from her pocket. The man flashed a little light here and there, and presently he laughed.

"You've run out of gas," he said. "Oh, is that all!" Jane was indefinitely relieved. "It's such a very old bus that I was afraid it had given up the ghost once and for ever, and we shall never get another—at least, not until I'm twenty-one. . . . Thanking that one does not take complete strangers into one's confidence. But it was surprising how often of late the thought of her legacy came into her mind, and how much she had started to build upon it.

She gave a little start when the man standing beside her said. "I'll give you a lift home and fetch a garage."

"It's a long way," Jane said doubtfully.

"Is it? I don't know this part of the country at all."

"It's all of two miles," she explained. "Even if you take the short cut—" Then she added impulsively, "if you think the car will be all right here I'll go with you."

She could feel rather than see his amusement.

"Nobody can run away with the car, seeing there isn't any juice," he said. "I'll just shove it back a little, and we'll leave the lights on—there! . . . That's not in the way of traffic."

"Oh, thank you," she said gratefully, and without further argument they turned towards the little town.

"I know the short cuts," Jane said. "Through the woods and over the stream." She glanced up at him interestedly, realizing that he was several inches taller than she was, and that he walked with an easy swinging stride, and carried his hat in his hand. "This way," she said.

"I suppose you live in this Sleepy Hollow?" he asked.

"Yes. It's not such a bad place when you know it. I've lived here all my life. You live in London, of course."

He laughed. "Why, of course?"

"I don't know—except that somehow you seem to belong to it."

"As a matter of fact, I do — but I'm staying with relations for a week—the Binghams—perhaps you know them."

"Dr. Bingham? Oh, yes."

"He's my uncle."

"Really? We never heard him speak of you!"

"I've been abroad for the past five years."

"How interesting—isn't it?"

"Not particularly. I'd rather be in England."

"Dr. Bingham is our doctor."

"Oh, no—there is another, but he's rich and famous. He's always down a little. "This way across the stream. It's a plank bridge, so mind you don't fall in. There's a real bridge farther up, but it's much farther. I'll go first."

And suddenly she realized what a wonderful evening it was—with that cool breath of spring in the darkness which is surely personified, and the little lapping sound of the stream beneath their feet, and the gentle stirring of leaves overhead.

She sniffed the air with a strange feeling of ecstasy and a new joy of life, and then all at once she stood still with a little smothered exclamation of pleasure.

"Oh, look at the moon in the water—" And for the moment she quite forgot her sensitive superstition of the moon as she and Monford peered down into the softly-running stream in which the moon lay reflected like a pale ghost.

"It's beautiful," Jane said.

"I'm supposed to be unlucky to see new moon in the water," he answered.

Jane shivered a little. "I thought it was only unlucky to see it thru' glass," she objected.

"Through water too, I believe," he said absently, and then, "Are you superstitious?"

She nodded. "I am about the moon—and Friday before my mother died I saw it through glass, and when Easter died—"

"Dancer?"

"He was a spaniel—and I loved him." Her voice was an little defiant. "I am fond of dogs, too," he said. "Are you?"

"Yes, you would be," she added, as if to herself.

"What does that mean?" he asked.

"I don't know—except—well, I think you can always tell when some one likes the things you like yourself."

"What other things do you like especially?"

She grew expressive hands.

"Oh—heaps of things. Freedom and fun and amusement.

"Wide open spaces?" he suggested.

"Yes, I think so—fields and moors —I should hate to live in London, anyway; everything is so—cramped. Everything seems to be on the top of each other. Even the houses look as if they were trying to elbow each other out of the way."

He laughed. "Oh, I don't know. When you've lived abroad as I have you rather like that neighborly feeling of being together; the wide open spaces can be abominably lonely."

"You're not going back?"

"I hope not," he said, rather grimly.

"I hope not, too." Jane agreed unhesitatingly, and then, realizing that it was rather an unconventional thing to say, she stopped.

They walked some way in silence before Monford spoke again.

"This will probably not be our only meeting—as you know the Binghams."

"Probably not."

"My name is Monford— Gavin Monford—my mother was Dr. Bingham's sister."

"What an uncommon name. Mine is very ordinary — Jane, Jane Brookes."

"I like it," he said.

"Do you?" She was conscious of a little warmth round her heart. "I've two sisters; she informed him. "One of them—Dulcie—is away now—staying with people in London. But Pamela's at home. She's always at home—she loves pottering about a house, and ordering meals and other people's lives."

"I suppose she has to be ordered," he submitted in amusement.

"I suppose so," she agreed.

They could see the light of the town now, and Jane said, "We pass Dr. Bingham's house before we get into the garage, so there's no need for you to come any further — thank you very much."

"Is that a dismissal?"

"Oh, no, but—"

"I think I had better see you safely on your way again. And some one must carry the gasoline."

"Smith will take me back in his car."

"The garage man?"

"Yes."

They were passing the Bingham's house now, and Jane looked at it with a new interest. An old car standing at the junction of two roads, with a chauffeur in charge at the gate, the glow of which shone down on to a highly polished brass plate.

Jane had always thought the Binghams rather pretentious, and sometimes they gave entertainments which seemed to enjoy very much, and Mrs. Bingham was enthusiastic about good works which included the Sunday school treats, the hospital mother's meetings, Jumble sales, and all the things which Jane considered as "stuffy necessities," but this new acquaintance with Monford slightly disturbed her ideas. for surely the Binghams could not be quite so dull if such a man found it possible to stay with them.

"What do you do all day?" she asked suddenly.

He seemed to follow the trend of her thoughts.

"I only arrived yesterday."

"Oh! . . . there's not a great deal to do here unless you know every one, but of course you soon will. There's a tennis club and dances sometimes—not very exciting ones, though," she felt in duty bound to add.

He laughed. "I expect they are more exciting than the hops' I sometimes wept to in Canada. was the only-man with a dress suit at one of those dances. It's a pity he turns to play the piano—of course, we were right at the backwoods, and we thought nothing of riding twenty miles to attend a party."

"Not nearly so romantic," he assured her.

"And you're not going back?" she asked again, and he answered, "I've no choice, I'm afraid. I'm over here. Is-this the garage?"

"Yes," . And then as he moved a step ahead of her, she said quickly, "We got an account with Smith—he'll put the gas on the bill."

But Smith was not there, and neither was the car of which Jane had spoken, so presently they were trudging back again, Monford carrying a couple of cans of gasoline.

"Goodnight, and thank you very much."

"I'll wait till you are safely away—"

Jane got into the driver's seat, and he shut the door.

"Sure you'll be all right alone?" he asked.

She laughed merrily. "Goodness, anywhere alone."

"Goodnight, then—" And a moment later she was speeding homewards.

A lovely night she thought again, when presently she turned the old car into the garage, and inconsistently she was glad Pamela had quoted cane back to her:

"Now but the loving and beloved

Should be awake at this sweet hour—"

"Late as usual," Pamela said, when she walked into the house. "Where have you been?"

The car broke down—first—at least, I ran out of gas, and I had to walk back to the garage and get some."

"We didn't wait supper—"

"I'm not hungry." But she walked into the living room arranging her beret in one hand, and Pamela said:

Little Benny's Note Book

Today was pop's birthday and mother made a cake and she told him the 15 cent necktie I bought him at Winstine's three 5 and 10 cent store, saying. Here you are, pop, congradulations on your birthday.

Thanks for the tie, it shows great originality, but please do not congradulate me on my birthday. pop said. When I was learning and reading book forward to my three more teeth ater more hair my next birthday I didn't mind having them, in fact I welcomed them and wondered of missed one for the world, but it's different now, it's like a whole row of birthdays with pleasure and gratitude I'm not the only one, if somebody could invent a way of not growing a year older every year there'd be a fortune in it, so if anything along that line occurs to you, you better get it down. Why didn't you congradulate me on waking up without a toothache or twings in my right knee just when I was on the point of calling on the doctor for relief, trying him to say it was rheumatism? pop said.

Well O. pop, I didn't know it, I said, and pop said, Well, there may be something in that. But you might of congradulated me being the only man in my office to walk up 5 flies of stairs without puffing and hraving when the elevator decided a flat tire or something the other day, or you might of congratulated me on beating Meade Woodson at bowling for 3 straight evenings, a man 15 years my junior with muscles like iron bands, he said.

Well jimminy pop, I didn't know those either I said, and he said, Well then congradulate me on not going to have another birthday, for this maximum number of days that it's possible to have without a birthday, if you know anything about arithmetic you must know that.

Sure pop, congradulations, I said, and he said Thanks.

And he folded his paper and left for his office.

FINDS "FLU" SOURCE

Dr. R. E. Shope, of the Rockefeller Institute, is reported to have found the source of the earthworm swallow the eggs of some kind of worms that the larvae of these parasites develop in the earthworms and reenter the hogs when they eat the worms. Dr. Shope's discovery which of the present medical literature on influenza and infantile paralysis will have to be rewritten.

"I saved a dollar today"

It's a great satisfaction to look over the day's accounts and find you've been able to save money by careful buying.

Knowing WHERE to buy is part of the trick. But knowing HOW to buy is a bigger part. The wise "business manager" of the home plans her shopping as skilfully as a business man plans to spend a thousand dollars.

Advertisements help greatly, of course. On daily necessities like meats, fruits, vegetables, they show you how to save 2c here, 3c there, adding up to much. But advertisements are just as helpful on larger purchases—furniture, draperies, motor cars, clothing. Followed carefully, advertising saves you money all down the line . . . helps you run the household more economically . . . gives the budget a chance to breathe.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE EMIGRE PROBLEM

"Nothing in modern history quite parallels the cool effrontery of the present Government of Germany in expecting the 'effete' democracies to find a refuge for hundreds of thousands of German citizens, first robbed of their possessions and then cast out of the homeland for no reason except that the Nazi don't like them. The post-war world is darkened by the despair of emigres, but these Germans are not like the 2,000,000 Russians who fled the Bolshevik revolution or from the other victims of war, civil up-heaval, shifted boundaries or exchange of populations, whose tragic odysseys are sketched with terrible matter-of-factness in the recently published report on "The Refugee Problem" by Sir John Hope Simpson."

So says the New York Times citing the fact that German exiles do not belong to one class or political party, to any opposition movement and pointing out that a large proportion of them are ejected on a trumped-up 'principle' which Hitler himself cynically discarded when he incorporated in the 'All-German Reich' nearly ten million Slavs. One he forces out and the other he forces in.

But the Times sees the problem for the world as not how to deal with the insolent assumptions of a fanatical government, but the test is the test of civilization itself. The problem is one beyond a creed. "It is not a Jewish or a Gentile problem," the paper says. "It does not belong to Europe or America. It is the problem of mankind.. The problem goes deeper than humanitarian feelings, stirred to the depths by the spectacle of human cargoes loaded on tramp ships and shunted from one closed port to another."

The Times refers to the work of the international committee and the suggestion that supplementary funds be provided for the task of facing this problem and then says: "If we cannot find 'living room' for these innocent outcasts of the Third Reich in a world still dominated by democratic powers, how long will there be living room for freedom?"

GROWTH IN TRADE

Canada's trade increase for the months of April and May was the greatest of all nations. Canada is one of the great trading powers of the world. But then Canada belongs to that group of nations who have been first in commerce.

What an outlook this presents to Canadians for the future! When the nations come to a peaceful footing, a trade footing, and when armaments take second place instead of the first place, then the world will take a leap forward in prosperity, observers believe, which will rival all previous progress. Even the speeding up of armaments by the democratic powers may be bringing that day nearer with every ounce of wealth poured out to prevent war.

In this progress-to-be Canada will occupy the attention of the world's eye. Europeans are looking to this northern half of the Continent of North America as offering the greatest opportunity and security for development of industry and safety of firesides under democracy.

In looking to Canada, the nations of the older world look with hope and faith. Here lies the Dominion's opportunity. For Canada is no mere name to the world, but it is on the highway of trade, the new trade made possible by modern means of transportation.

Canadians and other British people have never lost heart in their future. They faced the trials of the depression which began in 1929 with hope while many lands went in despair.

By Providence and by the destiny of nations Canada has the greatest of futures in her grasp—a great opportunity to serve the world and to advance herself.

Meditation is the tongue of the soul and the language of our spirit; and our wanderings thoughts in prayer are but the neglects of meditation and recessions from that duty; according as we neglect meditation, so are our prayers imperfect—meditation being the soul of prayer and the intention of our spirit.—Jeremy Taylor.

A man finds in the productions of nature, an inexhaustible stock of material on which he can employ himself, without any temptations to envy or malevolence and had always a certain prospect of discovering new reasons for adoring the Sovereign author of the universe.—Johnson.

MELODIOUS MATTY

The program for this year's vacation
Turned out to be an operation.
Just when I started for the train,
I fell down with an awful pain . . .
A crowd, a cop, an ambulance—
A doc who took a hasty glance
And told some nurses what to do.
Then, pretty quick, when I came to,
I knew from where my hide was patched
That my appendix had been snatched.

I planned a boating trip. Instead,
I spent the time laid up in bed.
I slept, I rested and I read—
With nurses answering the bell.
And one of them was really swell.
The night I had an awful fever,
I told her I would never leave her;
But just as soon as I could stir,
I'd ditch my girl and marry her.
She surely was a lovely dame.
Dammit! I have forgot her name.

VACATION DAYS BRING PLEASANT THOUGHTS, charitable thoughts—feelings that God's in His Heaven and all's well with the world, gratitude that all's well as it is with us and desire to help others. Spare a thought or two to the crippled children whose thoughts are possibly of the day near or far in the future when the touch of the medical science will heal their infirmities, and they will laugh, and leap, and enjoy to the full all the blessings which a good God can bestow. Belleville Rotary Club is doing a fine job helping the crippled children back to health and deserve every support. That's the reason for the speed boat regatta and old-fashioned basket picnic at Massassaga Park, Civic Holiday. That's the reason that beautiful $600 pleasure boat is being shown—Some friend of crippled children is going to invest twenty-five cents and become the owner of that beautiful pleasure boat which carries promise of many happy outings, far from the dust and turmoil of busy city street and crowded highways. No easier way of helping some crippled child could be found than the investment of twenty-five cents with the young ladies, bosun and crew, of the good ship Lady Lou, or whatever you wish to call her—all ships being hers, of course.

A MUSICAL ORGANIZATION HAS SPRUNG UP IN OUR MIDST, figuratively speaking, which should promote civic pride. The band of the Royal Air Force, consisting of sixty members. This fine band played before the King and Queen on their recent visit to Ontario and is now recognized as among the outstanding bands of the Dominion.

AN OUTSTANDING ILLUSTRATION OF HIGH PRESSURE AND SUCCESSFUL SALESMANSHIP was shown at the Cole Bros. Circus in connection with the sale of delicate candy boxes. The salesmen passed among the reserved seaters, and also the bleachers, while Jack Ryan, high pressure salesman extraordinary, armed with a mike, directed the efforts from his observation post and whetted the interest and acquisitiveness of prospective buyers by describing treasure-trove found by buyers, more or less mythical, and holding out promise of more treasure buried in the prize candy boxes. What a mountain of candy that boy Jack Ryan sure sells at every performance, and all who heard him will hand him the prize for a top-notcher high pressure salesman.

LIFE IN THE Arctic Circle is not a jolly round bowl of cherries, but no doubt the people who live there 'round get sort of used to it and some sort of satisfaction in the lonely life they perforce must live. This is recalled by recent departure of the Government steamer Nascopie from Montreal with a cargo consisting of annual supplies for Hudson Bay posts, and Mounted Police outposts, besides missionaries, trappers, etc. The Nascopie is eagerly looked for by those hardy inhabitants of all that land and water stretching from James Bay through Hudson Bay to all that distant land reaching up toward the North Pole, with its memories of Peary and Dr. Cook. Once each year the Nascopie comes with a year's supplies, and the mails, also bales of newspapers, and the arrival of this tough little ship, which fears neither ice packs, nor gales, is a monumental event—the thrill of a lifetime, once each year. If the Nascopie should fail to make the trip it would be just too bad for the many pioneers who depend upon her.

20 YEARS AGO

JULY 24, 1919

The Board of Education will require the sum of $66,487.00 for school purposes this year. The public schools will take $40,909.20 and the high school $25,518.00. The amount required is $9,311.00 more than last year, which is accounted for in the increased salaries to the teachers and the night school expenses. The Board has recommended that the salary of Mr. W. J. Diamond the secretary to the Board, be increased from $450.00 to $750.00.

Miss Doris Brock of the post office staff is spending her vacation at Dalhousie Lake.

OPEN-AIR SERVICE OPENS CONFEDERATION CELEBRATIONS

Commencing the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the first meeting of the Fathers of Confederation at Charlottetown, an open air religious service was held at the exhibition grounds in the island capital. On the platform, LEFT to RIGHT during the service are pictured Lieut. G.A.C. Scarfia, ADC; Major J. R. Paton, ADC; Lieut.-Commander of the U. S. destroyer Hamilton, in port at Charlottetown to take part in the celebrations; Commander H.T.W. Grant of the R.C.N. destroyer Skeena; His Honor Lieutenant-Governor George D. DeBlois and Major, the Hon. E. R. Moorehead, legate chaplain

In the French quarter of Montreal, the Young Catholic Worker members, called La Jeunesse Ouvriere Catholique (J.O.C.) presented a series of demonstrations which gave French-Canadian youth an opportunity to show their strength.

They renewed their pledge to continue working "to think the joy of Christ may enter the hearts of all workers." They took the vote to put forward the pettifin of a "pure nation."

Being Republican

Then the workers voiced a mass repudiation of swing music. Dramatically, blatant jazz enunciated from a loud speaker and a leader of the movement shouted: "Enough!"

While the crowd roared approval the young worker, in overalls with sleeves rolled up, continued: "We know that music. We can hear it in the night places. Away with it —let us sing instead the symphony of work."

A band struck up a martial air—French-Canadian tunes—and the parade started.

Later, the crowd heard Mayor Camillien Houde say that French-Canadians must try to dominate in the field of economics—"and play the role that is properly ours."

It was against this background of enthusiasm and excitement that the people were overcome. Some fainted in the stands and sought the air of the street. They felt no better at rest in private homes or restaurants where ambulances picked them up.

During this mass collapse, the pageant in the stadium continued. The scream of sirens and clanging ambulance bells provided a strange accompaniment.

"We must not fall into that mortal error of mistaking our wishbone for our backbone."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Treating the Patient Not the Peptic Ulcer

A few years ago there was much controversy between physicians and surgeons as to which was the best treatment for ulcer of the small intestine—peptic ulcer. Physicians were able to show that by resting the stomach as much as possible, by use of soft foods, and preventing formation of too much acid digestive juice, many cures were obtained. Surgeons, on the other hand, advised new opening from stomach to small intestine.

Recently a physician discussing peptic ulcer with a prominent surgeon, head of a surgical service in a large hospital, was surprised to hear the surgeon say, "I don't operate on as many cases of peptic ulcer as I did some years ago, as you medical men are curing and preventing this condition. Of course when medical treatment fails, I still operate and also have to operate when an ulcer has healed but has left a mass of scar tissue blocking the passage of food from the stomach to small intestine."

The reason that more cures are being obtained by physicians, and fewer operations are being performed, is that both physicians and surgeons now realize that it is not the ulcer that needs to be treated but the patient himself.

Dr. Joseph Daly, Toronto, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, states that it is now admitted that no treatment is suitable for all peptic ulcers. The physician no longer aims to treat the ulcer but to direct the management of the patient who has an ulcer diathesis (predisposition or tendency to ulcer) and the surgeon confines his efforts to correcting the complications that arise during the course of the disease.

That there is a tendency to peptic ulcer in some individuals and families who are of the very nervous or emotional type is shown by the following:

1—Ulcer patients have a tendency to excessive worry.

2—The symptoms disappear or become less when there is a prolonged period of relief from the fear and conflict.

3—A return to usual work, worry, or mistakes in diet brings a return of ulcer symptoms."

Forgot to Eat

The excitement of a day devoted to glorification of French-Canada's working youth proved too great.

Hospital authorities reported many of the victims had been so affected by the proceedings that they forgot to eat all day. The broiling sun which beat down on an afternoon celebration at St. Helen's Island also was listed as a factor by the illness.

Symptoms were dizziness and stomach cramps. Reports of food poisoning spread but investigation at Notre Dame and St. Luke Hospitals, where the victims were taken, emphasized that there was no poisoning.

The ambulance at Notre Dame Hospital, where 125 victims were treated, made 20 trips. A Montreal tramways bus took two loads to that hospital where 20 doctors cared for the victims. Every nurse was pressed into service and those off duty were called to work. Ambulances took other victims to St. Luke Hospital.

No Mass Hysteria

There was no commotion or mass hysteria at the stadium but police and members of the Workers Organization had trouble holding lines against people searching for relatives.

Collided With Train

The other Ottawa district death happened when the motor car driven by Albert Seabrooke, 49-year-old farmhand, collided with a Canadian Pacific Railway train at level crossing near Carleton Place.

Three of Quebec's deaths were drownings, two resulted from highway accidents and one from a railway mishap. Frank Angeli, of Montreal, drowned while swimming near Repentigny, not far from his native city. Gordon Taylor, 35, of Sherbrooke, died in Little Lake Magog after he apparently swam too great a distance from a sail boat.

Although rescued, a few moments after he sank in the St. Charles River near Quebec, Armand Mantel, nine, died en route to hospital. He was playing ball on a wharf and tumbled over a beam into the water.

Many Collisions

Gerald Ewen, 13, of St. Henri De Mascouche Parish, 40 miles from Montreal, was killed in a head-on collision between two automobiles in which eight others were injured. David A. Curie, 75-year-old resident of Newburgh, N.Y., died Friday night after his automobile, in which he was riding collided with a bus near St. Dorothee.

Two Western Ontario deaths resulted from highway accidents. At Brantford Mrs. Mary Hill, 31, Rochester, N.Y., and former resident of the fifth Line, was killed when her identified body of a man about 45 years of age.

In Toronto William Rohen-Minor, 11, drowned while swimming in a suburban Forest Hill village pool. He is believed to have struck his head while diving.

BIGGEST TOBACCO

Norman Norman.

But other factors were favorable in the industry. Disease was slightly below normal. About 10,000 acres of flue-cured tobacco was blown out by the storm on July 5.

Seldom have tobacco men been so hopeful about markets as this year. British tobacco manufacturers bought the entire 1938 supplies of flue-cured tobacco, between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 pounds, after a trade deal resulting in Canadian tobacco entering the British market as a duty - free shipment, than United States tobacco.

But there still a question whether British smokers will accept the new Canadian type cigarette or pay extra for cigarettes made with United States tobacco. The flue-cured tobacco is used almost entirely in making cigarettes. It is a light, yellow tobacco.

Barley Condition Good

The burley tobacco growers find their branch of the industry in healthy condition too. Seven years ago when the burley tobacco marketing board took control, there were 25,000,000 pounds of this variety in storage. Now there is less than 13,000,00 pound in storage and manufacturers are so concerned about the situation they persuaded the board to increase acreage 10 per cent this year.

Burley tobacco is used largely for chewing tobacco, snuff and some for pipe tobacco. It is dark tobacco that does not require the same expensive processing, that flue-cured tobacco needs.

42,000 Acres

The flue-cured branch of the industry is by far the more important. The cash return to the growers was more than $15,000,000 from about 42,000 acres.

Burley growers collected $1,506,971 for the crop they grew on 9,215 acres last year. There is a third variety of tobacco grown, "dark tobacco" which was raised on 2,700 acres last year. The dark tobacco almost a Turkish variety, is used for blend.

Most of the growers are centred in Essex County where burley and flue-cured growers are nearly evenly divided with about 1,000 each. Kent growers raise a lot of burley with the other tobacco growers located in Norfolk, Lambton, Elgin, Middlesex, Oxford and even of late Brant County.

Tobacco, once something just to smoke, has become in recent years a major contributor to Ontario's agricultural bank balance.

"The basic principles upon which the United States was founded are as important today as they were when the Constitution was adopted."

— Robert A. Taft.

They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

"The Moaning Lizzie"

By INDA MILLER

Saddest of things, love has claimed me, given me all the intoxication of high heaven and let me cool with the descent thereth.

Dear Fancy mine, you do not make my love hoarse. You draw for a picture—and I see him coming—strength in biceps and chivalry in his soul. I spet him, somewhat breathless, when the apple blossoms sweep low—andlove shuts out from vision all but just us two. Ah—Fancy, that is what you do for me!

Leave me, fickle Fancy. I do not need you. Love is enough. There are no apple blossoms down the street. Love is becoming strong and true, to clasp mein his arms.

From my widow in this noisy hotel, I look down upon the beach and noisy vendors of vulgar wares.

Of my lover—even a collegian fivver has made hebe — a collegian fivver, whose ride vies with that of the Boston Hyates. And my lover munches "At dogs" with a painted flapper!

Yet, though thestelling be commonplace, beatific be, and there is no consolation.

He doesn't understand. How could one, with my tende sensibilities, go with him in that horrid, horrid "Moaning Lizzie"? Yes, "Really awful" that dear, I could't go in that wicked-looking, ugly thing. Its colors are atrocioaand its name, "Moaning Lizzie" is desecration. Of its rattle I shan't even mention for it is indescribable.

He turned on me hen. "Edith," he said, "this is the inth time you have been slighting me in favor of It is the last straw,if you won't come to the dance inhat, you shall never get a chance to go in it again."

He hesitated a moent. I made no move.

"Good-by," he said, id left.

Later I saw them ime out together, he and that ebian Toots Brown. They boughthot dogs", nasty, common "hot 4s" from a man at a stand, then ple into that horrid, horrid tin, whi I watched with breaking heart.

Never did I let him eathot dogs". The things will make hi sick. Oh why, oh why, did I comto a hotel where there are peoplelike Toots Brown!

I see, in my mind's eyene, going back to the city, birthday after day, dull, emotionless, bne week of love behind mecountless dull years stretching ahe! I shall work the harder, the bettdo drown my sorrow. Perhaps in yeI shall be Mr. Loring's secrtry. Certainly I shall be no Vivian era, heart-broken maidof but woman of the world who will get the top of the ladder.

He, a struggling lawyewith a number of little Toots Brez around his knee, will marvelnd say regretfully: "I might havead the love of Edith Mitchell—and chose instead Toots Brown."

And I—I shall never fot him, though none shall guess at i can-ker in my heart. Wive was a person who said:

"'Tis better to have loved i lost Than never to have loved all."

Whatever sadness love wrhing, yet I wouldn't be the beg to whom that supreme experies of life has been denied.

Hush—what do I hear? Can be that they are coming home alre Surely nothing but the "Mling Lizzie" sounds like that.

Yes, there is his voice beyond door. He is all smiles, too. Oh—Ihere flaunting their happiness at me.

I must quickly put on my crykyes will look so funny.

Morning—at last it is mornil I slept. I don't think I would must slip into my bathing suitd take a ducking before breakfast

Glorious, glorious day! Ar was on the porch when I came d

"Lo!" he called in that chevoice of his, and as though noth were amiss. "You're late this mng. I've waited an hour for y Let's hustle, or we'll never be in time for breakfast."

I looked at him coldly. "Wh said I, "didn't you go down to wake with Toots Brown, instead waiting for uninteresting me?"

Arthur can be very dominent He looked at me in a stern way.

"Now, Edith," he said, taking hand and making me walk beside him, "don't be a silly goose. Toots Brown is nothing in my young life. Why when that girl comes out of the ocean and her complexion have parted company."

I thought with complacence of my own pink and white skin, which surfered no damage from water.

There was a line of grim determination about Arthur's mouth as he answered me.

"Edith, when you speak of the 'Moaning Lizzie' speak of her more kindly. She cost me $100 last summer, and she has been my constant companion since then. We have gone together where no eight-cylinder car could go. I love every line of her sleek body. I have washed and painted and scrubbed her—and never have she stalled at awkward moments."

He paused. I said nothing. I hated the "Moaning Lizzie" more than ever—on seeing how he loved her.

He continued: "When you refused to go in her last night, I determined you never would have a chance to go again. I meant it."

My heart beat furiously with anger. We were now at the water. There were few other bathers on the sand, and we were a distance from them. I turned on Arthur. I stamped my foot.

"Arthur," I said, "you needn't talk that way to me. You can have your old 'fizz' back. You can have give it to Toots Brown. I never want to see you again. I never terrible 'Moaning Lizzie'. I don't want any chances to go in her. I wouldn't go!"

With that I turned, and ran as fast as I could, back to the hotel, up to my room, and flung myself down on the bed. I cried—I cried—and I cried some more.

There was a knock at the door. "Who is it?" I called.

"Honey," said Arthur's voice, "I want to tell you something."

"I won't listen!" said I, walking towards the door.

"I'll tell you anyway," he replied. "Last night, when I was out with Toots Brown, it was merely on business. I was demonstrating the capabilities of the 'Moaning Lizzie'. Are you listening?"

"No," I said.

"Well," said he, "I sold it to her for thirty-five dollars."

I opened the door. A hero can look out as impressive in a bath towel and bathrobe as in more martial attire.

I put my arms round his neck—tight.

"Dearest," I said. "it's late for breakfast, anyway. Let's go for our swim and buy some fizz on the way back."

I felt some sacrifice was necessary on my part.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Stop itching, relieve pain, passage of stool, is nature's warning proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from any druggist a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

COUPLES START

Mgr. Georges Gauthier, Archbishop Co-adjutor of Montreal, officiated at the marriage ceremony held in conjunction with the annual congress of the Young Catholic Worker movement in which the newlyweds all hold membership. The mass wedding was designed to offset "all the unfavorable publicity marriage is getting from the world's divorce courts."

Pair Acted as "Sample"

Kneeling at prayer-stools about a bower-like hallboard alar in the outfield of the big ball park, 104 of the couples took their cue for the ceremony from Henri and Therese Benjain, who acted as a "sample" pair.

Therese, dressed like the other brides in white satin and carrying a bouquet of lilies knelt with her blue-suited groom before the Archbishop at a red leather cushion to the left of the altar. As each took the marriage vows, the other participants followed suit, their consent being recorded by priests assigned each pair.

Each couple had two male witnesses.

Mgr. Gauthier imparted the apostolic blessing and in a brief sermon spoke of the sanctity of marriages, an "indissoluble sacrament," and praised the aims of the Young Catholic Worker Movement.

Nuptial Mass Held

A nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. Henry Roy, founder of the movement, and two of his nephews clad in blue trousers, white shirts and red-and-white striped ties served him.

Blessed by the Pope, a crucifix and rosary, respectively, was presented to each groom and each bride. Officials of the movement also gave rings to the grooms in an effort to prevent "ring parties" whereby both parties to a marriage wore rings.

The brides, averaging in age 23 years, and the grooms, whose average was 25 years, received a non-perparation course for the last year.

Later Roy, who supervised the course, will keep in close touch with the couples during the next five years, acting a friend and counsellor.

Delegates attending the wedding came from many points in Quebec and Ontario and from areas of 28, headed by Rev. J. R. Keane, came from Chicago. Most of the brides and grooms were Montrealers.

Bateman Reunion Held at Tweed

Wednesday, July 19, marked the 10th anniversary of the Bateman picnic, which was held at the Tweed fair grounds.

There were one hundred and eighty sat down to well laden tables at dinner and in the afternoon more came. After dinner the president, Mr. Burton Bateman called the gathering to order, and Mrs. Thomas Bateman read the minutes of the last picnic which was held at Searles' beach Oak Lake, last year. Roll call was answered by the ones who had passed to the Great Beyond and Mrs. Orval Ashkins; and to the one coming the longest distance, Mrs. (Dr.) Wilkinson of Toronto; and to the one with the largest number in their set, Mr. Charlie Jeffery and Mr. Clayton Paul. Mr. Bill Bateman of Madoc, was elected president for next year, Miss Bessie McMaster of Minto as Sec.-Treas.

After the afternoon a ball game was enjoyed and races which were won by the following:

Four years and under, Harleigh Blackburn; girls 5 to 7, Frances Morrison; boys 5 to 7, Clare Gero, girls 8 to 11, Inez Bateman and Glenon Gehan; boys 8 to 11, Russell Bateman; girls 12 to 16, Marion Morrison; boys 13 to 16, Carman Geen; girls 17 and over — Mildred Morrison.

Quiz Game, Mrs. Wm. Wright, Wanda Bateman, Mrs. Burton Bateman and Audrey Bateman.

Driving pair race 1st Basil Bateman. Stanley Gunn, and Ruth Woods; 2nd Alex. Bateman, Jack Morrison. Consolation, Mrs.

Slow race, Mrs. Robt. Peacock. Obstacle race—Mrs. J. H. Gehan and Mrs. C. Hyde.

After the races a large number went to the hall where the rest were enjoying a chat. It was decided to hold the picnic next year in the same place the 3rd Wednesday in July.

KIDNAPPED BY ARABS

British army planes are conducting a widespread search for Rev. Gerould Gouldner, Cleveland, who was kidnapped by a band of Arabs near Wadi Nar, Palestine. The Arabs are demanding a $5,000 ransom for the kidnaped missionary.

BRITISH GUNBOAT

Authorities aboard the gunboat also were ordered to investigate the detention of the British passenger and freigh lighter Hsangwo since Saturday.

Detention of the lighter was not explained officially but Japanese press dispatches said customs officials of the Japanese-dominated Peiping government had confiscated 20,000 Chinese dollars valued $2,700) consigned to Shanghai by a Tientsin Chinese bank. A banker charged with shipping the money also was held.

In Shanghai French police stationed an armored truck manned by a machine-gun squad at the edge of the French concession to guard against further attacks on two newspapers which support the central Chinese government.

Inspector J. Watson of the Shanghai municipal police reported he was attacked by police of Japanese-dominated Shanghai administration when he attempted to remove anti-British posters from buildings within the international settlement. His attackers were said to have been driven off by Italian marines.

THUS SPOKE THE KING

"Life is a great adventure, and every one of you can be a pioneer, blazing by thought and service a trail to better things . . . Canada has before her a development far beyond the most optimistic dreams of her pioneers . . ."

The royal author of these royal words has walked our ways and gone back to the Seat of Empire. The shouts and bunting are no longer on our streets. But, inwardly, much of inestimable worth remains. We have stood shoulder to shoulder to cheer our King and Queen. It has united us as never before — deep below all differences and difficulties, East, West and North. We are united in a new hope and a new confidence in ourselves and in one another; for we have seen ourselves through royal eyes. And we have realized that it was fears which held us back, fears bred of threats without and of misunderstandings within. These fears had slowed the wheels of commerce and fed upon their own results. Now, mentally, we stand as physically we stood to cheer — shoulder to shoulder. In this new faith and confidence, we shall go forward "blazing by thought and service a trail to better things". Only thus can we fittingly respond to that man and king who visited us upon the greatest adventure of peace in modern history — and won a continent.

Weddings

WARDHAUGH — BRYANT

On Tuesday, July 18, a pretty wedding was solemnized in the Tabernacle United Church parsonage, when Ruth Leslie, youngest daughter of Mrs. Mary Bryant and the late Wesley Bryant of Kingston was united in marriage to Clarence C. Wardhaugh, son of Mrs. Ida Wardhaugh and the late Edward Wardhaugh of Belleville.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white satin slip sheer with large white picture hat, and accessories. She carried pink roses and delphiniums. The bride was attended by Miss Edna Wardhaugh, sister of the groom, who was dressed in pink flowered silk crepe with large white picture hat, and white accessories and carried a corsage of pink roses.

Little Misses Shirley Mae Mifflin, niece of the bride, and Geneva Tracy were flower girls. They were lovely in white taffeta silk gowns, carrying pink roses and baby's breath.

After the ceremony a buffet lunch was served to about fifty friends and relatives at the home of Mrs. Mifflin, sister of the bride.

The young couple will take up residence at 41 Furby Street.

Also an event of interest took place, the celebration of 75th birthday, the bride's mother, Mrs. Tracy, invariable children and guests. Mrs. Roy Tracy, Mrs. Bryant replying to the toast after which all sang and joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow".

The Stars Say

For Monday, July 24

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is of unusual activity in connection with emotional stresses. These mental and emotional tensions may be of a happy or unfortunate nature, relegating other matters into the background.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of fair business prosperity if they care to devote themselves to its pursuit.

Most persons born on this day may be of talented, artistic, kindly of character and intellect, but its finer traits are more conducive to success for expression, either in artistic, social, benevolent or romantic ambitions.

For Tuesday, July 25

THE ASTRAL forces for this day combine to create a very exciting and eventful state of affairs, with sudden moves in the direction of adventure or romance. With prudence and discretion ruling benefic influences, one may benefit by the

Dulling the Finish

By Helen Follett

It is the desire of every woman that her complexion carry a dull finish, but not shine for her, if you please. But there are many skins that keep persistently buttered. Try the powder pad as often as you please, and in no time at all there is that beaming surface back again. Too washing must be thorough to be fussy about the soap you use if you are among the afflicted ones. A change of soap often brings the warm one; it acts favorably upon sebaceous glands that are busy on working overtime. Dry the flesh gently apply an astringent.

The cleansing of the skin is often due to a diet too rich in fats. Put less butter on your bread, avoid fat meats and pastries. Many ills of the human hide are due to a diet that is not balanced.

JOAN PERRY
Avoids oily complexion by watching her diet

Fashion Flashes

An addition to the summer color scheme and one calculated to carry over to next season is a pale beige which approximates lamboo. It goes beautifully with tan or fair skin and takes white or strong colors easily. A suit of thin taffeta in this shade looks cool with white touches.

A cuaint evening frock is made entirely of the finest white eyelet embroidery. Frills mark the basque bodice, form the brief curving peplum, and edge the long sleeves.

Just as nice as grown-up clothes are the summer frocks for little girls. A blue dotted swiss with white collar and white front is fagoted in blue.

Equally smart with a daytime skirt or an evening suit is a blouse of white silk chiffon with red polka dots. The full-length sleeves are very full, and the turn-down collar cries for a jewelled brooch. . . . comes with a red cummerbund printed in white dots.—

For informal dining at a seashore resort a full skirt of grey printed crepe is topped by a lastex shirred blouse of white chiffon. High neck and elbow length sleeves give the moulded bodice a new look.

Garden weddings call for picturesque clothes. For the mother of the bride, white silk chiffon printed in a rose clusters design might be accompanied by a big black hat trimmed with roses.

CHATTERTON WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The July meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Clayton Reide, with fourteen members and nine visitors present. The meeting was off to a good start with community singing, followed by the opening ode, the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. Canadianization was the topic of the meeting and "O Canada" was sung. The roll call was answered by giving the name of an immigrant of another nationality to be Canadianized. The June minutes were read and adopted. The business period followed and the annual meeting was discarded in favor of a supper at Oak Lake.

Mrs. B. Bleecker gave a report on the Officers' Rally and the "Speak-ers' Service" was decided on for Chatterton Institute. A St. John's Ambulance First Aid course was discussed. It was moved and seconded that Mrs. Pickle be repaid for money spent on the printing of the programs. Mrs. Earl Bleecker gave a very full report on current events and a special item Mrs. Milton Robson gave a most interesting and humorous paper on the "Royal Family and Their Visit to Canada."

Everyone joined in singing Jiuanita, after which the Minpah was repealed. The hostess then served a very nice lunch which was thoroughly enjoyed.

THE STEPMOTHER

By SARAH E. McCAHEY

THE STEPMOTHER . . . . . .

The pretentious looking house owned and occupied by John Brenton and his sixteen-year-old daughter, Marion, was one of the finest on Mendon road. A good expanse of lawn in front, outlined by low curbing, ended almost flush with the grandilithic street walk, which was bordered with a strip of lawn that extended like a bright green ribbon from one end of the street to the other.

Although John Brenton was anything but a purse-proud man, the possession of their beautiful home had made his pretty young daughter a trifle arrogant. Her mother having died two years previously, Marion had never dreamed but that her father and she would always live there together and enjoy their peaceful surroundings.

But one evening, after they had sat by the fireplace for quite late, John Brenton informed his daughter that she was to have a new mother! After the sudden surprise and shock, Marion wrote to her aunt, Anna, her mother's sister, as she could not possibly bear the thought of anyone's taking her mother's place.

Two days later the answer came. In it she said she was coming to see she chose to come, but was advised to wait until she finished high school, a year hence.

"Of course, you could not expect your father to go on being house-keepers forever," Aunt Ray wrote practically. "There have been weeks, so far, I believe, and it will be several years before you can learn to manage such a large house. However, if worse comes to the worst, you can depend upon me."

"Not very sympathetic" thought Marion, a little resentfully, but it was just like Aunt Ray.

She put the letter away and awaited developments.

Marion had hoped that the new mother might be something like her own and it proved that there was a slight resemblance in the bright, quick way of talking that caused Marion to look keenly at her father when he introduced Mrs. Allen. But the glance with a smile at his daughter. How could she know it was this characteristic which had first attracted him to Mother Anne, and had decided to call her stepmother?

In less time went on there was no breaking up of the restraint that had fallen upon Marion after the advent of her new mother. Little intimacies, confidential talks, have always arisen in the home with a father, which, hitherto, had been of such keen pleasure, according to their zest because of the ever-present feeling that she was sharing him with another.

So she held herself aloof.

To be sure, her home was organized and systematized as it had never been before. Moreover, a new order of things began in other ways. At night when her father came home late with his briefs, she could hear Mother Anne's typewriter going, lightly-agile, way into the night and her father rapidly dictating.

No more cozy night chats. Every body was working and everybody was busy, but life for Marion went on unchanged.

"You have your lesson, dear, and I fear the noise of my machine will disturb you," Mother Anne had said on occasion, and Marion promptly closed the door and sat study in her own room, which she did!

No more studying before the fire. Instead, her father reading his paper beside her.

"I'm busy these days, daughter," he had said to her one night affectionately, and she thought he had never looked so tired.

They were to stay in the city all summer.

That was another thing that had never happened before.

"I can't stand it," she cried to herself one hot night in August, when all she could hear was the noisy type writer and her father's voice dictating.

Leaving her room, she ran down to the hide where she had separated them from the none-too-affluent neighbors at the back street.

"Anybody wanting me?" and a stooping form straightened up from the typewriter and the voice said "No, dear."

Oh Martha, nobody wants you— and nobody want me either," said Marion. "I'm going out walking. Do you want that's it, it?" said the big stout woman, leaning on the hoe that she had been digging the mint in the earth around some potato plants.

"Yes, I'll go with you, I'll be ready for it, I'm going to tel you a thing or two. Going to put Aunt Ray's nose out of joint, you see if you don't!"

TOURIST HOME BUSINESS BOOMING

Tourist home business is booming in the city this year and at some of the more favored homes overnight guests are being turned away nightly, stated the proprietor of one East Dundas Street home today.

"Our business is up about twenty-five per cent over last year, and has been continuous since early in the season. We had more room we could care for many more than we do accommodate."

It is pointed out by the observant proprietor that the lure of the trailer has not been as great this year, and many families who travelled in trailers last year have left them behind in favor of faster travel and more comfort at wayside hotels during their tour.

REPORT OF MILL IS PREMATURE

Montreal, July 22—(CP)—R. A. Henderson, general-manager of Robin Hood Milling Company said today that announcement by A. B. Dansuke, Liberal member of parliament for Welland, of a $1,000,000 plant to be built near Niagara Falls, Ont., by the Milling Company was premature.

"Negotiations have been under way for three or four years concerning the plant", he said, "but nothing has been decided yet. We still are investigating possibilities and any thing definite on the subject is decidedly premature".

Toronto, July 22—(CP)—Representatives of 360,000 Canadian ex-veterans will gather here Aug. 11 to discuss methods of co-ordination of the work of veterans' organizations and how veterans can assist in solving national problems.

The National VeTerans' Conference, organized a year ago, consists of the presidents of six organizations, the Canadian Legion, the Canadian Corps Association, the Canadian Pensioners of the Great War, the Sir Arthur Pearson Club for the Blind, The British Imperial Old comrades Association and the Amputations Association.

REGATTA RUMBLINGS

As pepper is to salt, the coal is to the pants, Mutt is to Jeff, and Charlie McCarthy is to Edgar Bergen, so is music to any good function.... Regattas, picnics, fairs, in fact any event where John Public congregates in large numbers the magic of music is an invisible band that not only binds people together but has an inestimable effect on their morale.

No matter if it is a mighty symphony orchestra, the crashing brasses of the world's greatest military bands, the throbbing of jungle drums or the weird cacophonies of the humble jew's harp, melody and rhythm from time immemorial has not only charmed the savage breast but is a powerful force that exerts an equally powerful, influence on the human being, no matter what his colour, creed, or race.

Cognizant of this fact, and also aware of the music-loving tendencies of people of the city and district, members of the Regatta Entertainment Committee have secured the services of two of Canada's outstanding bands to entertain at the Regatta Celebration at Massassaga Park on Civic Holiday.

Resplendent in their new "Royal Visit" uniforms, the Band of the H.C.A.F. station at Trenton, under the baton of Flight-Sergeant Tommy Goodwin, an organization that within the past few months has swept from being an obscure station band to one of the finest military organizations of its kind in Canada, will be in attendance at the Park.

Some sixty strong, the "air" musicians have secured special permission from the officer commanding the R.C.A.F. Station near Trenton to play at the Rotary Club Regatta.

Another organization that has also climbed high in Ontario band circles within the past few years, "Belleville's Finest" the Municipal Band, under the baton of Lieut. Fred Johnson will alternate with the Air Force Band in a continuous program of sparkling melodies.

Both organizations will be at their best. From the thunderous choruses of grand opera, to the delicate melodies of classical music, the catchy tempo of military marches and the saucy rhythmic sway of popular swing tunes, the musicians will play a program that will suit the musical palate of the most particular lover of melody.

The R.C.A.F. gained fame recently on the occasion of the visit of Their Majesties to Canada when they were commanded to play in Ottawa and again at Niagara Falls prior to and during the entry of the Royal Coup's to the U.S.A. Royal compliments on the splendid musical ability of Sergt. Cooper's gallant crew testified to the high musical status that this band now enjoys.

And Freddy Johson's blue and gold uniformed palacy of melody-makers are equally as important in their own particular sphere. In fact many bands in Canada that can boast four gold medalists and seven winners out of eight entries in a Musical Festival that drew the cream of young musicians of the Dominion:.... Belleville is distinctly proud of its Lieut. Johson, his band and his talented youngsters who at a tender age bid fair to become some of Canada's outstanding instrumentalists.

On Wednesday evening, July 19, about one hundred friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pigden to celebrate the recent marriage of their son, Harold, to Miss Iva McCann. The evening was ideal and the guests spent the time dancing and those that did not care to dance spent a pleasant evening in social chat. At about 12 o'clock Dr. F. J. Nickle called for order and Miss Gladys Martin read the following address:

Dear Iva and Harold:

We have come to express, in a small way, our genuine pleasure in your happiness together. We have known you both through your childhood, your young womanhood and young manhood and have watched your romance blossom into this happy culmination. We have appreciated your delightfulness in the affairs of your community.

You, Iva, have been an interested member of the Young People's Association, and you, Harold, have been an extremely active and keen hockey player, helping to snatch victory for Eldorado two seasons in succession. We have enjoyed many happy occasions with you in the past and look forward with pleasure to many other such contacts.

It is delightful that you are taking up residence in our midst and that you contribute your active community services throughout your coming years. May your life's beautiful as well as useful. From here on be one of happiness and success, brimful of enjoyment.

In appreciation of your associations with us, we ask you to accept these articles of usefulness, not for everyone for their kindness and after tuner lunch dancing and visiting continued.

Signed on behalf of the community:

Ken. Martin.

Epidemic of Fine Hurling Seen in Major Leagues as Batsmen Take Real Licking

Bowman, Davis, Fette Faller Bridges, Lyons and Moore All Win

CARDS NOW SECOND

Jimmy Foxx of Boston Leading Home-Run Derby With Nineteen

By BILL WHITE
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ashing backs and the thought of skidding batting averages spoiled many a major baseball fingernail holiday today, following an epidemic of peerless pitching performances in Sunday 14-game extravaganza.

Striking wildly were batsmen who faced the fiery offerings of Bobo Newsom and Curt Davis of the Cards, Lou Fette of the Bees, Cy Blanton of the Pirates, Tommy Bridges of the Tigers, Chicago's Ted Lyons and Cincinnati's Thornton Lee.

Bowman, the freshman, came closest to the half of the immortals of the back when the Dodgers 12-0 ace limited the Cubs to four hits, with three hits in the third inning, retiring the side in between to face him. Ernie Koy spoiled his hopes of a no-hitter with a single in the seventh after two were out.

Curt Davis was right back at them in the afternoon with the Dodgers in the afterpiece with a four-hit shutout relief job the first time ever he was called to be worked. That gave the Cards an 8-2 victory and possession of second place.

Sixth Shutout of Season

Lou Fette won his headlines by way of his sixth shutout of the season as the Bees made the mightiest of the Pirates by 1-0. Fette, in from the Pirates by 7-2 decision, winning his 10th, the Pirates 2-1 triumph in the first game was notable chiefly for the end of Arky Vaughan's 22-game hitting streak and Ralph Kiner's home-run modest 4-game stretch. Milt Shoffner, though he lost the game, was the Pirates' who clamped down on both of them.

Feller came through magnificently yesterday with a nine-hit performance that was good enough to stop the Senators 7-2 and gift him the 16th victory of the season. The his 10th victory of the season. The Indians also squeezed out a 4-3 victory in the second game.

Bridges Comes Back

Tommy Bridges, who had been rapped hard in his last three starts, came back strong with an eight-hit, hit-job on his 13th of the season as the owner of the Athletics who were smothered 16-3. The Tigers' 18 hits gave him plenty of room in the pinches.

Ted Lyons was at his peak strength as the Chicago White Sox finished the day with the end of his 6-2 game.

Whitey Fehr threw three-hit job in the nightcap for the Reds gave the league leaders a 4-0 victory after Lonnie Frey's double in the 11th had given them the first game over the Phils 3-2.

Boston Wins Two

The Red Sox, by busting the Browns 13-5 and 11-3, stretched the St. Louis' streak to five in eight games and at the same time cut the Yankees' lead to 7½ games. Jimmy Foxx's 19th homer was the day's biggest blow.

And the plight of the Giants remains a sad subject at the Polo grounds. After their 10-inning win in a row yesterday, 7-5, bowing to the Cubs, 5-4, in the end of a twin-bill was the worst home stand of the year in which they managed but one victory in 5 tries.

In Saturday's National League games the Yankees' pitcher clinched Cincinnati Reds to a 2-0 victory over Philadelphia Phillies while Lake Hamlin hurled eight-hit ball to pace Brooklyn Dodgers to the 7-2 triumph over the Chicago Cardinals. New York Giants dropped one to Pittsburgh 5-2, and Boston Bees lost to Pittsburgh 9-2.

In the American League Boston Red Sox chalked up a 6-3 victory over the St. Louis Browns while Washington Senators swamped Cleveland Indians 11-2. Detroit Tigers and Philadelphia Athletics split a doubleheader, the Tigers losing the first tilt 6-2 and winning the nightcap 11-10.

Yesterday's Stars

Tommy Bridges, Tigers: An eight hit performance against the A's that gave him his 13th victory.

Jimmy Foxx and Emerson Dickman, Red Sox: Jimmy took honors with his 19th and 20th home runs and Dickman in nightcap relief job as Sox won pair.

Lonnie Frey and Whitey Moore, Reds: Frey's 11th-inning double gave Reds victory in opener and Whitey held Phils to three hits in blanking them in nightcap.

Lou Fette and Milt Shoffner, Bees: Lou racked up his shutout of the season and latter stopped Chuck Klein's 22-game hitting streak though or lost opener to Pirates.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, July 24 (AP)—If the Cubs or Senators beg Manager Tom Sheehan of Minneapolis for 1940 pilot, say no more. The United States Professional Baseball Association may eliminate the 36-hole qualifying round and make future tourneys entirely by match play.

Reason Ford Frick was so hard on Umpire Magerkurth virtually asked for that $150 fine and 10-day suspension by unfeelingly reporting that he spoke on Bill Jurges before Jurges spat on him....Anyway Magerkurth was a good sport about it and maybe the fact alone leagues will pay his fine will help him out....Can thank his stars he wasn't up in the Canadian Football League where the fans, Harold J. Maglin, President, sets a penny down 30 days for assaulting an ump.

Joe M'Carthy is enforcing a headache cure for the magazines—if he ever has one....The football season opened in the south Saturday when the Tar Heel and of Tennessee issued his annual statement naming Alabama the No. 1 team.

Minneapolis will sell a pitcher or a shortstop to the highest bidder....Jim Naismith, a native of Almonte, Ont., and the daddy of basketball, says if Lefty don't stop stream-lining his baby they'll take it off when the Major Pro-Cincinnati is building a home at Saratoga on the 3rd racing formerly occupied by the Brook Club, once a red hot gambling joint.

JERSEY GIANTS DEFEATED TWICE BY THE BEARS

Two Full Games Cut Off Their Leading Margin in Loop

TORONTO WINS

Leafs Defeat Buffalo on Sunday and Split With Royals on Saturday

(By The Associated Press)

A tip to any team that wants to win the International League pennant this year is to avoid those Sunday doubleheaders with Newark Bears.

The Bears have won six Sunday bargain bills in a row now against practically every kind of opposition the League has to offer. They have not done so well in the middle of those six week nor have been able to pull above the .500 mark, but on Sunday afternoon they're poison. Ask the league-leading Jersey City Giants.

The Little Giants, boasting a four game lead, invaded Newark yesterday and managed to escape with the visiting team's share of the receipts from a 14,186 crowd. They got just eight hits in all, including three homers, and won the second clash even though they had to use five pitchers themselves. Joe Beggs managed to last through the opener with 11-8 relief.

Newark's performance was the high spot of the day's play that was hard on the pennant contenders. Rochester's second-place Red Wings managed to keep away a couple of games to Syracuse Chiefs, 6-3 and 7-1, by leaving 25 runners stranded on the sacks. And the Buffalo Bisons in the third slot, took a 7-5 pasting from Toronto Maple Leafs, leaving them only one game ahead of Syracuse.

Orioles Split

In the second division, Baltimore and Montreal split a doubleheader. The Orioles took the opener, 10-1, behind Johnny Babich. Dick West and Italo Chelini's steady hurling, the Royals won the second game 4-3, on Burbank's error in the seventh after Manager Burleigh Grimes and Catcher Chris Hartje had been tossed out in the sixth for disputing Umpire Schroeder's decision and drawing fines.

Toronto walloped three homes off Bob Fisher—Elliott, Richard and De Jongbe—to match Joe Martin's two and one-hitter in the first tilt and they won without three players who had to be left behind when they started their trip to Buffalo strip, Jack Burns, Frank Reiber and Walter Kimsey. Toronto broke a thumb Saturday and the others have been ordered to rest the week-end.

Leafs Split Even

In Saturday's International League games Roy Joiner hurled fourhit ball to give Jersey City Giants a 5-0 victory over Syracuse Chiefs. While Newark Bears swamped Baltimore Orioles 19-4, Montreal Maple Leafs and Montreal split a doubleheader, the Leafs taking the opener, 4-2 and losing the nightcap 3-2. Buffalo Bisons bombarded Rochester Red Wings to win 7-1.

NOVA VS. GALENTO IN PHILADELPHIA

TONY GALENTO

LOU NOVA

Two big heavyweight bouts featur e the fistic fare to be served up to newspaper readers and radio listene rs in September, the most important, of course, being Joe Louis vs. Tony Galento at Detroit, and the other one finding Tony Galen to, called The Gallant since his debut victory at the Stadium, hailed by some as a "second feat by the champion, meeting Lou Nova, hailed by some as the "second Tunney" and flailed by others for being matched too early in his career with the former champion. They m et in Philadelphia, where the largest crowd ever to see a boxing match witnessed the first Dempsey-Tunney affair in 1926. The bout is scheduled for 15 rounds, the winner to meet Joe Louis—pardon us, the winner to meet the winner of the Louis-Pastor fight.

TORONTO SQUAD BEATS PETERBORO

Score Two Runs in Tenth When Rasson Singles With Bases Loaded

(By The Canadian Press)

League leaders in the Intercounty, Niagara district and Intercity senior baseball leagues registered victories in week-end games.

Stratford Nationals, practically unbeatable in the Intercounty circuit, blanked Preston 8-0 behind the five-hit pitching of Kerslake. In the Niagara group, Welland managed to beat Merritton and St. Catharines remained deadlocked. Brights won a close 2-0 decision over Hamilton Athletics and St. Catharines whipped Thorold 8-2. In Intercity warfare, Danforth Accs held the No. 1 spot with a 6-4 triumph over Columbus Grads.

The Nats, on the short end of the score in only one game this year, played heads-up baseball as they collected 13 hits and committed only one error. Preston didn't help the cause any with six miscues recorded against them.

Johnnie Anderson was the whole show as Brights recorded their fifth win in six starts. The diminutive right-hander allowed three hits, struck out 19 and only one Brock player reached third base. Kolachynski, Brock twirler, gave up six hits.

Accs Made Most of Hits

Danforth Accs made the most of their seven hits against Columbus Grads to hold their position. They were outhit 7 to 5, but Grads committed four costly errors. Danforth runs were made four times but nothing resulted from them.

In other Intercity matches, Toronto Phildays won 7-5 at Peterborough in 10 innings and Port Credit, 4-3, on the first five innings, lost 7-3 to Toronto Webbers. The latter scored four runs in their half of the sixth and added another three in the seventh. Frank Port Credit added a single in the sixth.

The other Intercounty fixture ended in a 9-4 decision for Guelph over Kitchener Dunlops. Ron Hinson paced batters with a triple, three singles and a walk in five times at bat. The triumph strengthened Guelph's hold on fourth place, in other Intercity fixtures, Brantfords, Merritton, in fourth place, edged out Welland Tubes 4-3 and Colborne, up a notch in the standing, whipped Thorold 8-2.

Letter to the Sports Editor

Sports Editor, Ontario Intelligencer, Belleville, Ont.

Dear Friend—

In the issue of your paper tonight an account of the meeting held at Camnifton; re play-offs and business of the South Hastings League, is entirely misrepresented, inasmuch as the writer claims that I said that there was no old club at all in effect.

If the writer of this letter had been listening, he would have heard that it was moved and seconded last year, that in the event of a tie game each team take a point, these points were adopted, and I did not say they were till in effect. Rather I said a year ago; there were Two teams that were only one point apart and motion, that they play-off was defeated;

These write-ups that have been appearing are most discriminating and are not fair to the other teams in the league;

I do not wish under any circumstances to start any controversies but I do not intend to have reflections throw on me, that are entirely untrue.

Yours truly
Arthur F. Hall
Secretary-Treasurer, South Hastings League.

Duchess Presents Trophy

The Duchess of Gloucester is seen as she presented Lord Louis Mountbatten with the Duke of York trophy, following the victory of the Royal Navy Team, of which he was captain, over the Royal Air Force squad, in a polo match played at Ranelagh, England. The Duke of Gloucester played on the losing side.

CANADIAN DAVIS CUP TEAM DEFEATED BY CUBAN SQUAD

Havana, July 24 (CP)—Cuba swept the last two singles matches in its first-round Davis Cup series with Canada yesterday to win the series 4-1 but the undiscouraged Canadians immediately turned to plans for their 1940 campaign.

Although disappointed at not getting a crack at the American zone final against Australia, the Canadians said they had a good showing under trying conditions. Non-playing Captain Bill Schroeder said they proved they could be developed into top-notch players.

After Ricardo Morales, Cuba's No. 1 player, defeated Elly Tuckey, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4, in the deciding match, Gene Mako and Jack Kramer whipped Bruce Hall, University of Toronto tennis student, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, in the final encounter.

Captain Forster had nothing but praise for the entire team. He emphasized that both Tarshis and Hall had been handicapped by illness. Forster particularly praised the "grit" of Tarshis.

He was physically in bad condition, but played Morales to a standstill until the last set, when he went down fighting," Forster said. Forster disclosed Tarshis' illness took the court Sunday that the young star was suffering from stomach trouble for the last two days.

BILLY DIRECT BREAKS RECORD AT STRATFORD

Stratford, Ont., July 24 (CP)—The world's champion, Billy Direct (1.55) broke the Canadian record for the mile and track in an exhibition race against time at Stratford Exhibition Park tonight. Billy Direct also shattered the record for the Stratford track.

The champion, watched by 8,000 and pulled by Pat Dunn, former Canadian record holder, did the distance in 2.02. The Dominion record was 2.02 1-2 and was held by Ray Moore, former world's record is 2.01 and the Stratford record is 2.05.

Critics said Billy Direct's feats were more remarkable because it was against a head wind.

Second thrill of the meet was the battle waged by Dillon Mac and Peter Chilcoot, with honors finally going to Dillon Mac when Peter Chilcoot's sulky containing the driver, Hon. Earl Rowe, former Ontario Conservative leader, lost wheel.

Peter Chilcoot appeared headed for victory until the wheel collapsed. Dr. W. H. Meldrum of Norwich drove Dillon Mac.

TONY CONVINCED HE BEAT LOUIS

Making a Lot of Money Exhibiting Self Around "The States"

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, July 24—Tony Galento, the people's pal, Tony Galento, will have to put away his togs some hot day next month and buckle down to training for his first fight with young Lou Nova in Philadelphia.

Tony right now is having more fun and making more easy money than he used to think there was in the world, and it's because he came within a couple of punches of getting his brains batted out by champion Joe Louis.

Every day or two, Tony and his sun-dogging manager, Yussel Jacobs, climb aboard an airplane and fill out to some new outpost, where Tony exhibits the mighty left, that put Louis on the canvas for an instant—just before the lights went out.

Life is one large round of pleasure for the happy barkeep. For that appearance he gets something like $1,000 and expenses.

The fans love him for the game way he took his terrific licking, and they show it every time Tony appears. They shower him with roses and gives them that trick bow of his.

Tony's convinced now that he practically knocked Louis out cold. He's been that to so often. His most highly-prized possession is a blowup photo snapped by a newspaper photographer at the instant Louis hit the floor, and Tony is always showing it to his friends.

"Look at that," he groans. "I go nuts every time I look at it. All I need was one more punch and I would've knocked out that bum. If they would only let me fight my own fight."

Completely erased from Tony's mind is the humiliation he himself has heaped on him after Louis bounced up off the canvas.

ROBSON CHAMPION WITHOUT A CLUB

Pro. of Defunct Lakeview Club Wins Final Match From Ehsan Ellahie

Toronto, July 24 (CP)—Len Robson, professional Canadian professional match play titlist was a champion without a home today.

The Lakeview Golf and Country club, Robson's employer, is the club which he was the professional member, an authorized assignment of the Canadian PGA. The club house burned down Thursday.

Robson won the Dollar trophy Saturday for the sixth time, cruising along to a 6-and-4 victory over Country Club course in sub-par figures for 18 holes on the Lambton Golf and Country Club Kitchener Rockway star, 7 and 6 in the final without loss of a hole.

The Kitchener youth, "dark horse" of the tourney, lost both his brilliance and steadiness after the misfortune of two strokes on the first hole. He never rallied against the cool veteran, one of Canada's best golfers during the past few years.

Robson, who barely qualified in medal play with a 74, defeated Gordon Brydson of Toronto Mississaugua one up in the semi-finals Friday — a nip and tuck battle.

In the other semi-final, Tucker's brilliant performance against Bill Campbell of Toronto Scarboro made the Kitchener star almost an even choice to win. He was 3-up at the turn and Lamb on the seventeenth after maintaining a par 72 equalled the course record for the match with an impressive display of shot making.

STOTT & JUNY - BOWMANVILLE, ONT.

Just to cool off a bit, let's take a peek at the possibilities of hockey for next winter. After the Colts, Generals had won the Memorial Cup and the Dominion junior hockey championship last spring, rumours were quite current to the effect, that the Motor City hockey moguls would go after the 1940 Allan Cup honors and the world's amateur hockey title. However, in the meantime it seems the Colts' new mentors have had a change of heart and will try to repeat their accomplishments of last reason in winning the Memorial Cup and the Junior Dominion championship for the second consecutive year. No junior club has ever accomplished this feat, although Toronto won two consecutive Memorial Cup championships, but not with the same club. In 1910, the last year of the Memorial Cup play-offs the University of Toronto Schools, while in the year the Toronto Canoe Club grabbed off the junior Dominion title so if Oshawa repeat they will be the first to accomplish this feat.

However, that isn't exactly the point we started out to bring forward. The latest rumours emanating from the Motor City hockey hotbed inform us that the Oshawa senior "A" team will not function as a senior O.H.A. club in the "big six" next winter and neither will Niagara Falls. Oshawa, it is said, will seek a senior "B" entry and a berth in the local district group along with Peterboro, Belleville and Air Force. Although hockey is not being considered at this present three point time, we have been wondering how the latter city would ever expect to be classified with clubs like the Air Force or Belleville. It must be kind in mind, remembering that residing in Oshawa yet are such players as sensational Howie "Squeak" Morenzo, "Doc" Rowe, Chisholm, as well as the latter senior class players with last year's Oshawa "Coco Colas". The Oshawa senior "A" team as a senior O.H.A. unit is practically intact so it would naturally follow that in its clubs Oshawa in the local group, Eddie Thomas of the Bees coaching would have to bolster the Redmens to a exceedingly noticeable degree.

Joe Williams of the New York World-Telegram notes: "The Cincinnati park has installed an electric device which flashes 'S' for hit and 'E' for error on the scoreboard, and why not? It is a game for the ball park in the big leagues we don't know. As things stand now, only the newsmen in the press box know whether the batter's credited with a hit or on a questionable play or charged with an error. No small part of the fun at a game is keeping score, agreeing or disagreeing with the official scorer. Years ago we suggested the idea to a club owner and he considered it a good one to encourage gambling. He said we'd be surprised how many people bet whether a hit was an error. So what? They bet anyway, don't they? And how about the thousands of others who want to be informed? The idea is worthwhile. Would show a complete box score kept up to date, but this will come when Zeckie-Feeney-Ted Smith-Ty Cobb's record for stolen bases."

In view of the present scarcity of 20-victory pitchers and the tendency toward sore arms among hurlers, the 22-year major league hurling career of Denton "Cy" Young will be more remarkable.

Young worked in 814 games, gaining 511 victories against 316 defeats. For 15 seasons, 14 in succession, Cy was credited with 20 or more wins, going over the 30-mark in five campaigns. He hurled 36 games in 1892, 1897, 1904 and 1905—in one of which no opponent batter reached first base. Over one period Young had a string of 23 hitless innings. He was 44 years old when he pitched his last major league contest.

The success and road to victory in softball can usually be attributed to one or two factors. One of these is extra base hits. Take for example last Friday night when the Odets' boat the Corbys A.C., the winners collected six extra base hits, while Corbys' counted but one, that came with none on board. The Odets' extra base clouts practically all drew in runs and we are firmly convinced that one has been slow in the clutch is worth two, and some times three good singles. In a few series opens, the mushball games the local intermediate "A" club will be entering in the race since away last March, Corbys A.C. met defeat at the first game of the O.A.S.A. playdowns.

Vic Fleming's crack pacer, Billie Direct established a new harness race record on Saturday when the world's champ pacer turned the mile in 2.02 at Stratford and before 8,000 racing fans. The previous record of 2.02 1-2 was held by Walter Dale and established at Fredericton, N.B. on September 1937. Central and Eastern Ontario used to be hot beds for harness racing and while at present there isn't a summer meet between Toronto and well east of Brockville, Kingston and Napanee having given up the ghost insofar as a harness meet is concerned. However, we would have to be done to the Exhibition Park track, which is a right fast one, behold and, surely, literally covered with noxious weeds. Doc Hartwell, Glen Hall, Jimmy Wilson, Ward Henley, was second in the three-year-old class on Saturday, while Leslie Craiton ran out of the money.

Sweet Spice — Sid Lockyer's ace who played hockey with the Pittson Juniors last winter and battled with Roly Burke's nine this season, was accepted into the R.C.A.F. last week. Roly Wilson-Junior pucksters failed the grade for Eire exams, however ... Results of a football coach for Queen's was made over the week end. Some of the choice was made the board of directors are certainly keeping their choice a deep dark secret.....About two or three times accustomed week ends for the Cincinnati Reds and they'll have the National League pennant in the well known bag.....About the only thing Manager Bill McKechnie is worrying about today is the absence of more seats at Redland Field.

BARRY'S BAY TEAM DEFEATED BY BANCROFT

Bancroft, July 24 (Special)—On Saturday afternoon a team from Barry's Bay, Madawaska, Lake of Two Rivers were handed their final defeat by the Bancroft nine in a 7-inning twilight game by a score of 5-3.

The Bombers started right out in the first innings and got their first run when C. Murray, the first batter to first on an error by shortstop Harry Watson, and was later scored by A. Seymour on a fly ball deep in centre.

Bancroft came in for their hair to beat for the Bombers by one. Harry Watson and Les Broad both walked and came in on a hit by Harold Watson.

Second inning both teams went scoreless, but in the third Harry Watson and Les Broad both walked again and Harry Watson scored the tying run.

In the fourth McRae knocked a two-bagger and scored on a hit by J. Murray, bringing the score 3-2 for Bancroft nine. Both teams went scoreless in the fifth and sixth but in the seventh, the out-of-town lads scored a run on an error by Murray and another error by Les Boad tieing the score at 3-3.

Bancroft came to bat in the half of the seventh and sprung the first batter, got a hit through second. Harry Watson walked, sprung stole third. Les Broad flied out to shortstop. Murray out to catcher. M. Burns cracked out a double scoring both runs to win Bancroft's first in four starts.

C. Murray pitched for Bombers collecting seven strikeouts and issuing 5 walks while K. Sprung pitched his second game for locals, striking out six and issued one walk.

CROPS DAMAGED

In North York, a driving wind slashed hailstones, described by residents "as large as golf balls." In Scarborough municipality, barns valued at $4,000 were destroyed when struck by lightning.

Highway Washouts

On another farm, acres of freshly seeded ground was torn up; An artificial pond burst its cement banks and water swept across a nearby road, trailing tons of earth and cement in its wake. Highway washouts made travel hazardous.

Sand-bunkers on several Toronto golf courses were filled with water and greens were ripped by wind and hail. A number of trees were swept away at Thornhill. North York radial tracks were covered with water, tying up traffic for half an hour.

At the Theatres

AT THE McCARTHY

"My Wife's Relatives"

"R" in the alphabet is the initial letter of such words as hilarity, humor, happiness and home-spun. "R" also introduces the name "Higgins." And they are just the adjectives to describe properly the screen antics of Republic Studios' film family, "The Higginses," a family you'll love, in their new film, "My Wife's Relatives," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

The family's adventures are heart-warming and delightful. They are as true to life as taxes and time-clocks. This new Republic film raises The Higgins Family to the equal to any other film family series in the entertainment world.

Not only is there sufficient comedy to roll everyone in the aisles with laughter, but there is also a little heart-break, a little sorrow, little of real life's tragedies to temper the spontaneous laughter. Seeing "My Wife's Relatives" is like seeing a film about your own family. It's so very "real."

Otis Melnar Gleason is top-notch. He has woven his entertainment elements skilfully with a fine cast to bolster the screen-play by Jack Townley and Paul Gerard Smith. The net result is "must-see" entertainment.

"Risky Business"

George Murphy, Dorothea Kent, Eduardo Ciannelli, Ed Brendel and Frances Robinson head a fine cast in the companion feature attraction, "Risky Business", an exciting story of radio broadcasting activities and newspaper reporting for a large Hollywood daily. "Risky Business" is a splendid and interesting type of screen entertainment all will enjoy from start to final fadeout. In addition a Paramount short subject entitled "Hobby Occupations" is also presented at each performance.

AT THE BELLE

"Garden of the Moon"

Something new and different in the way of musical comedies has been realized in "Garden of the Moon," the Warner Bros. production based upon the Saturday Evening Post serial of the same name which is next at the Belle Theatre.

It has a story. A story that makes sense and is packed with first-rate comedy. It has tunes with only the stone-deaf can refrain from whistling, humming or singing, and it is presented in a manner of liveliness that ranks it as one of the best comedies—musical or otherwise.

Added to its superlative excellence as sheer entertainment, the new musical gains enormously in interest because of lifelong and personable young man who, by his work in this one picture, establishes himself indubitably as a singing and acting star of the first magnitude.

The young man is John Payne, who shares top-billing honors with Pat O'Brien and Margaret Lindsay. It is no saperation on the contributions of the latter two that, after all, their positions have been well-established—to say that all, dark and very handsome Mr. Payne is the big new star of the production. Pat O'Brien is said by many to be regarded his role as the manager or the fashous night spot called the "Garden of the Moon," as one of the best in his career. It's right. And he did full justice to the opportunity it gives him, for he is brilliantly effective in making an amusing and unfailingly sympathetic character of the hard-boiled, double-crossing impresario he plays.

Miss Lindsay—in a new type of role, as a girl press agent for the attraction who is loved by Payne—speaks well for her future screen career.

Assisting Payne in putting over the musical numbers, and also contributing importantly to the comedy, are a quartette of fellows long famous as musicians and unorthodox vocalists but not quite so well known as they should be for their comedy. They are Johnnie Davis, Joe Venuti, Jerry Colonna and Ray Mercer, and they're worth the price of admission by themselves.

Besides these entertainers there is a highly competent aggregation of players handling the straight acting roles, among whom the most effective portrayals are contributed by Melville Cooper, Isabel Jeans, Curt Bois, Mabel Todd, Penny Singleton, and, finally that famous chatterbox of the radio, Jimmy Fidler, who executes with surprising skill the really difficult assignment of playing himself.

"Secrets of an Actress"

Giving as the title implies, a really intimate glimpse of the private life as well as the public career of an actress, the Warner Bros. picture, "Secrets of an Actress" is announced as the supporting feature attraction, with a cast—headed by Kay Francis, George Brent and Ian Hunter—that is a guarantee certification of its fine quality.

SINGS IN FACE OF IMPENDING DEATH

treated him to a "farewell party" and the life of the party, the man with all the jokes, the one who entertained at the piano, was the same Claude Joseph. The victim of "incurable" cancer is seen here

ENGLAND'S FLYING TWINS

Uniforms of the British Civil Air Guard only accentuate the "alikeness" of J. W. and E. J. Holmes, which is remarkable even in the case of twins. Usually there is some slight difference, but here there is from none at all much to the puzzlement of their superior officers. Both the 26-year-old twins obtained their "A" licenses with only 10 hours of flying. They are pictured returning from a training flight.

CANADIAN PERCHERON "ONE OF THE BEST"

A Miss America of the draft horse world, Monet, owned by Carl Roberts, St. Adolphe, Man., was named winner of fourth prize in a continent-wide Percheron "beauty contest." Competing with 55 other entries, Monet was declared one of the best Percheron mares on the continent by livestock judges.

BRITISH ENVOYS AT TOKYO PARLEY

To prepare for the parley now being held with Japan in an effort to settle the Anglo-Japanese differences in Japan, Major A. G. Herbert, RIGHT, the British consul at Tientsin, China, journeyed to Tokyo where he was photographed conferring with Sir Robert L. Craigie, the British ambassador to Japan. Craigie and Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita have announced that "a certain amount of progress" has been made toward settlement.

"POSITIVE PEACE PLAN"

R. S. Hudson, secretary for overseas trade in the British cabinet, is reportedly conferring with Dr. Helmuth Wohlat, German economic expert, to lay the foundation for the "positive peace plan" recently envolved by high British officials to calm Europe's troubled waters.

FORM STRONG AUSTRALIAN DAVIS CUP TEAM

JACK CRAWFORD ADRIAN QUIST JACK BROMWICH

Expected to have more than a large say in the resting place this year of the international tennis championship, as represented by the Davis Cup, are these players from Australia, a spot that has not had possession since 1919. In the first round play in the North American zone they defeated the Philippine islands team and next meet the winner of the matches between Cuba and Canada. At the moment they are competing in Americus tournaments. Crawford, a veteran of the tennis wars, is not expected to play in the more important series, and Quist and Broewich will probably carry the burden as they did last year.

LONDONERS, IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE, TURN TO BIBLE

A novel method of maintaining old interest and creating new in the best-seller of all time, is that used by St. Paul's church in London, where a Bible lies in a glass-topped case outside the church so that passersby may stop and glance at the passages that men for so many centuries have turned to. Each day the page is turned and the pedestrian is rare who does not stop, even for a moment, to read its lesson. A window-cleaner, a porter, a page boy and a mother and child are seen here as they peer beneath the glass cover.

Members of the Roslin Women's Institute, their families and friends gathered Thursday evening on the spacious lawns of Dr. and Mrs. Welsh for their July meeting. There were over sixty present.

Mrs. White presided and the meeting was opened with the singing of the Opening Ode, followed by repeating the Lord's Prayer. Roll Call was "Your favorite cake or cookie recipe." During the business period Mrs. D. Leslie and Mrs. W. C. Reynolds were appointed to attend the Local Leader Training Class in Vegetable Cookery which will be held next August at Melrose.

Mrs. G. Chapman, who was in charge of the programme, gave a delightful talk on the motto, "A smile is just like sunshine for cheering folks along." Several selections from the song sheets were sung. Master Ted Welsh gave a recitation, "Clean Up." Mrs. Charles Aletha Chapman gave a very enjoyable paper on the "Traits of a Teacher," telling of many interesting and some amusing incidents which have occurred during the years she has been teaching at Wheatley.

Partners were chosen and all joined in an alphabet contest, the prize winners were Mrs. W. Copeland and Miss H. Wilson. Brief talks were given by Dr. Welsh, Rev. Mr. Beaver and Rev. Mr. Macdonald.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Dr. and Mrs. Welsh for the use of their lawn for the meeting. The singing of the National Anthem brought the programme to a close, after which ice cream and cake were served and a social hour enjoyed.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 24 (CP)—In spiritless trading today on Toronto Exchange prices weakened slightly, base metal shares were the weakest. Turnover of 16,000 shares was about equal to the recent average.

Food issues showed general strength and miscellaneous issues were firmer. Building products firmed ¼ and ½ point. Gold shares added three points. Steels turned heavy and the utilities posted more declines than gains.

Price adjustments in the gold group were limited to a cent or two. Aunor, San Antonio and Perron were fairly active and steady. Smelters and Walle-Amulet were the weakest of the base metals.

Home oil, Brown and Calmont advanced a cent or two in the western oils.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 24 (AP)—Utilities and as a secondary special spurt brought in sufficient buying in today's stock market to partly offset declining tendencies elsewhere.

Steels, motors and rubbers backed away a point or so at the week's first tremne losses, however, were reduced in many cases near the final hour, although volume dwindled after fair activity in the morning. Transfers were about 1,100,000 shares.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, July 24 (CP)—Bacon hog prices were unchanged at yesterday's quotations today with Hamilton reporting highest price for dressedweights at $15.60.

Liveweights: Brantford $9.10; Hull $8.75.

Dressedweights: Brantford $12.25; Hamilton $12.40; Hull $12; Stratford $12 plus transportation, Barrie $12.25, London $12.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, July 24—(CP)—Calves 25 cents higher on the Toronto Livestock Market today while cattle trade continued dull with little trading on steers, heifers and cows. No prices were established for hogs and there were no lamb sales. There was no cattle holdover from Thursday.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: calves 1,400; hogs 1,500; sheep and lambs 1,250, cattle 4,180.

Prices were generally lower on steers, heifers or cows. Few bulls sold at $4.50-$5. Fed Calves were $7-$8 while some stockers brought $4.50-$5.50.

Choice veal calves were $8.25-$8.75 with a few as high as $9. Common sold down to $3.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $9.40-$9.50. Sheep were $2-$4 cwt.

New York, July 24.—(AP)—Led by the dean of the Colorado convicts who had to lose some fugitive bloodhounds, events in the United States took a distinctly mulish flavor, or last week.

A man convicted of forgery in Chicago was vouchsafed that his business was manufacturing 2.40.

Lawbreakers in Fort Worth, Tex., Police department was interrupted by six bandits, but a New York motorist who stopped to rip the fire alarm was given a parking ticket.

The dog catcher in Magnolia, N.J., was fined for having an unlicensed dog with a Legion of Hoboes of the world elected as Secretary a man with a wife and nine children, and a wrestler in Nashville, Tenn., bit a piece off the referee's ear.

A New York scientist announced that cheese was bad for mice . . . Retail recipients who applied for apartments in a New York low-cost housing project were rejected on the ground their incomes were too high . . . . Short a horse for haying, an Omaha farmer climbed into the harness himself.

Westchester County, N.Y., got a light bill for seven cents—and complained that it had been overcharged . . . A Coney Island grandmother's beauty contest was won by a great-grandmother . . . A retired Palmyra, Mo., man opened an office for his friends to loaf in.

A Beckley, Va., man sued both his first and second wives for divorce at the same time, and . . .

A Missouri Women's College president announced that the secret of managing women is "Drive when they ask of you, the first thing they ask, and they will never ask again whatever."

LABOR DEPUTY WARNS AGAINST APPEASEMENT

London, July 24—(CP)— Arthur Greenwood, Deputy Leader of the Labor Party, cautioned today that "if we are very apprehensive about the appeasement Great Britain would "almost inevitably drift into war."

Speaking to a conference of theatrical workers, he said:

"I am very apprehensive about the international outlook. I still have a feeling that if the Prime Minister could open his umbrella appeasement again he would be only too glad to do it."

HUDSON'S TALK

which we might look like bribery to Herr Hitler in order to buy peace" . . . Ne Intention, Says Chamberlain

"It is not the intention of my government to initiate any discussions of this kind," Mr. Chamberlain replied.

"I do not see any particular harm in this particular conversation," the Prime Minister said. "It was a personal conversation between Mr. Hudson and an official of the German side. The mischief, if mischief there is, was in the disclosure of what took place in the conversations or took place in the conversations or ers."

The Prime Minister's statement that he saw no harm in the meeting seemed to observers to dispel reports that Mr. Hudson would be forced to resign over the disclosure of his "secret mission."

The incident meanwhile has aroused skepticism in some circles that a return to the appeasement is just around the corner. Perhaps the Prime Minister's statement allayed this fear. In any event the disclosure by Mr. Hudson and Dr. Wohlthat held only a conversation has produced the biggest political sensation for the month.

Halifax's Statement

In the House of Lords Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax said Mr. Hudson's talk with Wohlthat was entirely "unofficial and private in its sense unusual."

A statement made by Lord Halifax in the House of Lords and subsequently by Sir Oswald Mosley in the Commons was in response to questions in the respective houses by Lord Snell and Mr. Attlee.

The statement said:

"I assume that the noble Lord (or member, in Commons) is referring to reports that have been in circulation during the last few days, taking exception of conversations between the secretary to the Department of Overseas Trade and Herr Wohlthat, economic adviser to Field Marshal Goering, Minister in charge of the German four-year plan.

"Herr Wohlthat was on a visit to this country as a German representative on the Economic Conference. It is also part of his responsibilities to discuss matters arising out of the refugee question. As far as I am aware, Herr Wohlthat's mission did not extend beyond these matters.

Often Meets Official.

"In the course of his other visits in recent years to this country Herr Wohlthat has met a number of officials and others who are concerned with trade and economic questions affecting the two countries, consideration of these matters forming part of Herr Wohlthat's normal duties.

"It was, accordingly, in no sense unusual that the secretary to the Department of Overseas Trade and Herr Wohlthat should meet and should discuss subjects in which they are mutually interested and for which they are respectively responsible in their official capacities.

"The secretary to the Department of Overseas Trade has reported to me that the conversations turned to such steps that might be taken to produce improvement in foreign trade of the principal manufacturing countries."

Wohlthat was here to attend a whaling conference and had been in session beyond that. Lord Halifax said, adding that the German and Mr. Hudson merely took the opportunity to discuss steps that might be taken to improve trade relations between Germany and Great Britain.

Reported Ass Aide

Mr. Hudson, he said, reported to him that the question of removing existing trade barriers had been discussed and that this led to talks of financial experts and that Wohlthat is to be taken to overcome initial difficulties.

Lord Halifax said that any views the junior minister expressed were his own and Mr. Hudson was emphatic that in conversation with Wohlthat.

"There is no justification whatever for stating or implying that these remarks, arising in the course of an unofficial conversation, constitute a proposal for a loan of this country to Germany," Lord Halifax declared.

AGREEMENT

can give assurances that nothing will be agreed in the forthcoming negotiations at Tientsin which is calculated to impair the sovereignty or to impair the right of this country to grant rights to the Chinese government for any purpose whatsoever."

"Yes, sir," Mr. Chamberlain replied. "The discussions do not go beyond to local issues at Tientsin."

Arthur Henderson, Labor member, asked if the discussions did not constitute de facto recognition of the Japanese sovereignty in those parts of China now under Japanese control.

"No," the Prime Minister replied.

Chamberlain Says "No"

Mr. Chamberlain replied "certainly not" to a question by Emanuel Shinwell, Labor member that a statement did not mean that "the government "as now definitely taken the side of the Japanese invasion."

Arthur Greenwood, Deputy Labor leader, then asked whether the Prime Minister's declaration em- bodied any change in British policy in regard to China.

"No," came the reply. "The declaration did not connote any change in British policy in regard to China."

Mr. Chamberlain sidestepped a question as to what interpretation is referred when he spoke of that under effective Japanese control.

Isolated buildings from the benches and the lone cry "shame- ful" from William Gallacher, Communist, greeted the Prime Minister's statement.

Realistic Attitude

Mr. Chamberlain told the House that the military situation in the concerned areas in China made it necessary for the British government to adopt a realistic attitude.

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax read the text of the agreement in the House of Lords and gave the following supplementary points of information:

"1. It was no part of the intention of the Japanese government to preclude His Majesty's government from making representations on behalf of British subjects.

"2. His Majesty's government is clear that in their view nothing in the formula affected the position and obligations of other powers. This view was considered by both parties as self-evident.

Anti-British Agitation

"3. His Majesty's Ambassador has represented to the Japanese government the great importance of discouraging press recriminations and exaggerated claims which can only prejudice the results of the negotiations on local issues now about to open.

"4. His Majesty's Ambassador has made strong representations on the subject of anti-British agitation. It is a matter of satisfaction as a result of the agreement which has now been reached this agitation will cease.

"Meanwhile the Japanese government, now that they had fixed their policy, could control agitation until the agreement came into force."

Tientsin Dispute

(The Peiping-Tientsin area arose originally from the assassination of a military governor's notorious official. Four Chinese whom the Japanese wanted in connection with the murder fled to the British concession and British authorities refused to hand them over on the grounds of insufficient evidence.

The Japanese military spokesmen subsequently widened the demands on British authorities, including requests that they hand over to the General Chiang Kai-Shek.

(The Tientsin crisis followed on the British and French concessions, with electrified fences strung around the barriers. British agreed to pass the barriers have been forced in many instances to disrobe).

97TH BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED

Mrs. Hercules Thompson, Everett Street, Has Been Life-Long Resident of City

Congratulations are being extended to Mrs. Hercules Thompson, Everett Street, who today celebrates her 97th birthday. A life-long resident of the city, Mrs. Thompson has a wide circle of friends in the community who extend sincere good wishes to her.

Although her health has not been of the best recently, Mrs. Thompson nevertheless takes a keen interest in things about her and the occasion of her birthday was marked with special interest.

I. R. A. Activities Stimulated by Foreign Organizations

London, July 24.—(CP) —Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare announced in the House of Commons today that information that the Terrorist activities of the illegal Irish Republican Army are being stimulated by foreign organizations".

He made his statement in moving the Second Reading of Emergency Legislation to help crush activities which have resulted in arrests of bombings in various parts of England.

He declared that the government early this year had found a "plan" under which terrorists attempts were to be organized. He produced a photostatic copy of the plan in the house.

"It is a very remarkable document," Mr. Samuel said. "It is not the kind of irresponsible melodrama. Government men sometimes discovers in searches of this sort. It is a very carefully worked out staff plan under which the IRA might be worked out by a general staff setting out in detail the way in which a campaign of sabotage could be successfully carried out against the country."

Shipwright Sees End of Strife in Moral Rearmament

Says Movement Will End 'Fear of Failure'

Monterey, Calif., July 24 (AP)—Lauren Cochran, a young shipwright from Scotland, told the First Moral Rearmamant Assembly Sunday that release from increasing labor and class strife lies in a moral awakening which would "make men live for nations instead of themselves, and create peace and economic security for the world.

2 SAFE-CRACKERS ATTEMPT ESCAPE

Pair Captured Within Ten Minutes of Their Break For Liberty

London, Ont., July 24 (CP)— A daring escape attempt by two safe-crackers from the county jail here from the county jail to city police headquarters, a distance of two blocks—from police headquarters to the county jail—was captured within 10 minutes by a posse of officers.

Alexander Meyers, 25, and Jack Rutnick, 24, both of Toronto, were trapped early Sunday morning in the basement of the county jail building. Appearing in city court this morning, following their second capture, they pleaded guilty to charges of breaking and entering and were remanded for sentence.

Meyers and Rutnick, shackled by their left wrists, made their break for liberty while being taken from their sorting them along a rear lane into the garage entrance of police headquarters. Running down a steep hill, Rutnick fell and the Thames River at Ridout Street claimed Meyers in the weeds for a few minutes. With that they managed to break open the handcuff with a stone.

The alarm was sent out on the police signal system. All officers found the fugitives in a few minutes. Rutnick showed fight but was subdued.

FIRE DESTROYS TWEED HOME

Three Children Rescued From Building by Toronto Motorists

Tweed, July 24 (Special)—A house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Vilneff and their three children in Tweed was totally destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. Mr. Vilneff and Mrs. Vilneff were unaware of their loss as they were away picking near Kaladar at the time of the fire. The children ranging in age from three years to an eighteen months-old baby were at home alone and probably would have been burned in the house had not two Toronto motorists, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Wychwood avenue, Toronto, been passing at the time. The tourists rushed into the burning house and carried the two children from the house safely. The fire was of unknown origin but is believed to have started from an overheated stove. The loss is estimated at $1,000.

HANGS SELF IN CELL

Napanee, Ont., July 24—(CP)— Body of William J. Keeley, North Fredericksburg Township farmer, was found hanging in a police cell here Saturday night, a few hours after he had been taken into custody. Keeley, a grain merchant, formerly conducted a grocery business in Kingston and had been in this district more than a year. Surviving is his widow.

JULY WHEAT LOWEST SINCE APRIL, 1933

Winnipeg, July 24 (CP)—July wheat slipped to 49 3-4 cents on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today to mark the first time since April, 1933, that any Winnipeg future price has traded below the 50-cent level. The low point was registered shortly before 11 o'clock. Moderate selling pressure and jazzy Continental cables contributed to the continued weakness which carried values to new lows. Prices at Liverpool and on United States markets also declined sharply.

MONEY PAID OVER

Jerusalem, July 24 (AP)—A. L. Adler, General Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. here, handed over an unspecified sum to an Intermediary at Bethlehem today for delivery to the kidnappers of Rev. G. R. Goldsmith, American clergyman abducted by Arabs six days ago.

STIRLING RESIDENT KILLED IN HIGHWAY

Woods Are Drier Than Ever Before Officials Declare

Three Small Bush Fires Are Reported in Waldie Township South and West of Sudbury

PROVINCE PARCHED

Fire Menace Rapidly Grows More Serious Say Officials of Forestry Department — Temperatures to Stay in High Eighties

Toronto, July 25—(CP)—Dominion Meteorological officials foresaw the possibility today the dry farm lands of Western Ontario might be scorched by thunderstorms tomorrow. Continued hot weather and no rainfall was the outlook facing farmers and orchardists throughout the remainder of the parched province for the next two days.

While agriculturists watched their crops anxiously and hoped for relief from the prolonged dry spell, forestry department officials were kept busy checking their districts as the fire menace grew more worse.

Officials from all sections of the province reported the woods drier than at any previous period this season. Two bush fires were reported in Waldie Township, 35 miles south of Sudbury, and another was burning near Webbwood, 40 miles west of that point.

Smoke Rock Fires

Two small bush fires are burning in the Rock Bay, Marie area, but both are under control.

Forestry officials in Sudbury said little fire fighting equipment is tied up in the three small fires and they are ready for any big fire which may break out in the forested bush country. In North Bay, the chief forester said there were no serious bush fires in his territory but the hazard is extremely high and all rangers are constantly on call.

Reeve Elzio Conner of the township of the front of Leeds and Lansdowne said he can see men out watching a fire raging in the bush near Lansdowne, near Kingston. The blaze broke out a week ago, passed across four farms and is burning on the fifth, but officials believe it will burn itself out.

Weather officials report the highest mark was recorded in the southwestern United States where heavy temperatures throughout Ontario up in the high 80s and possibly higher today and tomorrow.

New Threat to Farmers

The warm weather brought a new threat to farmers in Western Ontario, stating the possibility of a serious water shortage to the wories of burned up pastures in some districts.

District agricultural representatives in Windsor reported although the heat has brought no serious damage to crops as yet vegetables but continued absence of moisture would prove disastrous to farm products.

Fruits and field crops in the Niagara district were reported affected by the drought. Some farmers in the district are said to be worth cutting. Plums and peaches still are plentiful, but the yield will be lighter than expected. Vernon Johnstone found pin brother twisting in agony on the floor.

He summoned neighbors and they carried the stricken man to the Belleville General Hospital, but medical help was of no avail. He died a few minutes after arriving later. Provincial Police are investigating.

NOTED SURGEON DIES

Glasgow, July 25—(CP Cable)—Professor Archibald Young, distinguished surgeon and authority on skin grafting, who lost several of his fingers in the performance of X-ray experiments, died yesterday.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, July 25—(CP)—Pressure continues high over the southeastern states and on the Pacific coast and has decreased over northern Quebec, with a trough of low extending from the west coast of Hudson Bay to the southwest states.

Scattered showers have occurred in eastern Saskatchewan, Northern Ontario and Cape Breton, while in other parts of the Dominion fair weather has been fair and warm.

Lake Superior: Moderate southeast to south winds; fair and warm, Wednesday—Moderate to southerly winds; partly cloudy and warm with scattered thunderstorms.

Manitoba: Partly cloudy with scattered thundershowers tonight and early Wednesday, then fair; continuing warm.

Saskatchewan: Moderate or fresh southwest winds, mostly fair and warm; scattered thundershowers in southeastern portion Wednesday—Northwest to west winds; mostly fair and warm.

Alberta: Mostly fair today and Wednesday; not much change in temperature.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Atmospheric pressure and climate! Temperature and wind, rain and sunshine take up most of the space in descriptions of climate. Pressure is seldom discussed and indeed it may be omitted. Pressure changes do occur when "lows" and "highs" pass over a place, but these changes are not normally noticed. Permanent changes in pressure are met with only when changes in elevation are made, and these changes must be decided to be felt. Pressure does influence evaporation which increases when pressure diminishes.

5,000 Suspects Watched Night and Day in Britain

London, July 25—(CP)—Britain was set today for a fierce forward-thrust against any further Irish Republican sabotage and terrorism with official estimates that 5,000 suspects were under day and night surveillance.

Official sources said the "suspects" are being watched by Scotland Yard and military intelligence service men. They also stated there would be an "immediate" round-up upon execution of the governmental emergency bill designed to crush the campaign of terror.

Raids on homes of known I.R.A. members and sympathizers would be part of the measure between the powers granted by the measure, it was said, and "many" might be deported forthwith.

The bill sped forward to final passage before parliament's scheduled adjournment Aug. 4 after an appeal by Premier Neville Chamberlain. Samuel Hoare, who declared I.R.A. terrorism was "alienating" the sympathy organizations" and timed to coincide with international crise.

UNIFICATION NOT A SOLUTION TO RAILWAY PROBLEM

Conservative Leader Manion Gives This Opinion at Smiths Falls

POLICY ANNOUNCED

If Elected Would Appoint Non-Political Board to See Cooperation Carried Out

Smith's Falls, Ont., July 25—(CP)—Conservative Leader R. J. Manion's plan for effecting economies in railway operations while preserving the separate and independent status of both the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railway systems before the electors.

Briefly it involves appointment of a non-political board to see that the economies measure between the two systems are carried out; compensation by pension for railway employees affected; and co-ordination; federal-provincial co-operation in the matter of forms of taxation; road, rail, water, and air on a fair competitive basis as to freight and passenger rates; refunding of Canadian National securities at lower interest rates; liquidation of debts out of politics and building up Canada through transportation than tearing down the railways.

MINTO FARMER FOUND DYING

J. M. Johnstone Succumbs Shortly After Being Taken to His Home

Found writhing in agony on the barn floor shortly after nine o'clock today, James M. Johnstone, twenty eight year old Minto farmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnstone, succumbed in his home only a few minutes after medical help arrived.

A bottle containing carbolic acid dropped from a pocket of Johnstone's overalls. Dr. Ferguson pronounced him to his home, while strong odor of the acid was still present around his face. Dr. W. Ned Ellis, Stirling physician, summoned to the scene by the deceased's wife day, Dr. E. A. Carleton, coroner, said that an inquest would be held.

Mr. Johnstone is stated, had been melancholy and worried of late over failure of crops. Chance remarks by him to the deceased in the effect "that I won't be here long" were recalled to members of the family.

The deceased man left his home this morning at 8.30 o'clock, they say, noon, to spray anti-bug poison on his potato patch. He entered the barn, it is stated, and walked to a neighbor's house. Returning some minutes later, Mrs. Vernon Johnstone found pin brother twisting in agony on the floor.

He summoned neighbors and they carried the stricken man to the Belleville General Hospital, but medical help was of no avail. He died a few minutes after arriving later. Provincial Police are investigating.

"WE'VE SCARED THAT BLOKE ACROSS CHANNEL," SAYS MAN OF 87

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, July 25—(CP)—Charles Ott, 87-year-old Londoner, arrived aboard the liner Ascania last night minus his gas-mask — but it didn't really matter, because he've scared that bloke across the channel."

Absence of the gas mask proved a disappointment to ship reporters who had never seen one. Reports from London when Ott was preparing to sail said he was bringing one along because "you never know what might happen these days." His son-in-law mistook the gas mask and this was a disappointment to Ott also.

The retired decorator, who came to meet his daughter in Montreal for the first time in 31 years, doesn't expect a war.

Asked what he thought of the international situation he fingered his snowy Van Dyke, peered through bushy eyebrows and said: "Well, I haven't seen a paper for eight or nine days but I'll bet there'll be no war. When Poland said to Hitler, 'come on if you want but we'll have bayonets fixed' that fixed him proper."

The trip to see his daughter, Mrs. Ellen Blackwell of Montreal, was his first visit to America. Wonder for Ott, who never before had been at sea. He wagged a finger at one reporter: "If I was rich, mind you, I'd be going back and forth all the time."

And seasickness didn't bother him a bit. Aside from a touch of deafness, he's good for "at least another 20 years."

He was eating more than he did at home but then the trip "sure bucked me up," he said.

He told about his work as a decorator. Started at the age of eight, he did it until he was 77. In 1924, when constant handling of chemicals used in his work crippled his hands, he quit.

BRITAIN, FRANCE OFFER RUSSIA MILITARY PACT

This Pact Will Form Part of Three-Power Anti-Aggression Treaty

A NEW CONCESSION

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 25—(CP Cable)—Great Britain and France have offered Soviet Russia a military agreement to form part of the proposed three-power anti-aggression treaty, informed sources reported today.

The Anglo-French terms were conveyed Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov, Sir William Seeds, the British Ambassador, and Jacques Ambassador, Paul Naggier, are turning on this proposal, which envisages immediate conclusion of

PILOT IS KILLED AS PLANE FALLS INTO WOODS

HOME IS WINNIPEG

Camp Borden, Ont., July 25—(CP)—Pilot Officer Ernest Francis Devlin, 22, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, was killed Monday when the machine he was flying crashed into the woods near here, it was announced today.

The deceased man left his home in Winnipeg on the previous day, noon, to spray anti-bug poison on his potato patch. He entered the barn, it is stated, and walked to a neighbor's house. Returning some minutes later, Mrs. Vernon Johnstone found pin brother twisting in agony on the floor.

He summoned neighbors and they carried the stricken man to the Belleville General Hospital, but medical help was of no avail. He died a few minutes after arriving later. Provincial Police are investigating.

No Impropriety In Discussion of Hudson and Export

London, July 25.—Meanwhile reports that Robert Hudson, secretary to the Department of Overseas Trade, might be forced to resign were stilled by Prime Minister Chamberlain's public exoneration of him in the House of Commons yesterday.

Mr. Chamberlain said there was no impropriety in Mr. Hudson's discussing with Dr. Helmut Wohlthat, German trade expert, possibilities of enabling Germany to return to a policy of negotiation and discussion instead of the bugs bear and a colonial settlement.

ARAB IS CAPTURED

Jerusalem, July 5 (CP-Havas)—Yousse Fahdou Durra, an Arab accused of leading three Arab attacks in the northern Samaria zone of Palestine during the past two years, was captured today by Trans-Jordan troops.

FARMERS HOPE FOR HEAVY RAIN TO HELP CROPS

In Some Places Water Shortage Threatened Due to Drought

BUSH FIRES FEARED

By The Canadian Press

Ontario farmers hope nature will outdo the weatherman and that scattered showers forecast for today in many parts of the province will result in drenching rains to bring relief to parched lands and shrivelled crops.

Rain, hail and wind brought destruction to grain and vegetable crops along a narrow strip in Toronto area Sunday, while Hamilton district got a heavy fall of rain and hail. But for the most part, the rest of the province continued to suffer from drought.

A threatened water shortage was added to the worries of Western Ontario farmers. Wells are running dry and hundreds of cattle and horses cattle to nearby streams for water. Agriculturists expect heavy crop losses if rain does not come soon.

With summer well up, hay is being fed to cattle to maintain milk production. Tomato crops generally are behind normal development and potatoes are faring poorly; but fields of corn in the West-ern Ontario yesterday came at Ridgetown, where a heavy rain and hail storm scattered corn and tobacco crops.

Heat continued to bake the Niagara Peninsula, source of most of Ontario's $5,000,000 crop, in the Leamington area farmers feared quality of the onion crop would be affected unless rain came within a week.

Northern Ontario farmers were an exception, as they welcomed the warm weather which is hastening their crops and permit stacking of hay. The section was blessed with plentiful rainfall during June and early officials feared continued heat would add to the danger of forest fires.

PSYCHO-THERAPEUTIC PRACTICE IS REJECTED

Aberdeen, Scotland, July 25—(CP)—The British Medical Association yesterday by 102 votes to 75 a proposal to recognize psychotherapeutic practice by the clergy and allow certain persons to use it.

The decision was taken following a report by the association's health committee of the association recommending that the law prohibit any splat should not be used in treatment only if the patient had been recommended to him by a registered medical practitioner, and that the lay psycho-therapist should have undergone an approved course of training.

CLAIMS HERRIDGE DIVIDES PROGRESSIVE FORCES IN CANADA

Ottawa, July 25 (CP)—Instead of uniting the progressive forces in Canada, Hon. W. D. Herridge's Social Democratic movement are in fact dividing those forces to the apparent delight of the Conservatives, declared Executive of the Co-operate Commonwealth Federation asserted today in a statement issued by M. J. Coldwell, M.P., its National chairman.

The statement, he said, was intended to explain why the C.C.F. will not be represented in any way with Mr. Herridge and his movement in the next election campaign. Mr. Herridge himself is likened to "a self-appointed general in search of an army which is to follow him blindly."

WHEAT PRICE IS PERPLEXING TO ECONOMISTS

Corn is Lowest Price in Six Years, Wheat in Seven

WHEAT INTO STORAGE

Condition Reflects General European and World Situation

By FRANKLIN MULLIN
Associated Press Market Writer

Chicago, July 25—(AP)—A collapse of grain prices far below levels the United States government deems compatible with farm prosperity today gave the grain trade the most puzzling problem in years.

Wheat values are scraping seven-year lows and while corn is the lowest in six years. Rye and oats also are in a price slump to record lows. This is the situation despite the United States government's efforts to support wheat at a higher level. It reflects world conditions to a large extent.

Loans on Wheat

This does not mean, however, that current low market prices are figure anxiously and figure they are selling their major grain crops many are, but a record-breaking volume of wheat is going into storage, most of it under government financing producers a price well above the market.

Much of the commercial supply of 1938 corn also is stored under loans at a higher than market prices and loans are expected to figure to be advanced on the new crop when it is harvested.

Even so, the drop of values so far below these guaranteed prices has many traders stumped. Before the start of trading today, wheat for September delivery was quoted at around 60 1-2 cents, lowest in 10 months and with the exception of the September option, the lowest in seven years. A year ago the price was close to 70 cents; five years ago it was around 90 cents and ten years ago it was the first of June.

World Values Slump

The average loan offered to American farmers on 1939 wheat is 61 cents, which compares with prices ranging now down to 55 cents and even lower in the country. In Chicago, No. 2 hard and red winter has been the basis of the government with current quotations for actual grain around 57 cents. On June, 1939, so-called "parity" price of wheat was 81 cents.

Sagging wheat prices in the United States are part of a worldwide slump in grain quotations. At Liverpool and Winnipeg, where Canadian wheat is traded, new record lows are being written up on the blackboards. Liverpool's quotations are the lowest in nine months; Winnipeg's the lowest in six years.

SAYS LOW-INCOME GROUPS FAIL TO GET SUFFICIENT FOODS

Berkeley, Calif., July 25 (CP)—Dean Lemuel Stanley of the University of Toronto today told the Pacific Science Congress that a survey made in Ontario had proven that low-income family groups failed to obtain sufficient quantities of the vitamins and minerals necessary to maintain a sound body.

He said the survey indicated that most families received only 75 per cent of the calories they should have, only 50 per cent of calcium, 86 percent of iron, and only 69 percent of needed vitamins.

SHAW LOSES LITTLE MENTAL VIGOR AS HE REACHES 83rd BIRTHDAY

London, July 25—(CP)—"I leave the delicacies of retirement to those who are gentlemen first and literary workmen afterward. The cart is the trumpet for me."

Bernard Shaw didn't have his tongue in his cheek when he wrote that.

The Irish playwright will be 83 tomorrow. He'll have a new play at his Irish—on the boards shortly thereafter.

At 83, G. B. S. has lost little of his mental vigor and there are few signs that he will begin succumbing to feel the years even physically. Only such trifles as deafness in one ear, difficulty in walking up the four flights to his flat in London, or occasionally returning to

William Tulloch Dies in Hospital After Accident

Spreading Gravel When Knocked Down and Run Over by Truck Owned by Contracting Company

INQUEST ORDERED

Man Sustained Severe Chest and Abdominal Injuries and Succumbed on Operating Table in Hospital

After being run over by a construction truck seven miles south of Belleville on Highway No. 14, 52-year-old William Tulloch, Stirling highway worker, died in the Belleville General Hospital early today without regaining consciousness after the accident this morning. Tulloch was employed by the Bituminous Spray and Contracting Company of Toronto, which was engaged in facing Highway No. 14 immediately south of Belleville and while spreading loose gravel upon the highway was knocked down and run over by a company truck, driven by Ernest Hemming, Number 2 Highway, Belleville, it was stated by Provincial Police, Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Ruker, Trenton, has ordered an inquest.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tulloch, Stirling. William Tulloch was a married man and leaves a wife and family of grown-up children. He recently procured employment with the Turnpike road construction company with which he was working, when he sustained fatal injuries this morning. The injured man was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital by a passing tourist, who gave his name as Robert Langdon, Toronto address.

Immediately taken to the operating room, Tulloch succumbed to his injuries shortly after 10.00 a.m. this morning. He had sustained severe chest and abdominal injuries, it was stated when run over by a large construction truck, loaded with gravel. Internal hemorrhages made the injuries fatal, Dr. G. C. Kennedy stated after attending the man.

Leveling Gravel

Tulloch was employed to level gravel upon the highway after it had been spread by large construction trucks. The truck driven by Hemming was backing up and spreading the gravel, with Tulloch employed to level the gravel. The truck driven by Hemming was backing up and spreading the gravel, with Tulloch employed to level the gravel. The accident was witnessed by a number of persons, it is believed by Russel Peat, Toronto, and Provincial Police state that Tulloch must have slipped on the loose gravel and fallen backwards under the wheels of the mammoth truck, that passed over the centre of his prostrate body before the driver could sound alarm or caution to the driver.

"He was supposed to be following the truck and spreading the gravel, but we know now that he was not at the rear of the truck, where the gravel was being spread upon the highway," Provincial Police Constables Wm. McBrien and W. E. Brown, who made the investigation, stated adding that Tulloch was employed to follow behind trucks as they spread the gravel.

DICKENS' MANUSCRIPT IS SOLD FOR $6,550

LONDON, July 25.— (CP)—The autograph manuscript of "A Christmas Carol," which Charles Dickens wrote for his children, was sold at Sotheby's auctioneers today for $1,400 (about $6,550) to the New York firm of A. S. W. Rosenbach Co. The manuscript was not known outside the Dickens family until 1931—on the boards shortly thereafter.

At 83, G. B. S. has lost little of his mental vigor and there are few signs that he will begin succumbing to feel the years even physically. Only such trifles as deafness in one ear, difficulty in walking up the four flights to his flat in London, or occasionally returning to his country place at Ayot St. Lawrence, Hertfordshire, in a taxi instead of on his spindly legs from his walks which have always been his chief exercise, and loss of appetite, he says in Who's Who, is "anything but sports."

These are but trifles offset by that complexion till pink and white, and his mind still busy enough to leave many a youngster gasping.

His latest play, "St. Joan," King Charles' Golden Days" will have its debut Aug. 7 at the Malvern Drama Festival. His "Geneva" was first seen there a year ago. G. B. S. prides himself on having written a historical play about King Charles's golden days. He once wrote and told his friends, snubs Neil Gwynne in favor of "really interesting people."

FISHING EXCURSION HAD MANY THRILLS

Captain W. H. Pemberton of Detroit, Dr. R. Meek of Toronto, and James Cook of Trent River, a guide, yesterday experienced a fishing trip which will probably remain in memory.

Setting out in the morning the party managed to catch the day's limit of black bass, a string which was hooked on the end of the boat. Soon after starting for home the engine failed to function. Investigation proved the string holding the fish had wrapped tightly around the propeller.

They paddled the launch to the nearby dock and after landing the dock collapsed, throwing all three into the deep water. Captain Pemberton and James Cook reached shore but were forced to return to the water to assist Dr. Meek. When the damage was repaired the fish were towed from the end of the boat, but nearing home the string slipped from the grasp of the captain's hand and the catch sank beyond recovery.

ROTARY OFFICERS MEET AT NORTH BAY

Presidents and secretaries of Rotary Clubs of District 186 gathered at North Bay yesterday for a meeting of one day convention. Welcome was extended the visitors by Mayor Arthur Beattie, and Walter Little, president of the North Bay Board of Trade. A. Owen Herity of this city, newly elected District Governor replied to the welcome and thanked the visitors, while during the afternoon brief addresses were delivered by Dr. Grant L. Bird, Oshawa; Sidney McMichael, Toronto; Rev. Earl Leslie, Sudbury, and John J. Gibson, Toronto, and others.

QUALITY OF CHEESE HIGH DESPITE DROUGHT

Though milk production through this section of the eastern section is down an estimated twenty-five per cent below normal due to dry pastures and extended drought, as yet the quality of cheese being produced has not been noticeably affected, it was stated by Mr. J. L. Irwin, Dominion Dairy Grader of the local office. Production is holding up fairly well in spite of the difficulties faced by makers and good quality has been maintained this season, it is stated.

SKILLED LABOR SCARCE HERE

A dearth of skilled labor is reported in the city at the present time due to heavy construction of new homes and reddecorating, the services of experienced carpenters, plasterers and masons have been particularly in demand lately, it was reported by a local contractor today.

Reports of heavy building in Belleville lately have resulted in the invasion of the city by skilled artisan workmen from outside points, but few if any local tradesmen desire the services of workmen not of the city, it was stated.

FIELD INSPECTOR VISITS RESERVE

R. J. Sexsmith, field inspector for the Dominion Government Department of Agriculture, in connection with the weevil control campaign, completed the annual inspection of the Tyendinaga Indian Reserve where he spent several days examining orchards in the district, prior to visit other Reserves of the province. Mrs. Sexsmith who accompanied her husband on the visit, her daughter, Mrs. J. R. Smith and Mr. Smith at their summer camp near Napanee.

EXHIBITION CHEESE ALREADY RECEIVED

First specimens of the world's best cheddar cheese which will be entered as competitive exhibits at the British Empire Cheese and Dairy Exhibition, the world's largest dairy fair, to be held in this city in November next are now being received at the Trenton Cold Storage where they will be held. The first cheese are from Central Ontario makers, though others will be received from as far as South Western Ontario, New Zealand, and other possessions of the British Empire.

To further plans of the exhibition, a meeting of the executive of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association will be held in the local office of J. L. Irwin, Dominion Dairy Grader, on Wednesday evening.

TURTLES PLENTIFUL IN THIS DISTRICT

The Bay of Quinte area appears to be a perfect breeding ground for turtles of the mud and snapping variety, but in Belleville district there appears to be no end to them, even when an offer of purchase for the amphibians is made, according to the report of a Columbus, Ohio, visitor who last evening made the rounds of the waterfront enquiring the possibilities of securing steady shipments of them.

Though the purpose of purchase of the turtles was not disclosed to the visitor, prices of from ten to twenty-five cents each for fairly large ones were said offered by him. At that price there were no takers, he is said to have told a resident. It is theorized that the buyer may have had visions of supplying restaurants and food delicatessies stores of Ohio with the Bay of Quinte turtles if they are plentiful enough to caught to make the shipments from here worth while.

The present season has been a highly productive one for the turtles, it was added by local fishermen.

FIRE BELIEVED SET BY CHILDREN

Fire believed to have been set by children at play threatened a summer resort at Cove Bay on the Trent River yesterday, and resulted in a turn out of neighbors of the section to fight the creeping blaze through fields and bush. All that saved a colony of cottages owned by Fred Smith was a change in the wind, it was stated.

The children, a boy and girl who were believed responsible for the start of the fire sat in a boat some distance from shore in the river fearing the wrath of nearly one hundred men from Campbellford area who formed a bucket brigade from the river to extinguish the blaze which raced along a wide area.

KITTENS TAKEN TO CITY MARKET IN BIRD CAGE

Boy Wrongly Accuses Falines of Having Eaten Canary

NO BIRD IN IT

"Her, mister, two cats have eaten your bird," a shrill boyish voice called out in sudden alarm on the city market this morning. In a birdcage placed on the hood of a car two small kittens slept peacefully through the heat of the morning.

The excited boy pointed to the sleeping kittens and cried, "Look, mister," he cried, "you ain't no bird there now."

The vendor smiled. "Don't worry, son," he said, "There wasn't any bird in the cage in the first place."

Another boy, overall clad, emerged from the cool recesses of the car. "Aw, mister, shootin' about," he said to his excited counterpart. "Those kittens didn't get no bird. I just brought 'em to market to sell." Then waxing confidential he said "Say, don't you want want to buy one? I'll sell 'em for ten cents each."

The kittens slept peacefully on, unaware of the mild furore they had created in the heart of a young boy.

FIRE BRIGADE KEPT ON RUN

No Damage Done by Two Fires Monday Afternoon and Evening

Thought to have started from spontaneous combustion forming in piles of refuse taken from retorts of the gas plant and used as a filler, fire gave city fire squads a busy time right on the lower Front Street towards the docks. The blaze smouldered deep in the piles of refuse before breaking out into flames that destroyed a section of the filler. Fire squads confined it to its own area, however, and no damage was done.

Grass ignited on a vacant lot near the store of Tommy Mason, Cannifton Road, yesterday afternoon burned an area one hundred feet long before it was gotten under control.

Firemen and residents of the district watched the flames burn down the long grass, extinguishing the blaze when it threatened nearby buildings.

Many Small Arms Not Yet Registered

The period of annual registration of small fire-arms, such as revolvers and rifles, has passed but police still have surplus allotments of application blanks, which are still available to the general public.

Application blanks may be obtained from Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Ontario Provincial police, or the game and fish department offices, now that the 1938 registrations have expired.

The date of expiration was June 30th; 1939, but still there are numerous small arms which have not been registered, police revealed today. "We have received communications from the Federal Government that all small fire arms, such as revolvers, rifles, etc., must be registered immediately and a'so learned that there are many delinquents in this matter here in Belleville," warned Chief Kidd today as he pointed out that the period of expiration for the 1938 licenses had long since expired.

Canadian Heads Of Sourdoughs To Broadcast

Michael Mahoney, President of the International Sour Dough Association and widely-known ,Ottawa, Ontario, resident, will be the guest speaker when the "Back to the People" programme tonight at 9 p.m.

Mahoney, more familiarly known as "Mike" will relate some of his adventures during the Gold Rush Days. It was at this time he became personally acquainted with "Sam McGee", "Dangerous Dan McGrew," and the "Lady Known as Lou", made famous by Robert W. Service in his poems of the Klondike.

Mr. Mahoney's wide experiences along the "Trail of '98" ultimately led him to become president of the International Sour Dough Association, the membership of which is comprised of the people who sought wealth in the Klondike when it was one of the world's last frontiers. Mike Mahoney's lectures and talks on Klondike days are familiar to thousands who have heard him lecture in Canada and the United States.

RASPBERRIES ARE PLENTIFUL

Few Changes in Prices on City Market Are Noted Today

Little or no change was noted in farm, garden and dairy produce at the city market today where a good early week trade was on display.

Raspberries were plentiful with quotations steady at three boxes of "blues" for twenty-five cts or seven cents the box by the quart basket. "Reds" were offered at ten cents per box although later prices dropped to three boxes for twenty-five cents.

Shelled green peas were offered at thirty cents the quart; home-grown tomatoes at twenty cents the berry box and new beets, carrots, cucumbers and radishes at five cents the bunch. Potatoes were firm at thirty and thirty-five cents the peck. String beans were quoted at ten cents per box.

A few eggs were asked at twenty-five cents the dozen. Red and white currants sold at the box with the black variety moving well at twenty-five cents. Cherries sold at from sixty to eighty cents the six-quart basket according to variety.

Business was fairly brisk during the early hours, with the last keeping away the usual "just-before-noon" crowd of buyers.

Obituary

LATE GEORGE TURNCLIFFE (Lambeth Lake)

There passed away last Friday at Jamieson Lake, Ontario, George Turncliffe at the ripe age of 86. Mr. Turncliffe was the earliest settler in these parts and has been identified for years with the life of this community. His experience of early settler's days in the district surrounding Bancroft were many. France, England Honor Bleriot

Paris, July 25 (AP)—France and Great Britain today honored the 30th anniversary of Louis Bleriot's pioneering airplane flight over the English Channel.

Bleriot crossed the channel from a point near Calais July 25, 1909, in a three-cylinder five-horsepower wooden and canvas craft which with its weight and fuel weighed about 660 pounds. His hop of 23½ miles took 37 minutes.

The French Air Minister, Guy La Chambre, planned to attend a dinner tonight in London in honor of Bleriot's flight and to discuss Anglo-French aviation preparations.

SQUIRRELS FED AT DOORSTEPS

Food supplies stored away last winter by squirrels may be reaching the bottom of the "bin", but that dont does not bother "Nigger", sleek black squirrel, pet of the children in the vicinity of Church and East Bridge Streets.

Every morning, "Nigger" appears promptly on the lawn of the home of by houses, scampering on his haunches and begging for his breakfast. He takes nuts from the hands of the children, and after eating his fill, if given nuts that aren't cracked, will bury them in the lawn.

Again at eight o'clock in the evening, "Nigger" puts up for his supper. He lives in the maple trees that border East Bridge Street at the Church Street intersection.

There are other "Niggers" in this town, One lives on Catherine Street near Thomas Street and he accepts walnuts out of the hand of a young lassie. He is a real pet. Another, One morning there was heard a scratching at the door of the house and it was naturally thought the household cat was wanting in. Wagee had somehow learned the trick, for it was he who was before the door. This squirrel has a lot of troubles as cats watch him, but do not molest him. He is constantly in the town, and is a tree batle with him, swooping down at the animal as he is perching at the foot of the nearest branch to branch to gain a foot log.

On West Bridge Street near Ridley Ave. lives a black squirrel which comes regularly on a light of verandah steps to the top and there takes from the hand of the householder skelled meat of nuts.

Police Blotter

During the absence of the family on Sunday, burglars entered the home of Bert High, 151 Lingham Street and stole jewellery and men's wearing apparel, city police were informed this morning.

Two ladies' gold watches, two pairs of men's trousers, five dollars taken from a child's savings bank, and other articles of men's wearing apparel constituted the loot stolen, Mr. High informed the police. Entrance was gained through the side door. Neighbors later informed Mr. High that two tramps were seen loitering about Lingham Street late Sunday afternoon, and it is believed they responsible for the robbery.

Toronto police apprehended a man, whose name was given as James Wiskin, of this city, and are holding him on a charge of vagrancy. Wiskin is said to be quite well known to police in this city, and after a search of his person and effects was found on the lad's person and he was detained pending further investigations. Wiskin is said to be being held under age.

The present heat wave, that has been in evidence throughout this district of late, has resulted in a general decline in the absence of transients seeking lodgings at the police station, it was stated today. Only three have applied for sleeping quarters since last Saturday night.

Later a complete list of the entire day's program of water and land sports will be published by the Rotary Club and which is expected to be the most stupendous sporting event ever to be presented in this province. No effort is being spared in the completion of arrangements and assure a gala outing for the many thousands, who are expected at Massassaga Park for the initial Rotary Club Regatta on Civic holiday.

Loan Agreement Not in Sight With Poland

London, July 25 (CP)—The British and French governments have found it impossible to reach agreement with Poland on the terms of the proposed cash loan to the latter, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons today.

The chancellor said arrangements are being completed by the payment of £8,000,000 (37,440,000) commercial export credit to Poland to facilitate Polish purchases in this country or defence materials.

Negotiations for the proposed cash loan have fallen through, however, because of failure to agree on the date of advance, which was to have totalled £5,000,000 from Britain and £5,000,000 from France (23,400,000) from France.

Adam Koc, head of the Polish delegation, was understood to have informed Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, British envoy, this morning that Poland preferred to let the negotiations for the loan drop rather than accept Britain's terms.

Negotiations for the cash loan hit a snag when the Poles demanded that it be made in gold The British government desired to make the loan in sterling.

Careless Parenthood Called Injurious

Liverpool, England, July 25 (CP) — The Methodist conference of Great Britain last night condemned careless parenthood in relation to social order and endorsed birth control "in the positive aim of producing in the children fathers of the healthiest possible way."

The report on the Christian view of marriage, called by one commentator the most frank ever made by a Christian church on the subject, was adopted after a large majority of the delegates.

It said: "Scripture can be cited in favor of sexual continence and added that "no Christian judgment" is considerable for rearing a healthy family.

FOUR FAMILIES GO BACK HOME

Fourteen Germans Disheartened by Treatment Received in This Country

The fourteen, making up four families, returned disheartened at the treatment they claimed they received in their adopted land. They left Montreal, Sask., since Germany became the centre of world interest.

Standing resolutely by his wife, son and grandchildren on the liner's deck last night, the patriarch of the group, Hugo Schilling, related:—

"When I came to Canada 10 years ago, everything was fine. But people were friendly. But when the newspapers began printing about the situation in Europe, the friendliness disappeared. Finally we could stand it no longer, the hate of everything German we couldn't stand.

"Why!—we even had some of our former neighbors stop us on the street and tell us that we and every Jew forced out of Germany they would hang one of us!"

There were fourteen persons in the group—four husbands, their wives and their children—and they said 79 more families were leaving later. They were going to Thuringia, and although they didn't know what they will do when they get there, are confident that everything will be all right.

"find something."

Their farms in Canada they sold to the C.N.R. Land Association, Schilling said, which already had prospective buyers—refugees from Germany.

Dr. Hett Turns Cancer Formula Over to Commission

Kitchener, Ont., July 25 (CP)— Announcement was made here today by Dr. J. E. Hett of Kitchener that he has turned over to the Ontario Cancer Commission his formula for the treatment of cancer.

For a number of years Dr. Hett has declined to reveal the secret of his formula to any established medical body without first getting Provincial sanction of his claim.

Dr. Hett in handing over the formula reserves the right personally to treat patients who are definitely established cancer cases.

The patients are to be selected by the Commission and the treatment administered by Dr. Hett. Records of these cases will, it is expected, be a basis for the commission's report on the Hett claims.

Baptists Honor Lieut.-Governor

Atlanta, Ga., July 25 (CP)—Nomination of Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, to the post of treasurer for the west of the Baptist World Alliance was announced today.

The Alliance's Committee on Nominations issued a list of nominations to be submitted to the sixth Baptist World Congress meeting here. Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke of London was nominated for president, with Dr. W. O. Lewis of Paris nominated to succeed Dr. Rushbrooke as secretary of the organization.

SEVENTY-NINE PERCENT LACK DENTAL CARE

by McKEOWN'S DRUG STORE

Not long ago it was estimated that seventy-nine percent of the American population received no attention from dentists — almost unbelievable, isn't it?

If an estimate of the number of children only were made, that astonishing figure would be much larger, when it is remembered that the majority of children need dental care.

Parents will have cause, always to view with pleasurable retrospect their decision, now, to have a dental survey made of children's teeth and do such work as is found necessary for the preservation of those teeth.

Bad teeth constitute an insurmountable handicap to health, study, play, but that handicap can be eliminated through the services of an experienced ethical dentist, one who has the confidence of the community.

To what a dentist will now be less than required later. Vacation time is a good time to do it.

This is the sixth of a series of McKeown's Drug Store advertisements appearing in this paper each Tuesday.

JULIEN POIRIER DIES IN PARIS

One of Two Newspapermen Held for Investigation of Nazi Propaganda

Paris, July 24.—(AP)—Julien Poirier one of two Paris newspaper employees arrested in the French Government's investigation of Nazi propaganda, died last night in Claemart Military hospital following an operation for a stomach ulcer, the newspaper Le Figaro reported today.

Poirier had held a position in the Advertising Department of Le Figaro until his arrest about two weeks ago.

"Poirier's death wipes out judicial action in what concerned him personally," Le Figaro said, "but the motives of the charges against him still remain to be made public."

Minto

Minto—Mrs. Robt. Jeffrey of Tweed is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hagerman.

Mr. and Mrs. McCormick, Mrs. Tom Farrell, Messrs. Sam and Alfred Pollock of Kincardine spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sarles.

Those who attended the Bateman picnic in Tweed on Wednesday were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clements and Miss Eva Farrell, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Vance, Mr. and Mrs. George McMaster and family and Miss Ethel Hagerman, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bristol.

An exciting ball game was held at Ivanhoe on Tuesday evening for second ball between the Junior Lake and Minto, the score being 15-13 in favor of Minto. On Friday evening the first of the finals will be played between Ivanhoe and Minto at Ivanhoe.

The Misses Margaret and Edie Mayo spent a few days recently with Mrs. Dick Reid.

On July 5th a large number of neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Clapp to honor them on their recent marriage and welcome them to our community. They were presented with a large number of gifts for which they thanked their friends. The evening was spent in getting acquainted with the young couple and lunch was served after which every one departed for their various homes wishing the young couple every happiness.

Mrs. John Heagle of the 4th line has been visiting at the home of Mrs. Thomas Sine and Mr. and Mrs. George Johnston.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Jeffrey of Tweed were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hagerman.

Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnston were Mr. Harvey Johnston of Frankford, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Heagle and Mr. George Heagle of Wellmans.

UNIFICATION

Cooperation Has Not Failed

Co-operation has not failed because it has not been tried, said Dr. Manion. Increase co-operation 75 to 90 per cent of the savings possible by unification could be achieved without creating a monopoly, building up a political unit which might control governments, or risking other evils almost certain to flow from unification. Unification was not a solution to the railway problem, since it could not save more than $25,000,000, and not $12,000,000 or $13,000,000 of this applicable to the C.N.R. would not wipe out the deficit.

In elaborating his position on the railway questions before an audience of 4,000 in this railway centre the Conservative leader issued a challenge to the King government to come out in opposition to unification.

Failed to Give Reason

Transport Minister Howe, in his speech Saturday at nearby Silver Lake, had failed to give any reasons why unification should not be undertaken. No member of the King government had done so, Dr. Manion maintained.

Dr. Manion said he believed the government is opposed to unification, but it should "have a little more guts and say so." Actually the government was trying to please the financial interests who favored unification and at the same time not alarm the railwaymen who opposed it.

Canada's railway problem was due to over-building of lines and the development of the automobile. These were aggravated by extravagance in the years from 1922 to 1930. When the Conservatives came into office in 1930 they found that in the pre-election year the Canadian National Railways had made commitments of $250,000,000 partly for political reasons.

Starting Again is Claim

"The King government is starting to splash money around freely today but it did in 1929 and 1930," he said. "Now as then it is expending huge sums of the people's own money to debauch them. But spending did not help it then and it won't help it now. The Liberals are going out now as they went out in 1930."

While he was Minister of Railways in the Bennett government it was necessary to effect economies. He had succeeded in reducing the cost of the C.N.R. headquarters by $2,500,000 a year.

One man, an American, was found receiving a salary of $62,000 a year for which he did nothing. He was dismissed and the official, with a private car and $20,000 a year, had boasted he "had enough dynamite to blow the government to hell" if it did not change its attitude towards the railway head office. He was dismissed. These were but two instances of changes made following 1930, Dr. Manion did not identify the two individuals.

"If there is one service to my country of which I am proud, it is getting the Canadian National Railways down to something like an economic operating basis," said Dr. Manion.

Hugh Stewart Heard

Hon. Hugh Stewart (Con. Leeds) told the Conservatives not to be discouraged by the small numbers they had in the House of Commons. At the last election Mr. Mackenzie King himself only 35 votes out of every 100 received on the voters' list and only 46 per cent of the votes polled. Yet he obtained 80 per cent of the seats in the House.

This was an abnormal situation and could not continue. It was due to third parties and showed the folly of Canadians dividing up into small groups instead of supporting a strong government and a strong opposition.

"Now the divisions are in the other camp," he said, "let us keep them there."

BLUFF

By HELEN R. BARTON

Afterward, when the event was but a blurred memory, Adele blamed the brave dress for the capricious notion to "bluff" for a day, and see if one truly got a thrill out of acting.

Adele was a stenographer in the downtown financial district and drew a weekly pay envelope of $15. $18 of which went each week to pay her room and board, leaving $17 to make out the rest of her budget. Seven dollars she mailed each week to her mother, who was living on an up-state farm.

Ten dollars to buy clothes, for carfare, amusements — countless things that the average girl thinks she cannot do without! Of course, with the most adroit stretching, it could not be made to cover all the demands made on it—the poor old ten dollars—but Adele had long formed a habit of allowing herself each year one "plunge". This took form in many different ways—an excursion, or an outing, or a mushrated set of books, or a new slipover, or a wrap, or, in fact, whatever happened to suggest itself to Adele's mind.

This year it was a marvellous creation of a gray crepe gown.

The gown, once purchased from the exhilarating sum allowed for unbudgeted gray suede slippers and a droopy hat—and was appropriately the same (plus Adele's adorable self) as ornamentation, the cost of the gown did cost her $60? It was marked down from $120! And, with the shoes and hat, it just ran over a hundred dollars.

I believe that feminine members of my audience will know what I mean when I say that a gown with this right-from-the-rack-to-perfection air spires its wearer to a subtle, almost unconscious, air of confidence, and consciously the "air" is accompanied by a tingly, self-conscious manner of "let's pretend".

Adele was wholly, adorably feminine.

One evening the manager had presented each girl in the office room with tickets to a very "high class" show playing at one of the down town houses. It was an annual treat from the management.

With all mysterious, romantic girl, who looked back at her with dark, wary, glowing eyes, truly the plain little stenographer, Adele Blank and Dash bonding house?

Vibrantly alive to her charm—or rather the inspiration of the gray gown—she "plunged" on a taxi and was hurried to the theatre.

The show was very good and nothing of importance happened until, during the third act, when Adele's attention was held by a very handsome, she failed to notice the stranger who quietly seated himself next to her, and then rose, hastily apologizing—for sitting on her hat! The girl, half—consciously in excitement of a faultless attire, was rushed, and Adele was almost moved to tears — inwardly. Outwardly she smiled deprecatingly and murmured; "Please don't concern yourself—it was quite—nothing!"

"Oh, but I say! In these times a hat like this—quite a fortune—y'know!" The stranger sighed ruefully.

"Do I look so hopelessly impoverished as that?" queried Adele, laughingly.

Later, as they dined at a tiny Italian restaurant, Richard, the attractive young man, casually said: "Are you just in town for some shipping, or haven't your people business?"

Adele gasped, but quickly recovering, bluffed a bit further, by replying, just as casually: "Oh, we haven't left yet. The wood will be rather cold, with the late spring —don't you think?"

Used to boys of her own class, she hadn't ever known the luxury of theatre, dinner, dance and cafe, with more dancing, until one o'clock in the morning—followed by a long drive through heavenly dusky parks in a sumptuous open car.

No, it was entirely novel, but Adele was equal to it—with bluff.

She played the part of the "fortune-maker-born" rich girl, and fooled her new-found friend thoroughly.

However, the worst of bluffing is that you hold the whole world by your own measurements.

Thus it happened that as they turned back toward town, and while Richard was busy with some careful driving, it occurred to Adele that really wealthy young man wouldn't be likely to "pick up" a stranger.

After a few moments' intense thought, she arrived at the conclusion that the youth was somebody's chauffeur, and doubtless had copied his princely manner from his own wealthy employer.

So she named a fictitious address off the avenue, and was driven there "quietly, so as not to awaken the family", the while Richard divulged that he was "Richard Renton Crowley, of the "Crowly Steel Manufacturing Company", adding sotto voce, this was the first time he had met anyone who had given him such a royal time. And wouldn't she please let him call again?

Adele planned a popular bang-out for wealthy youngsters, the Blue Cafe, and suggested that she lunched there quite frequently (not adding "mentally") and would doubtless run across him.

As soon as the sport car was out of sight, Adele hastily left the porte cochere of the mansion on the avenue, and "beating" it out West Sixty Eighth street, caught a down-town car.

And the lay a few moments recalling the vivid evening of pleasure, she said to herself: "He was just a bluffer—like me. And even if he is adorable, he's too good an actor to trust as a sweetie—or husband! He'd always be getting into mischief. These kind are devils for women—and then bluffing it right past me! No, sir, not these hard-boiled bluffers!"

In a big city it is easy for people to avoid meeting, especially when one fancies one's dream girl to be the daughter of an exclusive family —a family so exclusive that it has instructed the butler to deny even the existence of a daughter—and the girl fancies her dream hero an obscure chauffeur, who is merely some "bluffer".

Thus it was that a year passed before Adele noticed, in a Sunday supplement of photographs, a picture of a man attired in polo clothes, riding a beautiful polo pony, and the caption underneath: "Richard Renton Crowly, expert polo-ist, leaves for Canada to take part in the annual polo tournament. Mr. Crowly is the only heir to the Crowly steel works, and, besides keeping up his father's business end of home, has made a name in sport circles as an expert polo player. Rumors of an engagement to Miss June Hartland are current. Both deny the rumor, however."

Adele gasped, then muttered: "Serves you right—bluffer! You might have married a real wonderful millionaire—if you'd been half-honest!"

NO TRUTH IN RUMOR SAYS BOARD CHAIRMAN

Declaring that it was but idle street rumor, Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Belleville General Hospital today denied statements that fifty Italians are being employed at the construction work on the new wing of the hospital.

"There is absolutely nothing in the statement," Mr. Robertson declared. "I personally visited the hospital today where the men are working. The contractor, two keymen and a Belleville Italian are the only men of that nationality employed. Relief labor is being and will be utilized at all times in the project," he said.

An Old-Fashioned Picnic

What ho, for the old fashioned picnic, which has almost disappeared in this motorized age when the get-together spirit seems lost in the speed and distance mania. However, the old fashioned picnic get-together is coming back for Belleville Rotary Club is making great preparations for the greatest old-fashioned basket picnic ever held in these parts.

The place will be Massassaga Park.

The date, Civic Holiday, Monday, August 7.

Come and bring your baskets, the Rotarians will do the rest, and you will meet more friendly people than you ever dreamed existed. A good time for everybody, all barriers broken down, no introductions needed, just Hello Bill! Hiya Sister! one big happy family.

Of course, the big event of the day will be the speed boat races when the speed demons of the United States and Canada will stage thrilling duels for world records and championship cups— thrills aplenty, the fastest sport in the world.

Band concerts by the famous Royal Air Force Band, by permission of the Officer Commanding, and Municipal Band directed by Lieut. Fred Jobson, will fill the day with melody, and the day's program will be full of entertaining stunts, besides land and water sports for everybody.

The Belleville Club Regatta at Massassaga Park on Civic Holiday has everything that is entertaining for a day rich in thrills, excitement, good weather and a good time generally, and the best of it is the use to which the proceeds will be devoted, helping crippled children of Belleville and district back to health and happiness—and don't overlook that $600 pleasure boat with the disappearing propeller, the grand prize open to all who attend.

Rotary Regatta Day will wind up with a grand assembly in Ross Arena where an entertaining program will be presented in addition to dancing and band concert.

Not forgetting the kiddies, splendid program of sports has been arranged. Rural softball teams from many parts of the district will vie for supremacy on the park between races, while a hundred and one other attractions that will delight childish hearts will be there. It will be a red letter day for urbanite and rurslite, Grandma and Grandpa, Pop and Mom and the kiddies. Don't miss it.

FORMER CHAMPION PLOUGHMAN CHARGED

Galt, Ont., July 24 (CP)—William Harrison former Ontario champion ploughman, was arrested last night following a struggle and placed in jail on two charges of armed robbery. He appeared in court and was remanded until tomorrow.

The 20-year-old North Dumfries farmer is alleged to have accosted two men within 45 minutes of Syracuse's road and robbed them of $1.06.

Police said they found an old, unloaded revolver and $1.06 in Harrison's pockets.

A ROYAL TOUR EXHIBITION

Views of the royal tour through Canada and the United States are presented to the people of Great Britain in an exhibition which has been opened.

These pictures tell the story of Canada's welcome to Their Majesties the King and Queen who were their guests for all too brief a space and yet one long enough to leave those happy days of May and June photographed on the memory of millions and of the gracious progress of the Rulers.

Britishers know their King and Queen at home. They now see Their Majesties abroad. Canada having seen the King and Queen in the Dominion can take a lasting interest in every word of news and in every picture of the Royal Family which comes out of the British Isles.

Millions of Canadians treasure pictures and stories of King George and Queen Elizabeth in their homes, records of camera and word of the great royal tour days. These scrapbooks and albums will always be treasured because Canadians were brought so close to those who guide the destinies of the Empire.

PICNICS AND OLD TIME EXCURSIONS

Summer is moving on. With the last of July nearing, already a good share of the vacation season has passed. Half remains.

Present day summers miss something that used to enlighten the older days, up to about twenty years ago—that was the custom of regular annual Sunday School excursions to familiar points about the Bay of Quinte, the Murray Canal and Presqu'Ile. Such events were great events in the lives of the children and their parents. These were days when the children got their only association with the smell of oil and coal from the puffing engines of the steamboats which used to carry the human cargoes. Preparations for these occasions meant large hampers of good things and that day spent at the picnic grounds among hundreds of folks whom one knew from childhood to old age was perhaps the most happy if the most tiring day in their young lives.

Another day has come, the motorized age, which takes its parties in fives and sixes, or perhaps in two or more cars. The boat trip was an important part of the old style outing, when everybody went together—for there was no other way of getting to the picnic except to go by boat for the horse and buggy were hardly thought of as a means of driving to an excursion. Today is very much as if people drove with horses and carriages to picnics, only the pace is faster than any Dobbin could achieve. Naturally enough the motorcar has changed the fall fairs less than it has changed outings. Cars bring crowds to fairs as buggies and democrats did in old days and from greater distances. But a picnic was a picnic on the bay and Belleville was boat-inspired in those days.

In other days there were enough picnics to take up about all the Wednesdays of the season. There were the immortal moonlight excursions, for youth mainly. Today there is a sign of growing revival of interests in waterfront affairs. That is healthy, with yachting and motorboat racing, bay fishing. But will the picnic as of old come back? Few are hopeful enough for that for large boats are gone. But on the lake big boats still ply their traffic from one side to another. A boat somehow brings together a body of holidayers or picnickers in a unique way. Of course, they all come with one thought—that was the very essence of the old style picnic.

It is often a question today if people appreciate as much as they might what the new motorcars and the new highways and sideroads have meant to them. Perhaps it is pleasure too easily secured, too often enjoyed. In the steamboat excursion days on the Bay it was not so. It was one of the great and to many the only outlet for the holiday spirit, some saw only one outing a year — the Sunday school picnic—and they got a year full of pleasure out of it. It was the longest, bestspent day in the year for the children. How those Sunday school superintendents, officials and teachers used to work to get the people to the docks!

Drays used to pass down routes to carry the baskets to the wharf. Some picnickers carried their baskets. Officials and teachers helped the crew assist aboard and off the boat hundreds of children and elderly persons. These events were looked forward to for weeks and months. And they did bring people together. Congregations knew the memberships well in those days.

We must truly serve those whom we appear to command; we must bear with their imperfection, correct them with gentleness and patience, and lead them in the way to heaven.—Fuller.

A SUMMER DAY

A whispering wind and the summer grasses stirring,
A fleeting fragrance wafted on the air,
The leafy branches 'gainst the blue dome showing—
Oh! what can with a summer day compare?

A drowsy note from nests all snugly hidden,
The quail's weird call across the meadow land—
All nature seems to bow in benediction,
With Love's sweet symbols seen on every hand.

HIGH STANDARD OF CANADIAN NEWSPAPERS

IF YOU OCCASIONALLY feel that your newspaper, in reporting the vast and confusing business of European affairs, lets you down or leads you astray, pause for a moment and consider the testimony of Mr. Graham Hutton.

Mr. Hutton is an author, a world traveller and aformer assistant editor of the London Economist , so he should know what he is talking about. Says Mr. Hutton:

"The international news service (given by Canadian newspapers) is remarkable. It is much more comprehensive than anything we get in England or, for that matter, in any part of Europe. You people here are much more abreast of what is actually happening over there than those practically on the scene of operations."

Remember those words the next time your favorite radio broadcaster or the "broker's wire" startles you with a rumor which the daily press is slow to confirm or deny. Consider what each daily newspaper is doing that you may have the best, the most reliable and the latest information from every corner of the earth.

Take our own services. As a member of the co-operative Canadian Press, we bring you the full trans-Canada service of that organization and its special despatches from London and New York, in addition to the foreign and United States service of the Associated Press.

Canadian Press members also draw on Havas, the great French Agency and on Reuters which spans the British Empire, and benefit from reciprocal agreements with press associations in other British Dominions.

All this service is brought to you at enormous cost. Under new cable press rates, for example, it is actually cheaper to cable news to South Africa and Australia than it is to Canada's largest cities, for the cable dips in at Cape Town and Sydney, while in Canada the news has to be carried overland a thousand miles to Montreal and Toronto. Yet no expense is spared, no pains are spared, to bring you Empire news and world news.

When you read a Canadian Press newspaper, too, you are automatically a subscriber, or at least a beneficiary, of newspapers in every large city in this Dominion, for the local news gathered by all members becomes the property of this great association and ultimately your property after it has been culled and edited and reduced to items of general interest.

All this is done for you, Mr. Reader. And why? Well, you've heard a great deal about "lords of the press."

You are the real lord of the press and if we cannot please you and give you the best and truest account of this sorry world you wouldn't let us stay in business.

So we subscribe ourselves, with your kind permission, your obedient servants.

BIZARRE FISH STORIES CONTINUE TO ACCUMULATE, as the tired business man relaxes under the shade of the old apple or elm or what have you tree with his favorite tackle beside him, and plenty of bait, liquid and otherwise. Among the fish stories to hit the headlines during the past week was one concerning a fisherwoman who was landing a fish when her wrist watch fell off, the fish opened wide its mouth and swallowed the watch, at the same time releasing the tackle which held it. All of which leads our Sports Editor to murmur "That fish will be TICKled to death." Don't shoot, he's not responsible—it's the humidity, not the heat.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Suitable Shoes Mean Much to Our Health and Happiness

There appears to be a streak of vanity in all of us, both men and women, I have in mind the shoes we wear.

The age of "pointed" toes was well past during examination of recruits, but the results were seen in the deformities—bunions on the inner side of the big toes and corns and hammer toes on the middle and outer toes, due to pressure. Still another cause was the human desire to have "small" feet. About four of every five recruits were wearing shoes that were too short for their feet.

Fortunately about twenty-five years ago one or two shoe manufacturers began supplying "sensible" shoes which were straight on the entire length on the inner side right up to and slightly beyond the big toe; the top of the shoe, while not exactly square, was "rounded" so gradually to the outer or little toe that there was abundant room for all the toes to lie in a straight or extended position instead of being "curled" up by the pointed or sharply curved shoes. These "sensible" shoes for men and women were gladly acclaimed by a great many who were much on their feet, — nurses, housekeepers, and office and factory workers.

It would appear, however, that the streak of vanity in all of us which shoe salesmen notice and pass on to manufacturers, has caused some to begin to make shoes with a little more "point"; they are "curved" on both the inner and outer sides at the top.

There is also the point in regard to women that with the present short skirts, shoes are noticed more and it is only to be expected that women will wear shoes that make the feet appear small

Now, foot comfort means nerve comfort. Many man or woman, with a pleasant disposition under ordinary circumstances, becomes very irritable from wearing shoes that hurt the feet. If they are bound to wear shoes that are neat but not comfortable, the only suggestion is that they wear a larger size. This will give some measure of relief.

Remember, our feet often mean as much to our happiness and earning ability as does our head.

BRITAIN, FRANCE

While making this new concession to the Soviet, the two western democracies are standing pat on their proposed definition of indirect aggression which does not go to the length of a formula suggested by the Moscow government.

Britain and France interpret indirect aggression as an act which might imperil a state's neutrality or sovereignty, while the Soviet definition takes in an extremely wide field, including economic infiltration which might lead to a change in foreign policy.

Suggests Way

One thing Britain and France have suggested as a way out of the difficulties over conflicting definitions is immediate consultations among the three powers if one of them believes anything outside the Anglo-French formula is taking place. These consultations would be limited to Latvia, Estonia and Finland in Eastern Europe, Holland, Switzerland and Luxembourg in the west.

It remains to be seen whether the Russian government will accept the latest Anglo-French proposals but if it does not, the British and French Ambassadors will press for a treaty covering the three powers alone.

Appointed to Ministry

Miss. Florence Horsbrugh, Conservative member of parliament for Dundee, who was recently appointed parliamentary secretary to the ministry of health—the first woman to become a British minister for eight years.

Military clauses of the treaty would be designed to implement its political objectives which would be primarily to stop aggression in Europe.

It is hoped here the Russians will accept the idea because they previously urged staff consultations and inclusion of military features in a treaty.

NEW GIRL FRIEND?

CROP PROSPECT IN WEST VARIES

Some Places the Farmers Have Cut Standing Field for Feed

Regina, July 25—(CP)— Crop prospects in Saskatchewan show considerably more variation than heretofore, according to the statistics branch of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture.

A further decline due to hot dry weather has taken place in southeastern Saskatchewan. Crops range from extremely poor to fair in this area and at some points farmers are cutting some fields for feed.

On the heavy land on the Regina plains the favorable crop prospects have been well maintained, although some up burning is in evidence. Prospects in south central Saskatchewan a week ago were variation. In southwestern Saskatchewan crops have progressed favorably and prospects are reported generally good.

Wide variation also is noted in east central Saskatchewan with the southern portion of the district having immediately north of the Qu'Appelle Valley, recording a sharp decline due largely to the hot, dry weather and to a limited extent to grasshopper damage.

Some traces of rust have been reported from scattered points in the province. Otherwise the crop is free from diseases. Grasshoppers have done some damage in scattered areas, but taking the province as a whole no widespread injury has yet occurred.

BRITISH PLANES OVER FRANCE

200 Planes Carrying 1,000 Men Leave England Under Sealed Orders

London, July 25—(CP)— Nearly 200 bombing planes, carrying nearly 1,000 men, roared over the English Channel and France under sealed orders today, the vanguard of the largest mass training flight in British military history.

The first group, which left early this morning, consisted of more than 60 Blenheim bombers having a maximum speed of 280 miles an hour. In five formations, they were to fly 300 miles before returning.

Within an hour 50 more bombers headed for northern and eastern France, and other types of craft were to follow. Routes covered such widely separated points as Metz and Lyon, the southeastern corner of the Bay of Biscay and the Gulf of Lion.

Throughout the journey over France the British planes were intercepted by French fighters and reconnaissance craft.

In the 103rd Royal Air Force fatal accident since Jan. 1, three crew members were killed last night when a battle plane on a night patrol flight crashed and burned in the Lincolnshire fens. The number of deaths since Jan. 1 was brought to 710.

ABANDONED CHILD

Hawkesbury, Ont., July 25—(CP)—Charged with abandoning a child, Jean Portelance, 21, of Hull, Que., pleaded guilty in court here yesterday and was remanded a week for sentence. Mrs. Ida Seguin of Ottawa, facing the same charge as Portelance, pleaded not guilty and was remanded a week.

The child was born in an Ottawa Hospital and arrangements were made by the mother to have it transferred to an infants' home in Montreal. The baby was found on the doorstep of a Hawkesbury home and later was returned to the mother here.

4 APPOINTED CAPTAINS

London, Ont., July 25—(CP)—Promotion of four Lieutenants of the Royal Canadian Regiment to the rank of Captain was announced here yesterday. They include: Lieut. D. B. Buell, instructor of infantry, small arms and physical training at the Royal Military College, Kingston and Lieut. T. Gibson, instructor at the Canadian Tank School, Camp Borden.

REGATTA RUMBLINGS

Remember Sir Malcolm Campbell and hass famous Bluebird? Remember how he streaked along the watercourses of the world establishing record after record in his puddle-jumper that flitted over the waves like a ray of morning sunlight? Well, there's a honey of a boat coming here on August the 5th. Regatta Day that is modelled after the famous Englishman's whirling punt. . . .

And believe it or not, this saucy little will of the wisp of the watery waves, can alice her way through the water at speed of 108 miles per hour, which is travelling in my man's country . . . .

Imagine hurtling through wind and wave one hundred and eight miles while sixty long minutes tick by on the clock . . . Imagine cruising along at the rate of nine thousand five hundred and four feet every single minute that completes the circle . . . And picture yourself, if you can sitting along on the top of a sultry sea with the water skimming by you at the rate of one hundred and fifty eight points four feet per second . . . .Figure it out for yourselves.

That is what Harold Wilson's new "Miss Canada" will do and has done, on a straightaway course . . .

And the doughty Canadian, who is tops this side of the line as a speedboat pilot, intends to beat this mark on the Massassaga course on Civic Holiday.

"Miss Canada" is the answer to specific Yankee's dream . . . She is of 625 cubic inch displacement, and will be the only boat of her class here . . . So naturally she will not race, but will endeavour to beat her own mark of 106 miles per hour just as a tuner-upper for the Gold Cup races, the trophy of which has been held so long in the U.S.A. that it stands up wherever the Star-Spangled Banner is played . . . .

She was designed by Dorylus Van Patten, famous boat designer and can develop 1000 horse-power. Not a bad bit of a boat, and one that will climax the thrills that have already been assured for this now famous event.

And speaking of co-operation . . . a copy of the Saranac Lake Regatta being held on August 5th under the sanction of the American Power Boat Association bears a notation in large black type requesting boats entered in that event to attend the Belleville Rotary Club Regatta on August . . . This was unsolicited by members of the local club and is just a proof of the interest taken in the local regatta by the sponsoring organization . . .

And while on the subject, when you take into consideration the fact that 175 boats are entered in the various events at the Saranac Lake affair, well—what are we going to do with 'em . . . . .

And here's a concluding tip. We have just been informed that so far, eleven entries have been rectified for the 225 cubic inch boats . . . Those are the babies that travel anywhere from sixty to eight-seven miles per hour, and naturally will be the feature event of the regatta . . . . That is the largest entry list ever received in Canada for a race in this class. . . .

ANTI-BRITISH BOYCOTT GROWS

Japanese Are Sent Protest Over Detention of H. Rose

Shanghai, July 25—(AP)—Anti-British measures were intensified in North China today and new Anglo-Japanese friction arose in Shanghai.

The British Consul General here protested to the Japanese Consul General against detention of H. Rose, chief of the international settlement municipal council's public health department, by police of the Japanese - dominated Shanghai municipality.

Rose, 100 Chinese and a Russian, all employees of the department, were detained on orders of the Chinese mayor. It was reported the Japanese-dominated puppet regime had threatened to hold them until the international settlement paid arrears for garbage-dumping privileges.

Boycotts and Demonstrations

At Peiping the Japanese-sponsored political party, Hsinminhui, sent instructions to branches in Shansi, Shantung, Hopeh and Hinan Provinces to tighten anti-British boycotts and demonstrations.

The Shanghai Chinese press commented bitterly on yesterday's Anglo-Japanese agreement, some papers calling it "another Munich."

The American-owned English language China press declared Great Britain is "sacrificing her own honor and interests in a futile effort to defend the Empire."

Chinese Moderate

Chinese officials withheld official comment on the memorandum of agreement in the Anglo-Japanese conversations at Tokyo. They generally agreed Britain was laboring under difficulties but stressed that continued foreign assistance is essential for China to carry out the war of attrition which they said she was fighting not only for herself but for all powers desiring orderly international relations.

Timber, Bushland In Extreme Danger Due to Dryness

Burning dryness of the past two weeks has placed timber and bushland of this section and other districts of the province in an extremely hazardous condition, according to Walter C. Cain, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests of Ontario.

Hospital Is a Splendid Industry If Morally and Financially Supported, Says G. A. Friesen

"With the financial and moral support of Belleville and the district it serves, Belleville General Hospital could be recognized as one of the best of its size in Ontario, Gordon A. Friesen, hospital administrator, declared here yesterday.

Speaking before the Belleville Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon in Hotel Quinte, Mr. Friesen gave a splendid insight into "behind the administrative scenes" of a modern hospital, costs, etc., in a manner that brought a fine knowledge of that branch of hospital work. He offered statistics of the costs of other Ontario hospitals, and concluded a highly informative address with a detailed description of the new $200,000 wing now under construction here.

"Statistics prove", the speaker said "that for 117 Ontario hospitals giving 3,409,863 hospital days care, the cost per capita per year was $3.24, or this amount only $2.13 is collected. The hospitals therefore presented every patient over the average for every day spent in hospital during the year, with $1.11 worth of service".

Taken For Granted

Referring to Belleville General Hospital, Mr. Friesen regretted the fact that "the hospital in this community has always been taken more or less for granted, although it has been rendering valuable service to humanity for over 60 years."

"Your hospital," he continued, "compares favorably with the best institutries in Belleville. At present we have 113 employees including 40 nurses. Total expenditures for a year are approximately $123,000 which includes a grant of $50,000. Approximately 3,200 patients are admitted each year, 70 per cent of which are non-residents. These people come from as far east as Napanee, as far north as Bancroft and as far west as Colborne".

Outlines Month's Activities

Outlining an average month's activities in the hospital, Mr. Friesen said he could state that 400 patients are treated, including emergency cases such as highway accidents etc. Two hundred and seventy, five operations are performed, and 45 deliveries take place. X-Ray examinations total 175. Fifteen thousand meals are served in which 2,500 pounds of meat and 300 gallons of milk are consumed. Fifteen tons of coal are consumed and eighteen tons of laundry washed.

Patients generally, when talking about their accounts do not realize the cost of the service given them, the speaker declared. "They do not realize that when we charge $10.00 for the use of the operating room, that over 60 instruments are utilized, as are one to two 5-pounds packs of ether, 25 different pieces of linen gowns, caps and masks; 3 pairs rubber gloves; approximately four tubes cat gut sutures, silkworm gut, alcohol and antiseptics; 2 dozen small sponges; a large quantity of dressing and other items."

"In addition to this", Mr. Friesen continued, "there is the expensive operating-room equipment; a table that cost approximately $800; a special light, $500; the autoclave where sterilization of dressings and rubber gloves is done $1,000; and many other articles of equipment."

The New Wing

Referring to the new wing now under construction, Mr. Friesen declared that it will include many modern medical and surgical improvements. Included will be a new emergency department; X-Ray department; new laboratory; new operating room; new delivery room; new diet kitchen; twenty-four private rooms and eighteen semi-private rooms.

It is obviously impossible to build and maintain a hospital without support either through bequests or donations; the speaker pointed out, adding that he had learned indirectly that the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E. and the Belleville Kinsmen Club will furnish rooms in the new wing. "The late Mr. Fairfield has specifically left $500 to furnish a room, while the W. A. will furnish two rooms and also purchase a portable X-Ray unit. The Belleville Nurses Alumnae will furnish a new children's ward, while various other individuals and representatives of service clubs have intimated their desire to furnish rooms in the new wing. "They expressed the hope that the majority of the furnishings will be donated", he said.

Mr. Friesen concluded his address with an appeal for the moral and financial support of the club.

The speaker was fittingly introduced by Rotarian Mack Robertson while Rotary appreciation was expressed to Rotarian Edgar Bermister, Vice-President MacLean Haig occupying the chair in the absence of President Howard Clarke who is attending a special meeting of Rotarians in North Bay.

JAPAN TO CLOSE CANTON RIVER FOR TWO WEEKS

Blockade is to Cut Shipping Between Hong Kong and Canton

Hong Kong, July 25—(AP)—The Japanese Consul at Canton has notified consular authorities of other nations that for "military reasons" the Japanese navy will close the Canton river for two weeks starting at midnight tomorrow.

The move was reliably reported in this British crown colony to be in the nature of a blockade to cut shipping between Hong Kong and Canton were unaware of plans to measure, it was said, the Japanese plan a blockade of the British and French concessions on Canton's Shameen Island.

Officially, foreign quarters at Canton were unaware of plans to blockade Shameen. Foreigners generally believed closing of the Canton river to third power shipping was designed to facilitate troop movements, either for mop-up operations of a larger scale in the Canton area or for the transfer of troops for action elsewhere on the Kwangtung Province coast.

Dispatches from Chungking told of an air raid on that Chinese capital last night and of an address by General Chiang Kai-Shek before a Kuomintang (government party) assembly in which he declared that "far eastern Munich" is unthinkable.

London Newspapers Express Approval Of Japan Agreement

London, July 25—(CP)— Most newspapers today expressed approval of the Anglo-Japanese formula which Prime Minister Chamberlain announced yesterday in the House of Commons as the basis for the continuing negotiations at Tokyo.

"Settlement of the Tientsin dispute is generally desired by the Japanese government as well as by the British government. As a preliminary to further talks it has been agreed that Japan implies military recognition of the Japanese invasion. This recognition, however, implies as an important component a realization of the strength of Chinese resistance."

The Daily Express (Independent) said:

"Mr. Chamberlain has made his statement on talks in Tokyo.

"They are to be taken on the basis of facing facts. We are to recognize the military power in China today, and recognizing facts is the beginning of political wisdom.

"In these regions of China which the Japanese army actually occupies," said The Times (Independent), "the British government have undertaken not to countenance the obstruction of such measures as may be required by the Japanese army to safeguard its security and to maintain public order.

"The settlement falls into line with that already adopted by the United States, France and other countries with large interests in China."

"The text of the agreement reached in Tokyo," said the Manchester Guardian (Liberal), "is the object of much conjecture, comment, especially on the part of American observers. . . . There is no question of recognizing a state of belligerency, whether de jure or de facto, in the far east."

The Daily Herald (Labor) said: "If these words (of the agreement) do not give Japan the entire substance of recognition of her conquest in parts of China, then what can they possibly mean?"

Diplomatic Success

Tokyo, July 25—(CP-Havas) — Many Japanese newspapers today called the agreement with Great Britain an "unexpectedly sweeping" diplomatic success paving the way for conclusion of hostilities in China.

Emphasis was placed on the statement in which Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador, was quoted as saying that the accord, in which Britain recognized the "special requirements" of the Japanese army, applies to all China, and that Britain never intended to, obstruct Japanese forces.

Contrary to statements made in London, it was declared here that British policy in the far east has undergone a fundamental change.

The newspaper Asahi said: "The statement is an important document, marking a new phase in the development of the Chinese affairs."

Annual Kelly Family Reunion

On Wednesday, July 19th, the tenth annual Kelly re-union was held at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake, with about one hundred in attendance. The day was lovely and bright. By noon a large number had gathered and the tables with all sorts of good things, grace was said.

Following registration, the president, Samuel Kelly, called the gathering together and general social fun and sports took place. Miss Ruth Kelly acted as secretary-treasurer during the absence. The secretary's report was as for 1938 showing there had been four deaths, that of Robert Harvey, Napanee, John Lowery, Holloway, Mrs. Ida Bedell, Toronto, Mrs. T.V. John Kelly, Vancouver, B.C. Three marriages took place, Marion Kelly and Louise Zavits; Clancy Tufts and James William Elliott; Leon Wilson and Elsie Scott.

Six births were recorded as follows: Wallace Reginald Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Parks of Bath, Ont., Geneva Pearl Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Morgan; Vera Alice Coombes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Coombes; Garry Samuel Kelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Kelly; Marion Doreen Kelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kelly; Beverly Frederick Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Elliott.

The president gave a short address after which two minutes of silence was observed in memory of the departed and the Lord's Prayer was repeated. Addresses were also given by Rev. Mr. Beazer, Mrs. Beazer and Clifford Wilson. It was decided that letters of sympathy be sent those unable to be present. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Beazer.

It was decided to hold the picnic in the same place on the third Wednesday in July, 1940.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Her Family Thinks He's Too Old

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am 24 years of age, have an excellent position, and a nice car and could well support a wife. But with all this it seems that I am unable to get the girl I want. She is almost eighteen, very lovely, and has many other friends. When I ask to take her out, she politely tells me her family will not approve, as they think I am too old for her.

I am almost six feet tall, but inclined to be stout, which makes me look older. Do you think I'm too old for her? I really hope to marry her some day.

Bert

It's advice you to keep on showing this girl attentions. Think up some nice little surprises that indicate thoughtfulness and determination. These are qualities that impress. Perhaps your occasional lack of candor or some flowers might help.

I don't think you are too old for her. Rather, I think you're just the right age for a girl of 18. If being stout makes you look older, why not try to diet so you can lose some pounds? Maybe that will make you more pleasing to her eye. Good luck to you. Do write without the advice of a physician.

Sees Him Every Week-End

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm very much in love with a young man, who is very nice, and has good-looking parents. He comes to our town over the week-ends, and I see him every time he comes to town. I'm sure he doesn't love me as I do him, and only considers me as a friend.

Occasionally he takes out a girl, the daughter of the lady in whose house he lives, and he seems to think right much of her, but I'm sure she doesn't love him. Please tell me what to do. I love him so much, and often cry it takes because he doesn't know I care, and I can't tell him. What shall I do?

Heartsick

There's a strong undertow in caring for one as deeply as you do. And like those mysteries of tide and current, it often brings trouble. However do not make the mistake of showing him how much in love in the situation. I don't mean, of course, to be smippy, unfriendly and carefree. No man likes to be made the butt of those hateful whims.

There are a hundred ways in which a girl can show her admiration delicately and in a man kind that she likes him. Let him be tell you of his ambitions, and to talk about himself. Then, my dear, remember that sugar draws a large crowd—of all creatures—and flies.

All Her Girl Friends Married

Dear Miss Fairfax

At 21 I feel rather on the shelf. All my girl friends have married during the last few months, and although I have many friends, they don't seem to have the kind of a man I've always wanted to marry. I have a very good position, love dancing and can keep up with the out-of-door sports.

Brides with new homes are quite keen on inviting their girl friends to meals to show off all the parties they received as wedding presents. And happy brides always want to see their friends married and as happy as they are, and therefore they're always considering their unmarried girl friends to eligibles. Accept all the invitations from your married friends, and go out and have a good time. Don't talk about being "on the shelf" at twenty-one.

Wants to Get Better Acquainted

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm just a healthy girl, almost 18 years old. I am not crazy about boys, although I have several boy friends, but there's one I especially like. He is 21. I have known him for a year, and he has been over to see me a couple of times.

My mother likes him and he is one of the fortunate ones who has a good job. I would like to get better acquainted with him. Can you help me? Or do you think I'm too young? Do you like anybody? Mother suggests I write to you.

Lonely

I think it's a grand idea for young people to have many friends of their own sex. Nothing is finer—especially when the parents approve of them. But it's not wise for girls to search for affairs or becoming engaged. Just have a good time as chums or pals.

Have you thought of asking him over to Sunday night supper? It's always a friendly gesture to invite young people in for a family meal. Sunday night supper is so well to get, esnecially at this time of the year when cold things like salads are enjoyable.

Statistics Prove Effect Of Courtesy in Driving

Courtesy is becoming a "driving force" in this country. The National Safety Council, which has worked so persistently and so nobly for safe and sane motor drivers, reports that "American motorists, in the last 17 months, have committed themselves into an army of life-savers, discarded many of their careless, discourteous habits, and completely reversed the trend of traffic fatalities."

The statistics contained in the report just published by The National Safety Council covers the 17 months between November, 1937 and April, 1938. Prior to November, 1937 safety engineers, traffic experts, state and municipal officials were in despair at the consistent increase in traffic fatalities. Each year statistics showed "the death in traffic represented the population of an American city of about 40,000 people."

The appeal for courtesy in driving was added to the appeal for safety in driving. Along many of the national highways the frequent repetition of such signs as have stimulated drivers' co-operation.

CARE AND COURTESY

It is a great triumph for courtesy now that we are coming to realize that a skilful driver is a courteous driver.

In 1938 the first reduction in total traffic deaths for a full year was reported. And the downward trend of the month-by-month reports has continued into 1939.

With the two World's Fairs this year, more motorists will go and doubtedly be established. All drivers should be so safety-minded and courtesy-minded that they will make every personal effort to keep the trend of traffic fatalities decreasing.

Note of Thanks?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

When receiving a gift and thanking the giver personally, is it necessary to also write a note of thanks?

It depends on circumstances whether or not it is enough to thank the giver verbally. If, for instance, we have just received a gift and meet the giver, the spoken thanks are enough. But in any case in which the expression of thanks seems too casual . . . and this is the important point . . . and there is the impression of casualness can be taken away by the writing of a note of thanks.

Banish Color Fears

By Helen Follett

TIME WAS when the majority of women suffered from colne fev. Black, characteristics browns, al the drab tones were considered highly respectable. Black is still the favorite of many, being especially becoming to blondes and redheads with fresh, young complexions, but the washed out tones are taking a back seat, for which we should be grateful. Look dismal and you'll feel that way. Women used to wear mourning for years and years. It was a horrible practice. In many ways this world is getting to be a better place for a woman.

Red is fashionable this year, though it is a warm color for hot whether and for that reason many of us avoid it. But it is making flaming youthers of some who will be cheered by the gay influence. When wearing red, purple, or any of the lavender shades, you have to mind your lipstick. A cerise frock and vermillion lips kick up a color war that puts a grin out of the pupils.

Only For Young

Pastel shades, also popular, are only for the young 'uns. They make the faded beauty look even more hopeless, especially the light-heated sisters.

When buying material for a gown, wrap it around your shoulders, note the effect upon eyes and complexion. If the robe is gay, tone down the accessories.—gloves, slocks, bags, shoes. Quiet colors, one can stand so much color and no more. Good taste is the director; it never makes a mistake.

Overfeeding Infant in Hot Weather May Lead to Stomach Upset

Some time ago, in discussing the weather feeding, we mentioned the danger of weaning a baby in the hot weather. I would like to emphasize this matter again. No mother should wean her baby during July or August. If the nine-month period during which children are usually kept on the breast terminates in July, then the mother should wean in June. If it falls in August, then she should wait until September. This is an important and excellent rule.

Sometimes a baby is apt to have trouble enough when he is weaned and placed on other feeding without having the complication of hot weather to contend with as well.

Of course the chief fear of mothers for babies in hot weather is summer diarrhoea. And it isn't an idle fear either. I've seen too much of it to take the complaint lightly.

Diarrhoea occurring during the hot weather fall into two definite types, both completely preventable. So that extent we can calm the fears of mothers.

The cause of the first and milder type of diarrhoea is over-feeding. As I explained yesterday, in the weather the baby loses his appetite, just as you do, and his feedings should be cut down. As a matter of fact, he will likely refuse food himself, for he knows what he wants often better than the parents do. But some parents refuse to let the baby cut down on the food. They force him to eat and the result is either diarrhoea or vomiting—some times both.

Unfortunately the balance of water in a baby's system isn't as stable as in an adult's. That is, the baby reacts unfavorably to the loss of water much more quickly than an adult does. A baby who is both vomiting and suffering from diarrhoea at the same time is losing a great deal more water than he can afford. In the early stages of this trouble, the baby responds quickly if there is a reduction in the amount of food taken. But if you wait a few days after the symptoms appear, they cannot be removed by such simple methods.

When this happens, the treatment is fairly strenuous if the child is going to be saved. The acid stools are very irritating to the baby's skin, and frequently he will develop a rash on the buttocks which will not go away until the complaint is cleared up.

As I have said, it is very easy to guard against this disease, but it is very hard to cure it once it has gotten a firm hold in your child's system. If you mothers will remember that your babies cannot eat as much food in warm weather as they do when it is cold, if you keep this in mind, you are likely to have any trouble. The best thing to do, however, is get the advice of your doctor on the whole question of baby's diet in warm weather.

I remember one trouble we had with the Quintuplets that first summer. Borrp a couple of days before the end of May, they were so fretful they needed all the food we could give them to keep up their strength. Yet we had to be so careful not to overfeed when the weather was hot for fear they might contract diarrhoea.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

AT THE BELLE

"Garden of the Moon"

Music and comedy, the two basic ingredients of "Garden of the Moon", the Warner Bros. production now playing at the Belle Theatre, Evening Post story of the same name which is now on the Belle screen with Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay and John Payne in the featured roles.

Aside from the continuous entertainment it affords, "Garden of the Moon" is likely to become a memorable production because it introduces John Payne in the first important role with which he has been entrusted since he came to Hollywood a couple of years ago.

In this tall and handsome youth the unaffected, likeable screen personality and charming singing voice, the Warner Bros. studio executives see a veritable star of the most brilliant magnitude, a youth who possesses all the requisites of acting, every quality that goes to make up the ideal young glamour boy.

Besides the featured players the new musical picture has a cast that includes some of the cleverest entertainers who have ever appeared on the screen. Four of these are famous swing-style musicians who happen also to be first-rate comedians all. They are Johnnie Davis, Joe Venuti, Jerry Colonna and Ray Mayer.

Another interesting feature of the production is that appearance of the famous Gae Foster girls of the air lanes, who plays himself in the picture. The impressive cast is rounded out by such reliable players as Melville Cooper, Isabel Jeans, Penny Singleton, Mabel Todd, Curt Bois, Dick Purcell and Granville Bates.

The melodic background against which the efforts of the comedians are presented consists of Warner Bros songs written by those famous Tin Pan Alley composers, Harry Warren, Al Dubin and Johnny Mercer. Payne sings all of them, with the exception of an interlude during the vocal and instrumental efforts of Johnnie Davis, Jerry Colonna and Mayer, and all of them are played by a specially formed band, directed by George Brent and Ian Hunter, the former being a brilliant scene designer and other the producer who gets down her first chance at Broadway stardom.

Now that Payne is in love with Kay She likes the producer and is grateful to him for what he has done for him, but it is the artist to whom she gives her love. He, however, is bound to a contract which is played by Gloria Dickson, who does not love him but adopts the fabled dog-in-the-manger attitude when she learns he loves another woman.

How this tangled affair in human and professional relations is unravelled, is told in an exciting and amusing fashion by members of an Actress, which was made from an original screen play written by Milton Krims, Rowland Leigh and Julius J. Epstein.

The Belle Feature of the Day will be exhibited on the same program.

LONDON DECIDES UPON AIRPORT

Will Buy 800 Acres of Land and Accept Federal Contribution

London, Ont., July 25.—(CP)—London placed itself on the Trans-Canada air route map last night when the city council accepted revised agreements with Federal government on the building of an airport. Council voted to take an option on 800 acres of land at a cost of approximately $15,000.

The airport will be located in the Crumlin area, five miles east of here, with the federal government's contribution set at $155,000. The city will purchase the property but will bear the cost of maintenance from the time the project is completed.

Mayor Allan Johnson said that, including a $50,000 minimum cost of radio range station, the federal government would be contributing some $200,000 to the London project.

CONNIE HARRIS PITCHES CORBYS TO FIRST WIN

Defeat 'Firemen' in Semi-Finals by a Score of 12 to 5

PLAY WEDNESDAY

"Funk" Murray Leads All Hitters With Double and Single

Corbys A.C. drew first blood in the opening game of the Intermediate "A" play-offs of the Belleville O.A.S.A. group by soundly trouncing the Dracup "Firemen" 11 to 5 at the Flaxy last evening. A four run splurge in the fourth inning clinched the piece for Chuck Barrington's charges, as the Corbys later drove Jim Hunter, the Firemen's starting pitcher, to cover following a strong batting attack.

With Connie Harris hurling six hit ball, it was only a matter of time before the Corbys' bats began to function in a profitable manner although his winners were held hitless by relief pitcher "Cous" Dracup for the last two times at bat. Harris hurled fine ball and was given sturdy support by the Corbys in his six-hit effort, as his team mates made but one error for an even dozen base blows in the six innings he laboured atop the Firemen's hilltop. Not a single Dracup batter reached first base in one safe blow off Harris' deliveries.

"Funk" Murray led with a double and two singles, jed the Corbys on the attack with five hits. Alex Simpson and pitcher Harris getting a brace of singles each. Chuck Barrington, Corbys' catch, hit a home run in the third while Sinfield and pinch-hitter Lundy contributed doubles. A centre Corbys attack in the fourth and fifth innings, featuring up six runs on eight hits, decided the issue.

The same game of a possible three game series will be played on Wednesday evening when Eddie Schrieder will doubtless hurl for Corbys and Dracup for the Firemen. The box score:

Johnstown Sprinter Not Distance Runner Claim of Experts

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, July 25 (AP)— The elder generation of horse-track seers, always ready to enshrine almost a new "super-horse" such as Johnstown, are not particularly surprised that William Woodward's big colt took a licking from Challedon in the Arlington Classic.

Basically, they contend, the winner of the Kentucky Derby is not a sprinter and not a distance runner. On counts like that, they admit, he comes close to looking like a perfect combination of the two. But, in the long run, he's a son of Jamestown, and Jamestown was a sprinter.

The suggestion, therefore, that "something went wrong with" the town in Saturday's 1-4 mile test brought only a doubting smile from Dave Leiglich, the veteran turf man who watches them all run day in and day out, winter and summer.

"Lame?" he said. "No. I don't think anything broke the matter with him, except that he's primarily a sprinter and didn't feel like running a long race that day. Horses, you know, have their days, just like we have.

"Johnstown sprinted himself out in the first half-mile, beating off Technician, and when Challedon came up with his late rush Johnstown just didn't have enough left to answer him."

Y's Men to Meet Kiwanis in Finals

Coming from behind the Y's Men's mushballers pounded out an 11 to 5 victory over the Luckies meaning the former gave the latter the semi-final round in straight games and earn the right to play in the finals with the city "No Kick" softball league team for the championship, Thursday.

Last night at the Collegiate campus, Eddie Reid, Y's Men's star shortstop, made a one-handed stop of Cecil Lucky's drive in the sixth to clinch the piece, as Reid himself hurled the ball in the latter innings. Don Ridley hit safely three times for the winners, while Miller had three hits to help his own cause.

The box score:

	AB	R	H	PO	A	E
Luckies: Stewart, Cook, Hannah, Fitzgibbon, Cross, Martin, Brown, Bayis, O'Rae and Browning.

Giants Still Dangerous

The Giants have lost nine straight, their mound department looks shot and they have practically no infield left. They've slipped from second place to fifth in the standings, but they're still dangerous. Bill Terry expects to win the pennant Wednesday, so they'll have a shortstop again and catcher Harry Danning is due to rejoin the team in St. Louis. Hom Haley may fill the hole at short, but he's no Alex for George Myatt underwent a knee operation yesterday and won't be back for a long time.

Brooklyn's Dodgers are the most wrecked club right now, even though they picked up a .300 hitting outfielder Pete Reiser from Fred (Dixie) Walker from Detroit yesterday. Reiser, while regular, will need reliable pitcher who is out with a leg injury, Dave Lee and Van Mungo for some six weeks and Cookie Lavagetto and Art Parks indefinitely. Only pitching plus Mungo went in to run for Parks Billy Herman left for second and broke his left ankle.

Chicago White Sox May be Team to Pull Boston Out of Second Place

GIANTS DANGEROUS

Boston Bees May Have Something to Say About National Flag

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

It is hard to see a way to keep the current Major Baseball League leaders from improving their positions during their home stands which get under way today, but, by way of warning, a couple of visiting teams from other sections may be red hot.

New York's mighty Yankee and Cincinnati's Reds looked practically invincible on their recent road tours. The Yanks won nine out of 12 games to run up far and away straight lead.

The Reds didn't hit so hard, but they didn't have to with the kind of flinging they got from Paul Derringer, Bucky Walters, Whitey Moore and Co.

So much for the leaders, but how about such contenders as the Chicago White Sox, Boston Bees and Cleveland Indians? New York Giants? Only the Pale Hose are in position to hit for the circuit and they're not in good spots to cause trouble.

The White Sox Open at Boston

The White Sox open at Boston today with a doubleheader against the sensational Bees. Then they go to Boston own nine games and Cleveland's seven and they just about had to in order to keep their heads above water.

The White Sox who have climbed from fifth place on July 1 into third with 18 victories in 25 games, have a chance to win their early season rivals, including two of three from the Yankees.

The Bees were the only eastern team to get an even break against the other western clubs, the Sox finishing the National League's first invasion of the west and they just about had to in order to keep their heads above water.

Five Excellent Mound Performances Seen in International

TORONTO LOSES

Rollie Stiles of Jersey City Tossed Five - Hitter at Cellar Occupants

(By The Associated Press)

If all the International League managers who last spring remarked —"Wait until the hot weather comes and our pitchers round into midseason form" were still together and reminded of those words, they probably would display a colossal case of headache remedies.

Few of the league's clubs have been getting consistently good flinging, although the league-leading Jersey Giants and Syracuse Chiefs have come the closest. And somebody at Syracuse deserves honorable mention for hitting Jack Tising and Mike Meola, castoffs from lower ranking clubs, into winning form to round out the Chief's staff.

Yet there are days and nights when it seems as if the managers' predictions might come true. There was a sample yesterday when no fewer than five excellent mound performances, winning and losing, were on a league program.

Tosses Five-Hitter

Rollie Stiles of Jersey City tossed a five-hitter at Toronto's last-place Maple Leafs to win 5-3 and increase the Little Giants' lead to 3½ games. Al Smith and Sal Maglie combined on a five-hit job for Buffalo against a six-hitter by Cecil Dowdy of Newark and the Bisons won 4-2. Then Tising and Rochester's Mike Ryba hooked up in a duel in which the former gave six hits and the latter seven Syracuse won it 2-1 when the pitcher turned hitter and singled home the winning run in the ninth.

Oddly, the one game that had no top-flight mound work probably was the most exciting of all. Baltimore Orioles walloped Montreal 15-8 to go into a virtual tie with the Isorns for sixth place. Besides all the hitting, Baltimore pulled off the triple play, engineered by Lillard, Corbett and Mitten, when Maurice Van Robays smacked a liner into Lillard's hands with two on base in the second inning.

Hopes Dimmed by Triple Play

That triple killing dimmed Montreal's hopes of overcoming the 6-0 lead the Baltimore Orioles piled up in the first inning when Howell and Gill both banged home runs.

Homers also figure in the other triumphs. Al Glossop smacked his circuit clout with two on for Jersey City, but it was shorter hits which finally gave the Little Giants their winning runs in the seventh. Lou Boudreau and Ken Tyler accounted for three of Buffalo's runs by the home run route and Frank Kelleher produced both of Newark's in the same way. Singles and an error turned the trick for Syracuse and Walters got all the way to third in the last inning when Dusty Cooke booted an one-hopper and that set the stage for Tising's winning poke.

R. SOMERVILLE JOINT FAVORITE WITHTED ADAMS

Canadian Amateur Golf Championship Opens in Montreal

ONTARIO WINS

Record Aggregate Turned in by Ontario Team in Opening Willingdon Cup

(By Sydney Gruson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

St. Bruno, Que., July 25 (CP)—It's man against man and hole for hole on Mount Bruno golf course today as amateur golfers from three countries set out in pursuit of the Canadian championship, held by a likeable young fellow from Chillicothe, Mo., who thinks he can win it again.

There are many who agree with 22-year-old Ted Adams of Joplin who make the odds save made him joint favorite with Canada's Ross (Sandy) Somerville, the Scot from London, Ont., and a trio of American braves—Reg Knowles of New Orleans, Frank Stanfield of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Bobby Dunkelberger of Charlotte, N.C.

But it would not be too surprising if a few of the favored five were to go out before the round of eight. The field of 190 is the largest ever that has contested the National amateur.

No surprise was the victory yesterday of Ontario in the Willingdon Cup interprovincial team matches with a record aggregate of 803, 33 strokes better than anything turned in by a team since the competition started 23 years ago. Hot in practice during the week, three-quarters of Ontario's champion team fairly sizzled in drubbing British Columbia by 15 strokes.

Somerville Quite "Hot"

Somerville belted two par 70s, Phil Farley of Toronto scored a 69 for one round only and Jack Wilkins, of the day, Cord Taylor, Jr., of Toronto threw in a 70 after a 76 and Jack Marsh of London staggered Sidhe in 72-74-73. Gordon Conklin, Toronto, eliminated the event. In winning the cup for the seventh time and the second straight year, Ontario turned up the first and second low rounds, Somerville's 70 and Farley with 141. Then came Ken Black of Vancouver, a veteran tournament star, who rolled British Columbia into second place with a second-round 76.

Quebec salvaged third place, with Nova Scotia, United States and Manitoba-Saskatchewan, 638; Nova Scotia, 642; Quebec, 643; Edward Island — New Brunswick, 674.

Winnipeg Boy Champion

The junior championship also was decided today, Donald Bowie Bennett of Winnipeg came home with 149 strokes to overwhelm Bill McColl of Vancouver, the half-Nelson leader, and succeeded Jimmy Hogan of Regina.

But today is another day and the championship is only a beginning. So Somerville has to beat a young Jack Nicklaus, Jr., Joe Kinson and the champion next year, Herb Pickard of Winnipeg. Nicklaus, of the Manufacturers Hanover team, who had a nice 72 on the championship course.

There were another half-dozen or more scores that promised to produce thrilling golf with the possibility of an upset. Bearded and bespectacled Dr. Fred Hamilton Malik, India's trade commissioner to Montreal, who is a native of the United States, has Guy Rolland of Montreal as his first-round opponent—and Rolland is no duffer, as a golfer of the 60-year-old Indian's experience.

Two Dog-Fights

There is another Ted Adams besides the champion in the tournament, the Ted Adams from Boston who is only 18 and already Massachusetts state champion. He is in the midst of a great build-up campaign by his strongest admirer, Art Rose Eckert, Boston hockey fan, who will play Nick Beaner of Montreal. Rose brought Ted to the tournaments

Sprott Hurls Three-Hitter To Beat Locals

Napanee, July 25—Three-hit shutout pitching by Stan Sprott feature Napanee's victory by 6 to 0 win over Belleville here Monday night in a Bay of Quinte Intermediate "A" baseball game. The locals touched Bud Wilkins for 12 hits, including five extra base clouts.

McQuaid hit the first ball Sprott pitched cleanly to centre, but the latter recovered in time to check till Pointer clouted one over the centre fielder's head for a triple in the eighth. He was awarded second on an interference play and scored on a passed ball. Sprott, himself, immediately followed with a hidden ball trick as he stepped off the mat and was tagged out by Jocko. Sprott struck nine batters and allowed two walks. Wilkins fanned eight, passed three and hit one. Weeks got Belleville's third hit in the ninth when his inner glanced hard off Sprott's outstretched glove. Wilkins then ended the game by hitting into a double play.

SHANNONVILLE DEFEATS LATTA IN SEMI-FINALS

SCORE IS 4-3

Latta Scores Three in First and Held Scoreless for Six Innings

Foxboro, July 25 (Special)—Staging a determined last inning batting rally to score three runs and overcome a 3-1 lead, which they spotted their rivals in the very first inning, the Shannonville "Hawks" came from behind last night to take the first game of the South Hastings League semi-finals when they visited Latta and eked out a close 4-3 decision over the homsters. The same activity will now switch back to Shannonville for the second game on Wednesday night with Latta playing host. Ross reserving Juby, their ace righthander, for this important game. It appears that the Shannonville lads might very easily make it two straight over their Latta rivals and thus go into the finals with Carrollton.

Win a Costly One

Last night's win was a costly one for the Shannonville nine however as they lost Sager, their star first sacker, for the rest of the season, the unfortunate lad breaking a leg in the second inning. His spike caught in the home plate as he slid in, with the result, that his leg was twisted, fracturing it midway between the knee and ankle. It is feared to rise from the ground after the accident, Sager's leg was then carried off the field by his teammates and taken to a nearby home while he received first aid at the hands of Dr. Welsh of the Latta team.

Sending in "Monk" Barberstock, their star pitcher, in the fifth in an attempt to repeat the good game he pitched against Latta on Saturday, Shannonville management once wisely as after a bad first inning, he gave his opponents no more times, he tightened down to pitch airtight ball until the last inning when he was relieved by Juby. Holding the losers to three small hits after first frame, Barberstock was materially assisted by his teammates who rallied in the next inning to make a couple of two ply hittings as he was treated to airtight support until the disastrous seventh when two errors after two were out paved the way for Shannon's only pickled for six hits, struck out two and walked four and previously gave up seven hits. All singles, Barberstock out eight and also walked three.

Latta Turns on Heat

After holding the visitors scoreless for the first four innings of the tilt, the Latta lads turned on the heat, when they came to bat with Barberstock trying to stem the tide. Marsh followed with a single, but was forced out at second by Juby as C. Hall stroke to the plate and Juby then went to third on a long hit and scored himself a moment later as the second sacker let Dunning's grounder go through his legs for error. Sager for Shannonville grew tired of the Latta pitcher's antics and to third on Snider's single. Maracle to the plate with a long fly to the plate while Barnhardt hit into a double play to end the inning with a three run lead. In the fifth inning they filled the bases as Barberstock, Juby and Snider all drew free transportation. Cook forced Barberstock at Montreal Shannonville second opponent—and Rolland is no duffer, as a golfer of the 60-year-old Indian's experience.

Fielding a snakeskin team composed of players practically all out of position, the Belleville Intermediates lost 9-0 at Napanee yesterday. The loss marked the sixth consecutive defeat at the hands of Gerow's charges over the locals and the tenth of the season for Belleville. However, there was one gleaming light, insofar as Belleville is concerned, and that being the stellar pitching of Coach Bud Wilkins, who had he been given the average support might have fared much better, as the eliminative righthander really showed what is commonly known as plenty of pitching courage in the box, pitching in a manner that brought admiration even from the homsters bench. Stan Spratt took full advantage of the weekend Belleville team to mow 'em down and pitch a fine game before little opposition. Several members of the local baseball squad deserted the ranks in favor of softball, but we're of the opinion they'll be playing baseball long after softball is passed. The local nine can practically cinch a league play-off berth by beating the Napanee here on Thursday, it should be remembered.

Chuck Barnett's Corbys A.C. softball nine took over power with the willow than they demonstrated against the "Firemen", when the Barnettites took Dracups 12 to 5 in the initial game of the city softball play-offs, sponsored by O.A.S.A. playdowns last night. Actually the league jewel climaxes the city softball into second Sunday.....The Dodgers purchased Dixie Walker from the Tigers to bolster up their outfield, which means Goody Rosen will get a chance to play with the first division club. They lack that spirit lacking Manager Leo Durocher said, to which a great many 'amens' will be tacked. And still the business men of Belleville realize their place in our own little sporting set-up. Softball will still be in the class as described by Mr. Conacher.

With the Rotary Club's big International regatta less than two weeks' off, General Chairman Mac Haig has every confidence that he can handle these days. Apparently the waters of the upper reach of the Bay of Quinte are expected to be ideal for power boat racing, and understanding the class of race on the Civic Holiday program at Mississauga is ruled almost to capacity with top-notch entries already.

Lionel Conacher, M.L.A. and Vice-Chairman of the Ontario Athletic Commission, deplores the absence of men who are willing to aid those youngsters in the field of sport to-day. "Such was the case when I was young. Men gladly came to the moral and financial assistance of the teen-aged athlete and encouraged them. They lack that spirit lacking," Conacher said, to which a great many 'amens' will be tacked. And still the business men of Belleville realize their place in our own little sporting set-up. The Y's Men's Club rushed the Lockin meatmen out of the "No Kick" softball league ranks last night by only after a tidy tussle, that saw the Kiwanis "Apple-knockers" come from behind, that "Toots" Cook's charges fell victims of an 11 to 7 reverse and ultimate elimination. "Bunt" Miller was the big hitting hero of the contest, because "Bunt" not only was returned to the Y's Men's lineup, but banged out three timely hits in his own cause. The Y's Men took both ends of the semi-finals and will meet the Kiwanis "Apple-knockers" in the finals.

Last night the Luckins crowd tossed a scare into the Y's Men's camp with a big batting rally, that saw them came one short of knotting the score but Art Stewart failed in the clutch. Three in the fifth and a four in the sixth was enough to give the Y's Men victory.

Enough power to light the homes and operate the electrical appliances in 15,000 average size clean homes, or to illuminate 200 miles of highway is concentrated in the 124,000,000 candlepower lighting system now being installed at Cleveland Municipal Stadium for the night games of the Indians, according to General Electric engineers.

The system will include the world's two largest batteries of floodlights, producing over 24,000,000 candlepower. Mounted on steel structures atop the stadium, overlooking the outfield, the batteries will use 336 of the 712 1,500-watt floodlights being installed. Each battery uses 168 floodlights, with provision for the addition of 16 more batteries, where needed. The remaining 376 floodlights will be mounted on four other steel structures at strategic points on the stadium roof.

Jim's Lesson

By JOE SIMON

Mariana's heart was heavy. A shadow lay over the little cottage where she and Jim and their brood lived. And no one was sorry for poor Mariana, with a heavy heart, least of all the four chubby little ones who followed her about all day.

Mariana usually bubbled over with good cheer and health and delectable pastries.

It followed naturally that Mariana was fat, but she spent no time lamenting, nor any effort dieting.

The loss of her figure to her was simply the relatively small cost of wifehood and motherhood, and she never even thought of dieting.

She had known too many irritable women who lived on lettuce and unsweetened coffee.

"As long as Jim likes me I should worry," said Mariana, "I have to cook good things for him and the babies and naturally I eat them, too."

Folks always said Mariana was just a "born mother."

He hadn't been feeling well and a friend felt of his flabby muscles and advised him:

"You need exercise, old boy, Just feel these muscles of mine! If you want muscles like that try swimming one hour every afternoon."

Jim's heart contracted with the envy that every strong man inspires in a weaker one. And the idea of brought home a bathing suit.

At first the exercise wearied him terribly, and the hour was one of boredom, then one day a girl in bright red bathing suit called out to him:

"I'll race you to the pier!" and Jim accepted the challenge with spirit.

The girl won, but the race engendered a sort of comradeship and brought up the way to a series of wrestling contacts for Jim.

He looked forward to joining them when he went to the beach and learned to call them by their first names, Yvonne, Bill, John and Margaret, while he learned theirs.

It made him feel strangely youthful and exhilarated.

Then because at heart Jim was loyal and true, it occurred to him that Mariana, too, should learn along, that she, too, might enjoy the fun, and the next time Yvonne saw her in a one-piece bathing suit.

It was the first time in years he had given a second thought to Mariana's figure, but he could hardly help comparing it to Yvonne's.

In that moment the unhappy comparison Mariana's babies and pastries were not to blame.

Jim only realized that she was fat and not so young any more.

Her flesh rolled about her knees and her body was frankly lumpy.

That was the last time Mariana accompanied him to the beach. She made excuses and Jim did not urge her.

It may have been that she noticed the disappointment in Jim's friends cast at her figure, but if she did she said nothing.

As Jim tarried later and later at the beach each evening she still said nothing, but with sore misgivings she came to notice a disturbing new vanity that blossomed out in Jim's gay new ties and rainbow socks.

Being a woman, with that peculiar insight that men seldom, if ever acquire, Mariana knew.

Then she reproached herself that silly pride kept her from continuing a bathing suit again.

A wife should be a pal to her husband.

So that afternoon she said:

"Jim, I'm going to the beach with you, Jim," and Jim answered after the briefest hesitation:

"Sure. Get your hat on."

Perhaps I won't wear a suit," laughed Mariana. "Wouldn't I be a scream in a hat and a bathing suit?"

Then her laughter died away as Jim answered:

"I don't believe I'd go in, Mariana, unless you really care to. You know a fat woman does look funny in a bathing suit."

Mariana was a good woman and a good wife, and she was sorry for Jim, but being woman, he only half sensed the cause of it.

The truth was that Mariana only half realized that Jim's love was not big enough to see through the burden of her flesh to her lithe spirit and to her loving soul, as fair or fairer than ever.

Jim went along again, and that was the evening when Margaret suggested he join them for an evening at the cabaret.

That evening seemed to turn back the pages of time for Jim. He felt years younger and he danced to the lilting music, and he felt a real regret that Mariana had lost her taste for dancing and that she had let herself get fat and uninteresting.

After all, he mused himself, he was still a young man.

That evening was followed by several others, often inspired by Jim's suggestion.

No harm done at all, but some of the money he and Mariana had formerly put to their savings account was now diverted to foot the bills for Jim's good times, and Mariana spent a good many lonely evenings at home with the children.

Jim was sorry for Mariana, but, being man

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

THE PICKLE PLOT

By ELSA S. GRANT

The Iron Horse, with ancient brakes shrieking and rear wheels dragging, came to a precipitous stop before Mabel Porter's house. The time was 7:30 in the evening.

Georgie Blake scrambled out and, taking the porch steps two-at-a-time, pounded on the door.

After a brief pause the door opened and Mabel Porter stood there with a brilliant smile, which faded somewhat when she saw Georgie.

"Oh, hello, Georgie," she said. "I didn't expect you tonight again. Come in."

"Well, gee whiz, Mabel, I have to see you sometime." Georgie shuckled himself out of his overcoat.

"But you saw me last night, and the night before and the night before that," Mabel petulantly observed.

"Sure, but you weren't alone," Georgie protested. "That tooter—"

From the living room came the staccato sounds of experimental blasts of a cornet. Georgie's ardigut was great.

"Hey, Mabel, is that darn' tooter here again?"

"Of course," Mabel answered. "The ice cream social is only four days away and Hugo's piece is so difficult he needs all the practice he can get."

"You're telling me!" Georgie growled. "Every night I come over here he's tooting that horn. The more he toots the worse he gets."

"It's too bad you can't do half as well," Mabel said acidly. "If you feel that way you'd better go home."

"All right," Georgie sighed, following her toward the living room.

"But for Pete sake don't talk music all night! Send him home early, Mabel whirled before the living room door.

"Now you listen to me," she hissed. "Hugo Green's aesthetic. If we want to talk music we will; and when Hugo gets ready he'll go home."

"Well, anyhow," Georgie hissed back, "don't forget you're going to the picnic with me the day after the ice cream social!"

"As if I could forget it!" Mabel said tartly and opened the door.

Hugo Green, cheeks puffed and eyes staring behind their thick glasses, was blowing a noiseless clearing blast through the horn.

"Hello, Georgie," he panted, "what's new?"

"The same old story around here," Georgie answered wearily.

He dropped into an easy chair close to the piano, while Mabel took her place on the bench.

"Well, Mabel, let's try it again," Hugo said brightly. "Practice makes perfect they say."

"They're liars!" Georgie growled.

"Georgie," Mabel snapped, "you keep still."

She struck a sharp chord. "All ready, Hugo?"

Hugo was both patient and willing, and the piece was repeated eight times. It was truly a difficult composition, filled with short runs and spots of staccato repetition, and it closed with a hard bit of triple tonguing and a sudden breathless leap to an extremely high C.

This jump caused Hugo much trouble. Eight times he missed it, filling the room with most disturbing, fastened sounds, that were a joy to nobody's heart but Georgie's.

"I feel certain it will go all right," he said. "You have been patient with me, Mabel."

"You have, too," Hugo agreed earnestly. "It's been a great help to me having you come over every night and listen to me play, Georgie."

"Hey," Georgie cried incredulously, "you don't think—"

"Georgie," Mabel snapped. "It's so late you'd better take Hugo home in your car."

"Who, me?" Georgie demanded in surprise. "I wasn't—"

"That's great!" Hugo enthused. "Thanks a lot, Georgie."

"Hey, Mabel—" Georgie began desperately.

"Don't forget the picnic," Mabel said significantly. "And be sure Hugo gets home safely, or else!"

The four succeeding nights proved no different so there is small wonder that Georgie appeared at the ice cream social in an unfriendly frame of mind toward musicians, and horn blowers in particular.

Under his arm he carried an innocent looking white box, which he made no attempt to conceal.

It is to Georgie's credit that he sought to engage them in conversation, but they had little time for him so busy were they soaring the aesthetic altitudes in their own small talk.

Who can blame Georgie, being so ignored and snubbed, if he ate nine large helpings of ice cream?

Who can blame him if he sat and brooded over the white box?

Meanwhile the concert progressed rapidly.

Hugo's part, held until the last because the dramatic ending of his piece was considered most appropriate as a grand finale, was finally announced.

Georgie sat up expectantly.

Hugo took his position by the piano only a few feet distant. He had barely given a few tentative tantaras and plunged into his piece when Georgie extracted from the box a large juicy dill pickle, and before Hugo's horrified gaze bit a generous section off the end.

He ate the whole of it with relish and gusto, watching Hugo intently, and having finished it, began another even larger and more juicy.

Hugo looked worried. Georgie began a third pickle without a pause, watching his victim closely. But Hugo triple-tongued without a falter. Now came the supreme test, the dangerous leap for the high C and Georgie drew from the box the largest, the most succulent dill pickle of every green.

Hugo's eyes bulged behind the cornet as Georgie opened wide his mouth and sank his teeth into the side of that pickle of pickles.

The cornet blared and the high C rang true and clear. Mabel and Hugo bowed and bowed amid the applause.

Later Georgie was trying to make headway through the crowd to the door when Mabel's voice caught up with him.

"Georgie Blake, you ought to be ashamed of yourself!"

"Who, me?" Georgie turned, looking surprised. "What for?"

"Eating pickles in front of Hugo so he'd ruin his piece. I might have known!"

"Oh, Georgie wouldn't do that," Hugo protested. "Besides, I don't like pickles. They don't affect me that way."

Georgie grabbed a chair for support. "You don't like pickles," he exclaimed a little wildly. "They don't—" Georgie was feeling queer. "What worried me," he continued, "was the nine helpings of ice cream you ate."

"Rats!" Georgie said weakly, but he could feel himself turning green. Perspiration broke out on him and he shivered. "I—I'll see you later," he cried, but Georgie waved a weak hand toward Hugo and the door closed mercifully after him.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, This Current Events Club of the Queens of Cleopattera is conaldering a little innovation, Willyum.

Are they dikkupted with current events, I dont blame them, pop said, and ma said, No it's not, that, the idea is to have the various members husbands deliver little addresses from time to time on some aspect of business that would be of intrist to women, such as well such as anything.

That allows for a broad choice, pop said, and ma said, I told the ladies that you would probebly volunteer, I know you could make a very intristing speech, Willyum.

Sure I could, pop said, and ma said, Now that's nice of you. Willyum, I was afraid I'd have a little argument on my hands. What aspect of business appeals to you as a good subject, Willyum? she said.

How's this for a title, Never try to ballance your own checkbook while there's a willing husband in the home, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum that's a question we've proved you are wrong hundreds of times without number, so be serious.

I am, and the annals of history will testify to it, as I shall prove in my lecture, pop said. For instants, when Ramses the 42nd of Egypt forced his wife, Queen Docia, to carve out her own bank ballence with a chisel on a stalleck she got it wrong 20 times and the 21st try she bit her wrist with the stalleck and sued Ramses for divorce and won her case before Egypt's first jury of women, and I'll give you another instance, he said, and ma said No thanks never mind, I'll just tell the ladies you're too busy.

No sirree come to think of it so am, pop said.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, July 25—(CP)—Calves and lambs held barely steady while hogs remained unchanged in early trading on Montreal livestock markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Calfle were at a standstill. There were no early sales.

Receipts: Cattle 742; sheep and lambs 887; hogs 1,166; calves 715; cattle to the number of 600, mostly medium quality steers, were held over from yesterday's market.

Calves: Common light veals $8; medium good veals $7; good veals $7.25-$7.50, with an odd top at $8; grassers $4.

Lambs: Good ewes and wethers $9.50; bucks $8.50; culls $7.50; sheep $2.50-$4.

Hogs: Bacons fed and watered $9.75; off truck $10. Selects drew $1 per hog premium with the usual cuts on off grades. Sows $5.25-$6.25; hogs on rail grade $13.50, sold weight.

Toronto, July 25—(CP)—Prices were generally steady with Monday's close on the Toronto Livestock Market list of cattle, calves, sheep and lambs. No prices were established for lambs. About 1,200 head of cattle were held from Monday.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were, cattle 1,200; calves 500; hogs 1,300; sheep and lambs 370.

Common to medium butchers were $5-$6.25. Good butchers reached $6.50. Weighty steers sold at $5.75-$6.50. Butcher cows brought $3.25-$4.50 and canners and cutters $2.25-$2.75. Bulls sold at $4-$6.10. Fed Calves sold at $7-$8.25.

Choice veal calves brought $8.50-$9 with common down to $6. Heavy calves were $4-$4.50.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $9.25-$9.35.

Good ewe and wether lambs were mostly $9.50 with some reaching $9.75. Sheep sold at $2-$4 cwt.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, July 25.—(CP)—There was a general downward trend in bacon hog prices at reporting markets today with dressed-weights 25 cents lower at Brantford and London, and five cents down at Hamilton. Brantford Liveweights paid $9 and dressed Liveweight Brantford $9; Hull $8.75.

Dressedweights: Barrie $13.25; Brantford $13; Hamilton $13.35; Hull $13; Stratford $12; plus transportation; London $11.75 plus transportation.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 25 (CP)—Moderate gains were netted by the Industrial and the Base Metal groups in today's session of the Toronto Exchange and these were trimmed a little in the mild display of weakness that marked the closing period. The golds and western oils shaded their noon gains in the dull final hour. Aggregate turnover was off to about 263,000 shares.

Industrial shares gathered strength, working higher with the New York Market, and they showed an index gain of a point at noon while other index groups firmed only slightly. Trading quieted down in the second hour and was still dragging slowly at early afternoon with prices showing a tendency to ease off.

Higher prices were posted for the foods, utilities, steels, papers and senior oils. In the base metal group Noranda and Hudson Bay firmed narrowly while the medium-price golds showed practically no change.

Royalite, Brown and Davies pooled minor gains and Home Oil was slightly stronger at 2.18 to 2.20. Other western oils held steady.

WALL STREET

New York, July 25.—(AP) Stocks under the leadership of steels, bounded up as much as 2 points or so in today's early market, but lost a sizeable portion of their gains later under profit taking pressure.

The pace, fast on the forenoon recovery shift, subsided as the proceedings drew to a close. Transfers for the five hours were at the rate of approximately 1,300,000 shares.

'FOREIGN-LOOKING' BERETS STIR IRE OF 2 BRITISH M.P.'S

London, July 25 (AP)—Two Conservative members of parliament objected today to the "foreign-looking" berets worn by Britain's new militiamen (Conscripts) when off duty and suggested something more English in type".

War Secretary Hore-Belisha said the berets were made in England, were believed to be the most convenient headgear and therefore no change would be made.

SAVINGS SLOT MACHINES SUCCESS IN GERMANY

Koeln (Cologne), Germany, July 25 (CP-Havas)—Seventy-five saving account slot machines used here by a savings bank have been so successful that the system will be extended.

The machines stand near factory pay windows and before barracks. When the man puts a coin in the slot he pulls a lever which prints the amount on his card.

Broadcasting Unit Undamaged

Halifax, July 25 (CP)—A $30,000 mobile broadcasting unit owned by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation was back on the highway today, apparently little damaged after hanging for hours over a 500-foot cliff in northern Cape Breton Island held only by its rear axle.

The trailer, used in taking recordings for a "Summer Over the Maritimes" series to be issued by the C.B.C., was bound for Glace Bay after traversing a Gaelic program at Ingonish when it ill-judged off the highway. Below was Smokey Mountain Valley, a sheer drop of 500 feet.

The three aboard, R. T. Bowman, of Toronto, director of special events broadcasts for C.B.C., and engineers Cliff Spence and Fred Wadsworth, jumped clear as the trailer hung over the precipice—but late riley climbed back and rescued all their records.

Then they engaged the aid of fishermen and others in the district to help them place the trailer back on the road.

Admits Leaving Scene of Accident

Stratford, Ont., July 25.—(CP)—When he pleaded guilty to charges of leaving the scene of an accident and to reckless driving Magistrate Alfred Monteith fined Edward Brennan of Munro $25 and costs and suspended his driver's license for three months. In default of payment he granted suspended sentence in the county jail. Brennan paid costs.

A third charge of failing to advise the Department of Highways of a change of address within 48 days was dismissed when the Crown offered no evidence. The fine with costs on the two counts amounted to $47.80.

Belleville Golfer Plays in Tourney

Mount Bruno Golf Course, St. Bruno, Que., July 25.—(CP)—Freddie Haas, Jr., of New Orleans, one of the favorites, announced his withdrawal from the Canadian Amateur golf championship, a letter received today by officials of the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

Haas, former Canadian champion, had been scheduled to start in the championship round today but officials gave him until noon today to put in an appearance. His letter said a recent illness and lack of time to reach Montreal would prevent him coming.

The withdrawal of Haas gave Dr. Dudley R. Ross of Montreal a bye into the third round. Second in July Ronalds of Montreal, Salmon was drawn against Ralph Strafaci of Brooklyn, N.Y., who played against T. Carruthers of Belleville, instead. Carruthers was a post entry.

Washington, July 25—(AP)—Friends of Senator Robert A. Taft (Rep-Ohio) said today he soon would announce plans of his willingness to stand for the Republican presidential nomination in 1940 if the party requested authoritatively that Senator Taft would include in his statement his views on national problems.

German-Canadian League Praises British Citizenship

Montreal, July 25 (CP)—Montreal division of the German-Canadian League today issued a statement saying that although "there may be individual cases of discrimination" against Germans in Canada "these are very rare and the direct result of anti-Canadian articles of the German Bund and other Nazi organizations."

The statement referred to the departure of a group of German immigrants by Fuehrer Hans Schilling and former residents of the Loon River district in Saskatchewan for Germany from New York last night.

It said: "We are very glad to notice that some of Mr. Schilling's supporters and sympathizers have left Canada. The sooner they all depart, the better for the tranquility of the country. We German-Canadians want nothing else but to be permitted to live and earn our livelihood in the new adopted homeland, together with all lother Canadians who appreciate the value of citizenship in a country governed by British laws."

The statement, adopted at a meeting of the eastern district's executive committee of the German-Canadian League, said:

"We (Schilling) complains for example that a baker at Loon Lake was threatened with 'boycott' unless he ceased his Nazi activities, while he does not tell the public that it is the German-Canadians of that district who were the ones to threaten with the boycott. The German-Canadians are disgusted with the nefarious activities of the Nazi minority n the German colony in Canada. To be Anti-Nazi is not equivalent to being Anti-German, as Mr. Schilling tries to impress the Canadian people. Being Anti-Nazi in Canada is Anti-German and a violent imposition upon the German people by the most infamous and ruthless minority group in Germany."

BRITISH ATTITUDE REMAINS UNCHANGED ON CHINA'S CURRENCY

London, July 25 (CP) — Arthur Henderson, Labor, asked Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, in the House of Commons today whether the Federation of British Industries intends to reopen trade negotiations with German representatives.

Mr. Stanley said the position "remains as announced before after the events of March (the break-up of Czecho-Slovakia), that in view of the political situation the conversations had to be suspended."

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was asked whether the government intends to support China's currency in view of the new Anglo-Japanese formula on China announced yesterday, in which Britain recognized special requirements of the Japanese forces in the occupied areas of China.

Sir John said the government's position is unchanged.

WAITS FOR 48 HOURS

Raleigh, N.C., July 25 (AP)—Tl be back in a little while; you just wait right here until I return."

That said Eugene Marsh, Anson County negro, was what his boss told him as he parked his car here Friday. So Marsh waited, not knowing his boss had forgotten where he parked the car, and had reported the matter to police. Police located the car 48 hours later. They found Marsh still waiting, sitting in the back seat.

Lipson's

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby A. Coyne

"It's a perfectly glorious night," Jane said.

"It is! I've been too busy to notice." Pamela sat down by the fire. "There's a letter from Dickie—she's staying on, she says."

"She would," Jane said harshly. "Well, I don't blame her." Pamela said. "She has such a good time with the Lawsons."

"Not my idea of a good time."

Jane made a little grimace.

"What's your idea of a good time?" she asked interestedly.

Her sister considered the point.

"I suppose to have a home of my own—and a husband," she said practically.

Jane buttered a piece of toast.

"Are you going to marry Sidney Dale?" she asked abruptly.

Pamela half shrugged her shoulders.

"How can I? What would become of father—and you two girls?"

"What would become of us if you were dead?" Jane inquired bluntly.

Pamela frowned. "You say such horrid things," she objected.

"Sidney won't wait forever," Jane remarked philosophically. "And if you like each other——"

"There's plenty of time," Pamela answered.

Jane pushed her plate aside and leaned her elbows on the table. "I shall be twenty-one in three months' time," she said.

"I know. What about it? What will you do?"

"I haven't really made up my mind yet—perhaps I shall travel."

"You can't travel alone."

"Can't I? I do most things alone."

"It wouldn't be any fun—alone, surely?"

"Perhaps I shall con- across a kindred spirit," Jane said flippantly.

"Some one who will help you to spend your money," her sister retorted. "Three thousand pounds won't last forever—you ought to keep it invested and live on the interest."

"How dull!"

"It would be worse to have nothing at all—and somehow I don't believe you will ever get married."

"Why not?" Jane asked sharply.

"Oh, I don't know—you don't seem to care about men."

"We don't know any——"

"Of course we do—Dulcie knows dozens——"

"Dulcie is a beauty."

"And I've got Sidney," Pamela said complacently.

"And I've got three thousand pounds," Jane reminded her, and then with sudden energy: "Why shouldn't I get married?"

"I can't imagine you as any one's wife. You're such a frightful muddler," Pamela said with distant candor.

"Perhaps some men like muddlers," Jane retorted.

"They don't choose them for wives," Pamela said wisely.

Jane groped for a cigarette.

"I've always like to marry a pioneer," she said, after a moment. "I should like to live abroad—Canada or Australia, or somewhere like that where we could ride horseback——"

"And be boiled alive in summer and frozen to death in the winter," Pamela said.

"I shouldn't have to dress up, anyway," Jane retorted. "I can't think why Dulcie finds it such fun to keep on changing her frock, and having her hair waved. Waste of money——"

"You'd look a great deal better if you had your hair waved."

"Me!" Jane laughed, and passed a hand across her unruly mop. "I'd be sorry for any one who tried to wave my hair! Have a cigarette?"

"No, thank you." There was a little silence before Pamela said, "Father has asked a man to dinner tomorrow night—Dr. Bingham's nephew. He comes from Canada, and Dr. Bingham seems to think he's finding it rather dull, and sort of suggested we should be polite to him. It's a pity Dulcie isn't home."

Jane checked a smile, wondering why it seemed impossible to say, as she would have done in the ordinary way, "He isn't—I know him."

"Why?" Pamela demanded sharply.

"Well—men always like her better than they like us——"

The silence fell again till Jane asked, with elaborate indifference, "Is he coming?"

"I suppose so—I've asked Sidney, too. It will look better to have another man. I hope he's not frightfully dull and ordinary."

Jane checked a smile, wondering why it seemed impossible to say, as she would have done in the ordinary way, "He isn't—I know him."

"Why?" Pamela demanded sharply.

"Well—men always like her better than they like us——"

The silence fell again till Jane asked, with elaborate indifference, "Is he coming?"

BRITAIN BUILDS 3 SUB-STRATOSPHERE PLANES

16 Are Injured In Explosion, I. R. A is Blamed

FULL FORCE FELT

Scotland Yard Cancels Police Leaves for August 8 Bank Holiday, Fear of I.R.A. Agents' Plan for Terrorist Acts During That Week-End

London, July 26—(AP)—Sixteen persons were hurt, one fatally, when an explosion, blamed by police on the illegal Irish Republican Army, shattered th eluggage room of one of London's most crowded railway stations today.

The blast, which followed by two days Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare's recital of the terrorist "plans" in the case of Germany, set off a lunchtime panic in the King's Cross Station of the London and Northern railroad.

Broken glass and litter were blown over an area nearly 40 yards square. A checkroom attendant's hands were mangled. Three customers, ten of them women, and two other employees felt the full force of the blast.

Suitcases Rent Open

Scores of checked suitcases and parcels were torn apart and their contents scattered.

London, July 26—(CP)—Scotland Yard today cancelled police leaves for the Aug. 7 bank holiday following receipts of information that Irish Republican Army agents planned terrorist acts during the week-end.

Why the Weather!

Deserts of snow and sand! In spite of their apparent opposite aspects, some very striking similarities of the cold and hot deserts last summer. Snowdrifts are both almost destitute of vegetation, wood, water and animal life. Both are noted for their monotony; there is the monotony of silence, except when broken by the howl of the wind, and, in one, the cold desert, the cracking of ice, and the monotony of the cold and glare in the one, and heat and glare in the other. In both, man and beast suffer from thirst due to the excessive evaporation from the lungs. In the hot deserts there is no moisture to be had except at the oases, while in the cold deserts there is plenty of snow, but eating that leads to inflammation of the throat and to digestive disorders.

Cow-Deer Sprouts Antlers at 2 Mos.

Lucknow, Ont., July 26—(CP)—Reputedly a cow-deer, a two-months-old animal on William Wraith's farm at nearby Ingleside is attracting much attention these days.

Wraith said the animal was born of a Durham cow, lost in the bush last fall. He was burning off the home of his calves, when he noticed "Ferdinand" was sprouting antlers.

A shaggy coat covers the oddity's rear quarters and the front portion is covered with smooth silky hair. It has ears twice as big as any calf and leaps and runs as gracefully as a fawn.

Traffic Officers Instructed to Enforce New Regulations

Toronto, July 26—(CP)—Attorney-General Conant announced today he has instructed Ontario Traffic Officers to enforce with vigor the new regulations governing automobile headlights which become effective Aug. 1.

The new regulation provides automobiles manufactured after Aug. 1 may not be operated without multiple beam headlamps. Single beam headlamps will be permitted only on cars already on the road and only if the high intensity portion of the beam does not project higher than five inches from the centre of the lamp at 25 feet.

Mr. Conant said glare was the cause of many accidents and police will insist on strict observance of the new regulations which includes a clause ordering drivers to lower their lights when passing another vehicle.

Sabago is Name Of New Potato

New 'Spud' Introduced in Middlesex Co.

London, Ont., July 26.—(CP)—A new variety of highly resistant potato is called "Sabago", introduced to Middlesex County experimental farm for the first time this year, it is stated, a good change of potatoes is expected in future Canadian potato markets.

Norman Parks, in charge of potato experimental work in the district, told a gathering of field crop experts here last night the new variety has shown "unusually favorable" results in trial growth here, proving itself a good-yielding brand with high resistance to blight.

Other potatoes on the trial farming of 75 district agriculturists were Dr. C. B. McRostie of the Ontario Agricultural College, Dr. Hunnisett of Department and Prof. H. G. Bell of the College's Chemistry Department, who urged farmers to make "great use" of soil-testing facilities offered to them.

VIOLENT DEATHS ACROSS CANADA 18 IN ONE DAY

Ten Drownings Reported and Mainly Due to Thousands Trying to Escape Heat

FIVE IN ONTARIO

Four of the Drownings Involved Children Less Than Ten Years of Age

By The Canadian Press

Canada's mounting toll of drownings was 10 higher today as the Dominion's citizens scanned a list of 18 violent deaths in one day. Heat indirectly led to many of the fatalities as thousands sought respite in lakes and rivers.

Yesterday claimed five lives in Ontario, three in Quebec, two in British Columbia, and one in New Brunswick.

Railway accidents took two lives in Prince Edward Island, when a child was suffocated and a man was killed by a train; one man was asphyxiated in Montreal; a three-year-old girl died in a fall at Kincardine, Ont., and a Montreal man died of injuries resulting from a high-way accident.

Description of Kidnappers Given by Minister

Jerusalem, July 26.—(AP)—After a fitful sleep—his first rest in a week—the Rev. Gerould Goldner today gave police a detailed description of his Arab kidnappers and told friends how he tried in vain to escape.

Rev. Goldner, father of the young Ohio, Pastor, obtained his son's release yesterday in a tent where between £200 and £500"—between $1,000 and $2,500—paid direct to the Arab band and not through intermediaries.

Throughout the kidnapping I made plans to escape from the gang," Goldner said. "But the guns were under found out and posted two men at my side incessantly. The most beautiful moment during his captivity was when he was given a note from his wife. I recognized it the roving band by a Bedouin intermediary.

A physician examined Goldner and advised "him to stay in bed for a few days but he spurned the new captivity his shown "unusually favorable" results in trial growth here, proving itself a good-yielding brand with high" resistance to blight.

Other potatoes on the trial farming of 75 district agriculturists were Dr. C. B. McRostie of the Ontario Agricultural College, Dr. Hunnisett of Department and Prof. H. G. Bell of the College's Chemistry Department, who urged farmers to make "great use" of soil-testing facilities offered to them.

Shaw 83 Years Old Today; His Hold on Stage is Powerful

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 26—(CP)—Bernard Shaw, who says he "ought to be dead," reached his 83rd birthday anniversary today and celebrated as hearty and certainly as popular as ever.

He spent the day "like any other Wednesday," his secretary said, "except that he is 83 years old, by death."

Like any other Wednesday, the Irish playwright returned about noon from a long week-end at his country retreat, Ayot Saint Lawrence to his London flat.

The vegetarian sage of Whitehall Court, who lists his recreation in "Who's Who" as "anything but sport," is still working and has enjoyed one of his best years in the theatre.

Twelve days from now his 50th play will be produced at the Malvern Dramatic Festival. It is called 'In Good King Charles's Golden Days" and the Irish dramatist boasts that he has managed to treat of King Charles without giving Nell Gwynne a prominent part.

The film version of Shaw's "Pygmalion" is still a current success. His play "Arms and the Man" is now in London.

It ran more than 200 performances in a single six-month run than in all the previous years since Shaw wrote it in 1894.

A revival of "Pygmalion" at the Haymarket next month, Shaw, though it had Margaret Rawlings as Eliza Doolittle and Leslie Sydney as Professor Higgins, but then the motion picture version of the story which Shaw said he liked better than the stage presentation completed with the play.

Critics were a bit puzzled by the increased demand for the old Irishman's plays, but decided the public had begun to catch up with him and appreciate him. They said that was not too bad for a man said he thought he should be dead.

Ratepayers Meeting Held at Wallbridge Town Hall Monday Night

VOTE SATURDAY

Meeting Told Expenditure This Year by Company Would be $200,000

Foxboro, July 26 — (Special)— Deeming it advisable, that the township ratepayers should have a more definite standing on the new situation before being asked to vote upon it, the Sidney Township Council held an open meeting in the Town Hall at Wallbridge on Monday evening to discuss with the electors the matter of the proposed fixed assessment asked by the Bata Limited and Export Leather Co.

In the absence of the Reeve, Mr. George Rush, who was conducting a similar meeting in the southern part of the township, Deputy Reeve, Mr. Sam Hopkins acted as chairman for the evening and after giving the ratepayers a rough sketch as to the purpose of the meeting, called on Mr. George Perry, reeve of Frankford Village, to give an outline of the activities which the Bata Company has already undertaken in this district.

Gives Brief Outline

In opening, Mr. Spencer stated, that he had been largely in the direct effort of himself and his colleagues in office, that the company were influenced to locate in this locality. "Under the circumstances," he stated, "we really hold the key to whether they were allowed in or not at this time," he continued, however, we substantially reduced the assessment on the paper mill property, which they were anxious to have and thereby allowed the owners to come to agreeable terms with the Bata Company. Owing to the fact, that the reduced assessment on the paper mill has compelled us to make up the tax rate five mills, we already come in for a great deal of criticism from the taxpayers, but this is unjustified, because of the increased business within the next few years will more than offset our present difficulties."

Build One Unit This Year

In referring to the proposed construction work to be undertaken by the Bata Company, Mr. Spencer said, that the company intended to build one unit immediately and one community house this autumn and that the estimated expenditure would be upwards of $200,000 and on this property they are asking from the Council a fixed assessment of $20,000 for a period of ten years. Any residences, which they may construct would be assessed the same as any other township property in the district.

PREMIER EXPECTS PACT WITH RUSSIA SOON NEGOTIATED

Reports Are Optimistic in Official Circles in London

STAFF TALK RUMOR

Instructions Are Sent to British Ambassador in Moscow, Premier Says

London, July 26—(CP)—The government has sent new instructions to the British envoy in Moscow, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today. He added he expected to make a statement early next week on the Moscow negotiations for an Anglo-French-Russian mutual assistance pact.

This announcement, coupled with optimistic reports in official circles, led to the belief that the government hoped to be able soon to announce completion of such a pact.

Mr. Chamberlain would neither deny nor confirm reports that Great Britain and France have agreed to discontinue staff talks with Russia without waiting for conclusion of a projected pact. These quarters said British and French missions probably would leave for Moscow within 10 days.

Staff Talks Rumored

Asked whether it has been agreed that military and naval officers should go to Moscow for staff talks, Mr. Chamberlain replied:

GERMANY STARTS DRIVE TO COLLECT ALL SCRAP IRON

Will Also Start Training of Women to Take Over Men's Job

LABOR SHORTAGE

Berlin, July 26—(AP)—Germany today intensified efforts to overcome a shortage of raw materials and labor by the direction of government and economic self sufficiency through a new drive to collect scrap iron and by training women to take over men's job.

The Fuehrer's command for iron ore and scrap iron, Field Marshal Hermann Goering, is the director of the four-year self-sufficiency plan, was issued through the "scrap iron collection campaign" which was reported to have brought in approximately 500,000 tons of scrap metal.

Newspapers today published another call for women to volunteer for labor service beginning August 1 as the date for beginning a new scrap iron collection campaign in Germany.

BLISTERING HEAT AND THE DROUGHT DAMAGE CROPS

Temperatures Strike New High in Several Centres

SHALLOW WELLS EMPTY

By The Canadian Press

Blistering heat was added to drought in Ontario today, with a toll of lives and prostrations added to the already serious damage to crops and timberlands.

As the heat wave continued to sweep in from the United States, farmers reported the hot dry weather has just completed the most disastrous drought in 10 years.

Temperatures struck new highs for the year in several centres, and in the province's sweltering thousands sought relief, five children lost their lives in Lake Ontario.

Rangers Remain Alert

Forest rangers remained on the alert as conditions made for tinder-dry husbands. There were no reports of new fires yesterday but two bush fires, gaining headway during the last two days, moved within two miles of Kaladar, near Belleville.

A week-old blaze west of the Eastern Ontario village is advancing, a square mile of charred timber already its prey. No farms have been damaged.

LOST 8 DAYS BOY FINDS WAY OUT OF FOREST

EATS BERRIES

Sherman, Me., July 26—(AP)— An amazing tale of tenacious courage spilled today from the lips of a 12-year-old boy who, lost in the Fendler of Rye, N.Y., who literally found himself after being lost for eight days in the underbrush of Maine's northern wilderness.

While searchers scoured the steep, crevasse-scarred sides of lofty Mount Katahdin, near the Boy Scout, wandered 35 miles from the peak on which he disappeared July 17, followed a river and then a power line until finally he came last night to the home of Nelson McMoram, 62, a guide.

JAPAN BELIEVES BRITAIN WILL NOT ASSIST CHINESE

Naval Manpower Stepped Up With an Eye on Soviet Russia

RESERVISTS CALLED

Tokyo, July 26—(AP)—Claiming confidence the essential Chinese government would receive no more help from Great Britain to oppose the Japanese army in China, Japan today stepped up her naval manpower apparently with an eye on Soviet Russia.

Unofficially called naval reservists to active duty while Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, Naval Minister, declared organization of a new squadron which soon will begin training operations around the combined imperial fleet.

Neutral naval experts expressed belief the 3,000 reservists and the fleet reinforcement probably related to Japan's recent occupation and Russia over Sakhalin Island and oil coal concessions. Yonai did not disclose the number or type of ships in the new squadron.

It was supposed the reservists called up were to supply the expansion of regular personnel needed for the new squadron. Japan has 175,000 reservists to supplement her more than 100,000 regulars.

Machines to Cross Atlantic in 1940 At 240 Miles Hour!

British Air Ministry Builds Ships for Air Service, Five of Which Will Reach 275 M.P.H. at 25,000 Feet

ABLE TO BUCK GALE

24 Passengers on Day Voyages and 12 on Night Flights Will be Sealed in "Pressurized" Fuselage — Will Breath Air at Sea-Level Density

London, July 26—(CP)—The Air Ministry is planning trans-Atlantic sub-stratosphere service for next year with land planes spanning the ocean at a cruising speed of more than four miles a minute.

Contracts for three 24-ton machines, one of which is designed to cruise at 275 miles per hour at 25,000 feet, has been started at Rochester, the Air Ministry ordered the planes last year.

The Society of British Aircraft Constructors, Limited, building the new planes, said each would have a 3,000-mile range behind a 30-mile headwind with a payload of 7,500 pounds in addition to a crew-seven. One third of each plane's loaded weight of 71,000 pounds will be structural material and one third fuel and oil.

The planes will be powered by four Bristol Hercules 14-cylinder, sleeve valve engines.

The maximum—24 on day trips and 12 on night flights—will be sealed in a "pressurized" fuselage and will breathe super-charged air approximating sea-level density and obviating the need for individual oxygen apparatus. Engineers believe that the ordinary all-metal, stressed skin construction will be suitable for the pressurized fuselage.

BERLIN STAGES A "BLACKOUT"

Several Days of Drill Against Aerial Warfare Will be Held

Berlin, July 26—(AP)—Sirens at midafternoon today sounded Berlin on several days of drill in defense against aerial bombardment by force of aerial warfare.

The siren blasts sent Berlin's entire force of air-raid wardens and to their stations, where they were ordered to stand by and given their orders.

Earlier Berliners bought black coverings for their windows and lights so as to be ready for tonight's blackout.

ALMONTE BAKER FOUND ON ROAD

Remained in Dense Bush All Night After Becoming Lost

Almonte, Ont., July 26—(CP) — After a wide search since he disappeared Saturday from his nearby Wolfe's Grove, William D. Lea was found today by motorists on a side road toward town.

The 62-year-old Almonte baker became lost in the densely wooded section yesterday while picking berries and his relatives felt he decided to remain in the grove until morning.

A search, in which more than 100 men took part, was instituted last night when he failed to return home. Lea was none the worse for his experience.

SEEKS CONTINUANCE OF FEDERAL AID

Sarnia, Ont., July 26 (CP)—Sarnia city council was on record today as favoring continuance of federal aid to the province of Quebec urging the Dominion government to renew for another ten years the law providing for a grant to the federal government to aid technical education in the provinces.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to Labor Minister Rogers. The arrangement under the law was that the Dominion government to share evenly with the provincial government any expenditure made by develop technical education in any province.

FINANCIAL TRANSFER OF BANK DEBITS

Ottawa, July 26 (CP)—Financial transfers in the form of bank debits declined to $3,581,944 in June from $3,829,306,623 the previous month, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports. In June, 1938, the total was $3,730,577,807.

Announts in June with figures for the preceding month, and June, 1938, in Cheknto Ontario $1,281,486,-215 ($1,295,215,577-$1,303,490,024.)

Special Criminal Code to Apply To N. W. T. May Be Necessary

Ottawa, July 26—(CP)— The trial at Pangnirtung on Baffin Island scheduled for Sept. 14, when an Eskimo named Nuvalinga will be tried on the murder of his two sons, may cause the Justice Department to ask parliament for a special Criminal Code to apply to the North West Territories.

Kaitche is accused of so illtreating his two children that they contracted brain fever and died. Major D. L. McKeand, commander of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in the eastern Arctic on the icebreaker Nascopie, was armed with affidavits before his departure to preside as judge at the trial, and two coun-sel, one for the crown and one for the other the prisoner, also will go to Pangnirtung.

Should the Eskimo be found guilty of murder or manslaughter, the problem confronting the Department is what the punishment should be. It is felt there would be a revulsion of public opinion to execute one of these primitive people.

There are no penitentiaries in the north, and to bring him down to a prison in civilization would be to condemn him to tuberculosis. No Eskimo brought down to prisons in the Mackenzie River district has survived the disease, it is claimed.

To keep a guilty Eskimo in custody in the north would be useless, as he would be free to return to his native haunts because of his offences.

It is only fair in regard to the Eskimo that the Criminal Code hampers the fo-ce of law and order in the North West Territories if administration has been confronted with comparable persons going into new mining camps in the Territories. The obvious place to stop such people is when they seek to get on a plane going into the north, but the administration has no authority to act then, and has to wait until they have committed their first act at the camps when the..country is put to great expense conveying them to a prison.

DESERONTO TEACHER GETS MADOC POST

Miss Ruth Schell, a member of the teaching staff of the Deseronto school for some time past has accepted a position on the staff of the Madoc High School. This will leave no vacancy on the staff of the Deseronto school as commencing with the fall term there will be only five teachers instead of six.

THRESHING MACHINES MAKE FIRST ROUNDS

First of the season's threshing has commenced in the Belleville area and outside of Prince Edward County and first hopes for a fair harvest of grain are being realized. It is reported on the farm of Bert Sills, Redcreville, a yield of 40 acres of wheat to the bushel is reported, while the same average yield is reported from the farm of W. C. Mitchell, R.R. 4, Belleville. This yield is contrasted with a top yield of 67 bushels the acre in the county. First 'dirt' threshing will be undertaken next week in Sidney.

DRIFTING CANOE ATTRACTS BOATMEN

The unusual sight of an empty canoe drifting in the middle of the bay near the Belleville waterfront while two youths splashed in the water some distance from the craft attracted scores to the scene when it appeared an accident had happened. Reassured that the craft was away with a smile by the boys, however, they quickly paddled to the middle of the bay, then dove in to cool off. Both boys managed to regain the boat without difficulty.

THE TASTE LINGERED WHEN CAUSE FOUND

Members of Stector Gray's fishing party yesterday complained of the strange taste in the water they travelled with them down the bay.

The cause was found shortly before the arrival of the boat home when one thirsty member sampled the large bottle of mineral thermos jug of its last drink. With the draining of the jug three small pebbles dropped into the cup. The fish had been put for safe keeping into the jug by a very lazy member of the party unknown to the rest of them.

FARMERS DRIVE COWS WHEN WELLS GO DRY

With wells rapidly going dry in the section due to the extended drought and aridity of the soil, many farmers of the district have been forced lately to haul water from the bay for their stock. Farm after farm Cattle have also been driven considerable distance for water to the bay morning and evenings due to the failure of meadow ponds and creeks and hence by the animals wandering in the water up to the middle of their bodies in some instances. Particular afternoon stir along the shores of the bay.

DISTINCT SHORTAGE DEVELOPING IN DOMESTICS

While there are large numbers of untrained domestics available in the city, there is a distinct shortage of the trained domestic girl who can take full charge of a household, Employment Office officials stated today. Many applications for young women of this class are on file, but thus far the supply has fallen far short of the demand.

Carpenters, painters, masons and other skilled labour are registered at the office but there is little demand ,for their services as yet, it was stated.

Farm labor is plentiful, if one wants a man by the day, but applications for jobs by the month are scarce. Farmers of the district are having difficulty in securing help as the longer periods of time, while the majority hesitate at hiring day labor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT TO BE REPRESENTED

Representing the Belleville Fire Department, Chief William Lynch, Fire Captain Fraser Carter and Firemen Jack Thompson and James Kolash, will attend the Firemen's Day of the Watertown City Boys' Reunion Picnic in progress, on Friday.

Set apart as the day honoring the fire-fighters of the city and all surrounding districts, Friday will see the cream of American and Canadian Departments vieing for honors in various phases of fire-fighting. Hose-laying, hook-and-ladder contests, and many other forms of work that the fire ladder indulge in will feature the demonstrations. The Belleville delegation will leave early Friday morning on the piazza of the Watertown Fire Department, returning to the city that night.

CITY AND VETERANS ADVISED OF REUNION

Local veterans have been advised that plans for the annual reunion of the First Canadian Contingent, the gallant survivors of which assembled from all of the country in 1914 are completed. The ceremonies will be held in Hamilton, August 5, 6 and 7 and delegates from all parts of the Dominion and the United States will be in attendance. Registrations will open at the Hamilton clubrooms on Saturday of this week.

FIELD CROP JUDGE FINDS CROPS SPOTTY

Appointed judge in the field crop competitions of Prince Edward, Hoppe and Central Ontario districts, Gordon Hancock of Smith Township reports crops in the Tweed area and other sections of Hastings County are in good shape, though in many other sections of the central district crops have been patchy and spotty. In Peterborough district conditions also spottiness is reported.

Mr. Hancock predicts the fall wheat production will be from 60 to 75 per cent of the average crop this year, predictions which have been slightly borne out by first threshing which is now being carried on.

SAYS BRICKLAYERS STILL SEEK JOBS

Mr. Albert Ayling, well-known bricklayer, and former head of local bricklayers' union, who is now a non-existant, stated today that there were some local carpenters and bricklayers out of work in the present. "Yesterday I counted eight bricklayers and plasterers on the street, who had no work" affirmed Mr. Ayling.

FIREMEN FIGHT MANY GRASS FIRES

Flames racing through grassy areas in the eastern extremities of the city yesterday brought the steadily-increasing total of these mid-summer conflagrations to seven within a period of eight days.

Fanned by a hot, dry breeze, the flames rapidly ignited the long dry grass and threatened a conflagration in the vicinity. An hour's strenuous battle finally reduced the blaze.

Fire crews were handicapped by cars of the curious spectators. Hoselaying was extremely awkward while the path to hydrants was nearly blocked with the cars of the curious.

"Spectators must keep their cars out of the way while we are working," Fire Chief Lynch commented this morning. "While their intentions are good they seriously handicap the firemen when they drive their vehicles close to the scene of the fire. They are respectfully asked to co-operate with the department in this respect in the future".

Other blazes broke out on Cemetery Street, the Cricket Field and for the second time in two days in a marshy area near South Front Street. While the fires gave firemen some strenuous work no property damage was reported.

Mayor Asks Police To "Crack Down" On City Speedsters

Special orders for city police to 'crack down' on speeding motorists on the main drags through the streets of Belleville apparently oblivious of conditions in the city were issued by Mayor Jamieson Bone today.

The order follows complaints that complaints have been received from apprehensive parents at the executive office during the past week or so. "I'm afraid some of my children are going to be killed" declared one mother.

"Motorists who are using our streets as raceways or speed tracks need expect short shrift in future," declared Mayor Bone. "With scores of children at play on the streets, it has been a miracle that fatal accidents have not happened, all due to the cause of speed."

Police have special instructions to the police to 'crack these fellows down and make an example of some of them."

Post Office Revenues Show Decided Upturn

"Post office revenues, index of Canadian business conditions, again point upward. During the first six months the increase reported in May is continued, according to a statement released today by Hon. Norman McLarty, K.C., M.P., Postmaster General.

"Postage sales for June showed a total of $3,317,788.31, an increase of $180,338.04, or nearly 6 per cent over June 1938.

"Other cheering signs of improvement are also noticed. An increase of $441,000 or more than 6 per cent is revealed in the statement of postage sales for the first quarter of the year, indicating that business is also higher, and in June Money Orders paid were up 17 per cent and Postal Notes paid by 3.6 per cent as well.

Agricultural Representatives From "Down Under" Taken With Beauties of This District

C. H. Gruber, State Supervising Officer of the Department of Agriculture, Tasmania, and J. D. M. Ward, Superintendent of Horticulture of the Department of Agriculture, Tasmania, arrived in Belleville this morning on their cross-continent tour to find conditions here a "bit chilly."

Chilly, that is, by comparison with the Islands of the Empire "down under," where last year during the heat wave temperatures of 114 degrees in the shade were registered in Melbourne, Australia.

While thermometers hovered around the eighty degree mark in Belleville, the tropical representatives of Australia's and Tasmania's fruit and agricultural industries contrasted conditions in Canada and the sections of the Empire below the Equator. Now on a trip through Canada in the interests of their departments, Superintendent and Mr. Ward will spend the next week or two in the Niagara district, across the Dominion, sailing from Vancouver, British Columbia, on August 30th for Honolulu, the Fiji Islands, and ultimately to the home port of Sydney, Australia.

Canada Resembles Homeland

Canada, they have found during their trip, resembles Australia both agriculturally and in the nature of its resources. Coming up on the train from Ottawa yesterday afternoon, Superintendent Gruber of Australia because the same fields, the same grains and the same methods of agriculture were being carried on right before my eyes. All I missed were the eucalyptus trees. But plant them in Canada, and you have Australia right in the button," commented Mr. Ward.

Both representatives were intrigued with the healthy and green growth of the section. Told by Mr. Ward that the average temperature ranging from 60 to 80 degrees. But during the months of December, January and February the summer here will only be a mere time. "Down in the colonies of the Antipodes and thermometers will hover from the 90 to 100 mark. "But, however, we get a heat wave, which happens now and then, the weather does not become unbearably hot," declared the visitors.

Almost Same Temperatures

"People should not get the idea that Australia, Tasmania and New Zealand are bare, brown countries where the sun shines unmercifully down all the time. We have the same green pastures, the same fruit laden trees and wide cities that you have here. In fact we have about the same temperatures as Canada. There are 'sections of Australia where it does get hot, but they are in the interior. It is a pity that well known fact that Australia can duplicate any climate found in Canada. It's not all sheep raising, or the raising of fruit, here you see. During their brief stop in Belleville the visitors were conducted through the local Dominion Entomological Labratory, which has become world famous for its agricultural circles. "We had heard a lot about this laboratory in Belleville, and it was one of the first places we wanted to see. It is everything that has been advertised it," stated Mr. Ward.

This afternoon the experts will visit the fruitbelt section of Belleville and Prince Edward County, where an installation in the growing and marketing methods of fruit will be studied with interest. "I've don't know when we've seen more beautiful country and we are looking forward to see it all," stated the visitors.

Obituary

WILLIAM JAMES TULLOCH

Stirling, July 26 (Special)—The death occurred on Tuesday, July 25th, at Sheffield Township, hospital of William James Tulloch of Stirling, Township of Sidney, aged 70 years. He was fatally injured while at work on the farm of his son-in-law, Mr. Mountain View. Deceased was in his thirty-third year and born in Sidney, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tulloch. Widely known throughout the entire district, his sudden death was a shock to the entire community. He had been ill only a few years spent in western Canada he has resided all his life in Sidney.

He is survived by his wife formerly Sarah Bonter, one son, Lieut. Hunter Marion, his parents Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tulloch, Stirling, two brothers George, Jack and Robert Tulloch, all of Stirling, and four sisters Mrs. Mary Tulloch, Belleville; Mrs. Morley Reid, Stirling; Mrs. Mary Tulloch and Ruth Tulloch.

LATE SAMUEL GEORGE DAFOE

Tweed, July 26 (Special)—Samuel George Dafoe, a highly respected resident of Tweed, died on Wednesday morning of last week, passed away at his home after a lingering illness of an illness extending over the past eighteen months. He was in his seventy-fifth year.

The late Samuel Dafoe was born in Elzevir, Feb. 28th, 1864, a son and Mary Williams. For many years he was a well-known carpenter and builder in the township of Hungerford where he was highly esteemed by many. Many of the older homes throughout the district stand monuments to his skilful and conscientious labours.

In 1894 he was married, but his wife predeceased him a number of years ago. Twenty years ago he moved to a farm in Rogers where for fifteen years he was a successful farmer. He was deeply interested in the Methodist Church later the United Church of which he was a most loyal member, and while in Rogers was a leader both in the work of his church. To him his church came first. Other interests were important but were secondary to his spiritual life, and until ill-health in recent years prevented, he was always a regular attendant at his church.

Moved to Tweed in 1914

On moving to Tweed with his family in 1914 he soon resumed his earlier occupation as a carpenter and builder which he followed for years a valued and trusted employee of the Rogers Manufacturing Co. was a man full of energy up to his last illness always ready to lend a helpful hand to his neighbour in need. Only the kindliest memories of a good man remain with his sons and daughters who mourn his loss.

Funeral Monday

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon with the service being conducted at the late residence of the deceased by his pastor, Rev. H. J. Morrow, assisted by Rev. United Church. Interment was at Victoria cemetery, Tweed.

Pall bearers were nephews of the deceased, Dr. E. A. Carleton, Dr. H. E. Carleton, Clarence Carleton, Willard Embury, Stanley Embury and Milton Embury.

Relatives from a distance were Dr. W. A. Dafoe, Toronto, nephew; Mrs. Hunter Henry, Tuxedo, a niece; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Embury and Miss Lillian Embury, Newburgh.

HENRY (HARRY) O'ROURKE

The death of Henry (Harry) O'Rourke, 621 Oxford Street, Peterborough, carpenter in this city for many years, occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital at 8.30 Monday evening. He was in his 68th year, and had been ill only a short time.

Mr. O'Rourke was born in Belleville, one of the late Owen O'Rourke and Mary O'Hara. He came to Peterborough 36 years ago from Deseronto and became widely known in this community, where he had a host of friends who will regret his passing. He was a member of the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

His wife predeceased him six years ago, and for the past two months, twenty years ago. Surviving is one brother, Robert O'Rourke, of Watertown, N.Y.

MRS. A. ELIZABETH FOLLWELL (Rodleville)

One of Belleville's most highly respected and esteemed citizens died today when Mrs. Amy Elizabeth Follwell, widow of the late Edward John Follwell, passed to her final reward at her residence at 61 Crier Street. The deceased lady was in her sixty-third year.

The late Mrs. Follwell, who had been ill for the past year was a lady of sterling qualities. Her engaging personality and cheerfulness through out her lengthy illness was proof of the fine spirit, that during the years had endeared her to a large circle of friends both here and in the district.

Always maintaining a strong interest in things fraternal, the late Mrs. Follwell was a valued member of the Minerva Chapter, Eastern Star, the White Shrine of Bethlehem and of Lydia Lodge, L.O.B.A. She was a staunch Anglican, and was a devout member of Christ Church, and of the Women's Guild. Her passing has created a vacancy, that will be hard to fill in the hearts of a loving family and a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Sheffield, England, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Lenton, the deceased lady had lived in this city for the past thirty-two years. Her husband predeceased her only two years ago.

Left to mourn her passing are one daughter, Mrs. A. P. Bonfield, Belleville, six sons, Percy, Franklin, Edward, James, all of Belleville, Harry of Detroit, Michigan, and William of Port Erie North; one sister, Mrs. George Carver, Toronto, two brothers, H. A. Lenton, Belleville, and Frank Lenton, Toronto, seven grandchildren, William H. and Ellen Follwell, Belleville, Sidney and Betty Follwell, Port Erie North.

W. HUNTINGDON HOUSE BURNED
Fire Believed to Have Started in Dry Grass on Front Lawn
West Huntingdon, July 26 (Special) — A large unmodious stone house, owned by Walter Holgate and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Tom Young, situated on the Madoc highway about one mile east of here was totally destroyed by fire this afternoon.
A strong wind was blowing and the house was burned to the ground. Nothing of the furniture was removed from the building by the occupants except a few articles that arrived early on the scene. It is believed that the fire started from ignition of the dry grass on the front lawn and the fire was fanned by a strong wind.
Coulter of Belleville, who was proceeding along the highway at the time, saw flames in the area at once and Mrs. Young was over to a neighbor's house when the fire broke out. The house has been unoccupied for the past few years and two years ago, when Mr. and Mrs. Young moved in. It is understood very little insurance was carried. The house was originally owned by Hiram Wallace and was one of the landmarks of that community.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

BE CAREFUL

Drownings are reported daily from various parts of the Dominion, and advice cannot be given too often to avoid undue risks. In the time of a heat wave, it is a fact that people, particularly young people will in this effect their business and refreshing waters take chances which they ordinarily would not take.

The old advice still stands—not to bathe too soon after having eaten; to be sure of the depth of the water in which one bathes; to be sure whether there are not sharp hidden rocks if one is diving; to make sure that if cramps come on, one is near enough to shore to be certain of being rescued; to learn whether there are currents which may carry even the best of swimmers to their death.

Just a little caution is necessary. With out it life may be thrown away—one of the saddest of bereavements. There is nothing like a drowning accident to dampen the ardour and the joy of a bathing place and a community. Water is a dangerous element and much is not a natural swimmer, at least modern man, no matter how powerful he may be. While numbers are expert in the water, many bathers are sadly lacking even in the elemental knowledge which ought to be everyone's who wants to enjoy bathing. At least one should know the beach or pool is safe as to depth so as to be safe in the event of a cramp or weakness due to fatigue or exposure.

HITLER'S PAPER TOUCHY

Prime Minister Chamberlain in denying the report of a consideration of a huge grant to Germany for the sake of peace, put his denial mildly. He said the British Government had no intention of doing anything which would look like bribery to buy peace and said that the conversation or discussion of the secretary of the Overseas Trade and a German expert was entirely unofficial.

But the Germans are not so calm. Hitler's newspaper after the London speech by the Prime Minister, called the report insane and referred to "unexampled nerve," "in a shameless and saucy tone German affairs are talked about as though a defeated opponent were to be dictated to," it is said. The Germans showed great eagerness to repudiate Wohlthat's part in the discussion.

Germans are touchy of their dignity and resort to the use of language not generally used.

MASSED FLYING

Britain and France have pointed the way with air visits and large scale manoeuvres.

Germany has announced one of these to take place in northwestern Germany.

But Berlin has a long range plan for aviation—the flight to the Mediterranean through to Greece and Egypt and to Poland.

Of course Italy could be a holiday ground for the German air navy and Germany could entertain the Italian military aviators.

FLYING OVER THE OCEAN

So goes the progress of aviation. Ocean flying is now part of the daily experience of the people.

Soon the air will be dotted with transports and passenger planes plying their trade across the ocean.

Germany with her absorption in things military yet has to think much of trade even if her success is not phenomenal. She cannot afford to let the years go by without making a bid for ocean traffic by air transport.

It does not, seem so long ago since a flight over the ocean was a daring adventure from which the worst was feared. Today flying boats are crossing the South Pacific and Atlantic regularly. And all this progress has come in a few years and in the face of tragedies. So much for human enterprise and ingenuity in meeting new obstacles. Yesterday France and Britain celebrated Blériot's crossing of the English Channel.

The passions are the winds that fill the sails of the vessel.—They sink it at times; but without them it would be impossible to make way.—Many things that are dangerous here below, are still necessary. —Voltaire.

Unblessed is the son who does not honor his parents; but if reverent and obedient to them, he will receive the same from his own children.—Euripides.

HALF A CENTURY IS A LONG LOOK FORWARD, but a short look backward, and much can happen in half a century. More than fifty years ago a young man sat in the Ontario Business College at Belleville and like all young men looking out upon the world of today and tomorrow built fairy castles in the air, and resolved to do something different and worth while in the great world of business which he was soon to enter. Like the thousands who have passed through the portals of this educational institution this young man was well equipped with ambition and the determination to make good in the world of business. That young man was Anson McKim, a name now known the world over as the founder of the first Canadian newspaper advertising agency, which, starting in Canada, spread around the world.

It is interesting to note that this is the Golden Jubilee year of A. McKim Limited, Canada's oldest advertising agency, which beginning with the enterprise of one man in 1889, has blazed the trail for advertising service in Canada—and it is also interesting to surmise that the germ of the idea behind this vast enterprise was incubated in the class room at Belleville, while young Anson McKim was studying business principles and practice.

Business transacted the first year by this young firm aggregated $80,000, and year by year the volume of business has increased until the annual business volume is reckoned in the millions.

Twenty-eight years ago A. McKim Limited opened a branch in London, England, and now maintains offices in New York, Montreal, Australia, India, South Africa, France, China and Egypt.

On this its Golden Jubilee, the Ontario Intelligencer extends to A. McKim Limited best wishes for many happy returns of the day.

THE FIRST MISTAKE

A man was travelling to Mallow on the night mail train from Dublin and asked the guard to waken him at his destination.

"If you find it difficult," he told the guard jokingly, "just bundle me out, bag and baggage."

He woke just as the train was nearing Cork, and in a rage sought the guard and gave him a piece of his mind.

The guard took the outburst calmly, and at the end remarked: "You're a good man to swear, but you can't swear like the man I pricked out at Mallow."

Fire broke out in the sleepy village. The members of the volunteer brigade had dined well, and were dozing by the stove when the call came. When they arrived at the scene only a dense mass of smoke was visible.

The captain lit his pipe and began to puff at it.

"Best let it burn up a bit," he said, thoughtfully, "then we'll be able to see what we're doing."

Scientists Measure Molecules

An American scientist using a marvellous new microscopic device, has just succeeded in measuring the size of a molecule, and finds that when stretched out to its full length and one end curled up, it measures 4-1,000,000 of an inch. When the pesky thing goes to sleep, or what-ever it is that makes molecules curl up like a ball, it is a mere 1-3,000,000th of an inch. Not yet so wonderful is the method by which scientists tell us can crowd together in millions on the point of a pin. With a microscope such as this California man has, we suppose the point of a pin would look as broad as a round table.

Another interesting feat of meticulous measurement, not a mere exploration of scientific discovery but of everyday use, took place at the Mint in London recently when the annual "Trial of the Pyx" was held. The pyx is a box-like contrivance in which new coins are tested to determine if they are of the exact weight and fineness. This annual test is more than a thousand years old, and is a very serious business; not merely a tradition. The testers take from a collected mass random from each hundred pounds of newly minted coins, weigh them and test them chemically. Trained experts may change the content of gold- silver or copper, but when-nal the standard has been fixed, the Mint allows little variation. The margin allowed by law for the sovereign, is one two-hundredth from standard, and this year it was found that the coins fell within the one five-thousandth. The variation in weight was about the same. The public will be relieved to learn that 2,000,000 coins of all kinds in a year, is a wonderful lot to be contained in Canadian money, was one two-hundred-and-fiftieth in order. Or grain, too light, or equivalent to a thousandth part of one cent. It is interesting, therefore, to learn the British Mint makes coins for many other countries.

The clock in the tower of the Parliament Building in London—Big Ben, telegraph and some other marvel of accurate measurement. Has annual variation of three to about one second, and that is corrected by attaching a penny to the pendulum. And the works are nearly one hundred years old. The average man thinks his watch is pretty good timekeeper if it does not vary more than a minute in a week. That is the real meaning of annum.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

RAILWAY SITUATION

The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir—

If I correctly understand Mr. D. S. Allan's letter in your issue of July 15, he is opposed to the amalgamation of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways. On the other hand, he says "Why not public ownership, why should anyone be opposed to running the railways on that line?"

May I point out that if by amalgamation Mr. Allan means the handing of the C.N.R. over to the C.P.R. or vice versa, he is wasting his time in opposing it, for there is no such proposal before the Canadian people?- What has been recommended by the Canadian Senate for the solution of the railway problem is uniting management of facilities of both roads would, for the purposes of operation, be placed under the management of a single board, which would have the power not eliminate any facilities in the interest of economy and efficiency and competition. Each railway company would continue to own its own properties and neither would assume any responsibility for the other's indebtedness.

On the basis of 1937 traffic conditions, it is estimated that the annual saving from this method of operation are estimated at $59,000,000 annually and would naturally be greater as improved business conditions brought more traffic to the railways. The C.N.R.'s share of the savings would go to reduce the annual losses of that road that must be met out of general taxation. The disposal of the C.P.R.'s share of the savings is hardly the business

Snake Venom to Relieve Pain

When we read years ago about the medicine men of savage tribes and how he hoiled the various organs of animals and gave the juice for varied ailments, we thought it was funny. We have known for years now that the active extracts of the organs of animals give gratifying results in the treatment of disease. Extract of thyroid gland helps us—saves life in diabetes; extract of adrenalin gland has restored life in many whose hearts had stopped beating; extract of thyroid gland has brought down excessive weight in children who have been sluggish mentally and physically. Extracts are obtained also from pituitary, sex and other glands.

No longer, then, do we smile at the "medicine man" and his treatment by boiling various glands.

Interesting and surprising is the treatment of ancient peoples and tribes was the use of venom or the poison from snakes. In Medical World, Eugene Mater, Ph. D., Director of Laboratories, Florida Medical Centre, Venice, Florida, after tracing the history of the use of snake venom in ancient times, mentions some of its uses in the treatment of disease today.

"The venom may be used in certain doses for increasing the higher centres of feeling or pain, and possibly as a local anesthetic. Sensations, loss of speech, and melancholia. It might be of value in dyspepsy, neuralgia, hysteria and chorea (St. Vitus' Dance). It might be of value in diseases of circulating attacks of asthma. Ability of venom to act as an anaesthetic has been put forward and also to stop the severe pains of cancer. Also to stop the progress of cancer by having the nerve endings destroyed. work on the anaesthetic action of venom proves it is much like morphine and other opium preparations. Snake venom does not act as quickly as morphine but its effects last longer."

Some weeks ago I spoke of the results obtained by Dr. D. C. Macht in the use of snake venom to relieve pain in incurable cancer and angina pectoris, and also in rheumatic fever. Further reports come from Dr. Martin Kirschner, who uses cobra venom injections to 23 patients suffering with incurable or inoperable cancer. The effect of the treatment in most cases was to reduce pain and improve the general condition. The doctor says that the C.N.R. shareholders to receive dividends. Apparently he does not see that the C.P.R. would receive no benefit from the arrangement unless the owners of the C.N.R., the Canadian tax payers, received equal benefit.

Since the only way out of the railway problem for the Canadian taxpayer is through the operation of the C.P.R., it is far from gracious to complain that the C.P.R. will benefit. What concerns the taxpayer is that he will have to fit directly through being relieved of the necessity of paying the ever increasing cost of railway waste.

Yours very truly,
R. W. Robertson.

BOYS UNCOVER SNOW, SNOWBALL ONE ANYTHER

Cheboygan, Mich., July 26 (CP) —In a heat wave Cheboygan boys engaged in a snowball fight. They uncovered the snow while playing in what is described as the biggest sawdust pile in the world, left over from old-time lumbering days.

Beef Stew, King of Dishes

Although it was interesting the other day to read that a man had been lured from suicide by the promise of a beef stew, it was not unreasonable. For a well-cooked beef stew is one of the treasures of life. Any man would be willing to go on living indefinitely with an occasional beef stew in sight.

The word "stew" has some unsurprising connotations. Frequently it is used to describe the willed discomfort of the man who has drunk more than he can carry. Calling a man "a big beef stew" is not nice. But the beef stew is the king of dishes, and many people, otherwise sensible, who find themselves eating filet mignon or roast turkey with giblet gravy, at formal banquets with very unsatisfying results, they could spend the evening at home with a huge bowl of beef stew.

Incredible as it may seem, there can be bad beef stews. Some are too watery and too remote from the cow. Poor cooks with depraved imaginations think that one can put a beef stew together in a bored couple of hours. But show me a beef stew that is worthy of the name, and I will show you a man who is willing to devote two days to the job and we will introduce you to a humanitarian.

First, brown the meat. Then dump in a can of tomatoes. Add carrots and onions—plenty of onions. Season well with pepper, salt and two teaspoons of thyme. Let it simmer all day in a covered casserole. Let 'er sit all night in the refrigerator.

The next morning, hour approaches on the second day, add peeled potatoes and cook until the beef and stew until the potatoes are done. Serve 'er up in a mammoth bowl in the centre of the table and let every man Jack pitch in until he is exhausted.

Some folks use cabbage and turnips, too, which is perfectly all right. The main thing is to let 'er sit all night in the refrigerator, that helps the savor of an honest beef stew reach out in all directions, making every portion equally poetic.

Beef stew is a trifle robust for breakfast. From 8 o'clock in the morning to 4 may past midnight it is any man's delight.—New York Times.

Too Quick on the Trigger

A certain type of London Sunday newspapers came out about that Sydney Woodcock, Britain's great runner, was "fouled" in his defeat in the Princeton race in the United States on Saturday. The papers were the Sunday Dispatch and the News of the World.

The pity is that these sheets are represented in the United States as representative of British journalism as representative of the British press as the New York Daily Mirror is representative of the United States press.

Woodcock, one of the greatest one mile runners the world has seen was evidently not "fouled." Competent witnesses, including sporting pictures of what happened, per-mitted Sydney to win. Indeed there was a deliberate "foul" is a mean, misleading assumption; the mischief all the greater in the case of an international contest, and particularly at this time. Surely, in a case like this, the responsible and fair thing to do was to wait for some sort of evidence before jumping to conclusions. As it was the Sunday Dispatch and News of the World were too quick altogether on the trigger. Sydney Woodcock is as certain other London sheets of their kind were, entirely free from blame to their readers that crowds in Washington hailed Their Majesties with cries of "Three cheers and Fitzs Lie"—reports as false as they were stupid.

Sydney Woodcock, on his record, is a faster track man than any of those who ran against him last Saturday. But great runners like great horses, do not run their best every time. They have their off-days; and there was nothing at all remarkable in the fact that Woodcock should have lost. He might have lost had nothing happened to him in the course of the race.

Sometimes we think that these international meets would do more harm than good. There are perpetual ever-present dangers that will wreck the international yacht race for the America Cup is invariably a "lottery." That is one so because a certain type of people in all countries do not know how to accept defeat decently. Until all nations are sure there are no more of such people there will be international contests should be dispensed with altogether.—Ottawa Journal.

"Our Lady of the Snows"

Mention was made in these columns the other day of the Canadian supplement of the London Times being received in this sanctum, but it would need a good many supplements of the Times to break down the old conception of Canada that still is entertained throughout the minds of a great majority of Britishers.

And this conception is in nowise helped by stories which continue to appear in this newspaper, and tending to maintain misconceptions of "Our Lady of the Snows."

The last of these stories appeared in the Daily Mirror a moving story of arduous trips being made by Canadians in the Arctic to the "outside" to see the King and Queen. Thousands of miles, with wife and children, the story said, were being driven by dog sleds in the great trek southward from the wilds of Canada's far north to see Their Majesties. They were risking their lives in a hazardous trip of over two months. Temperatures were 40 degrees below zero. Blizzards brought the menace of death. They had packed their sleighs with flour, bacon and beans and were mushing bravely south over the Rocky Mountains.

Britishers reading that story must have been stirred with pride at such heroism and have had right thoughts at he thought of so much sacrifice.

There was, of course, some truth in the story. No doubt there were some few among the dwellers in the Yukon who would make the trek to come outside to see the King and Queen, but a large proportion would have already made their plans to come out this year when the visit of Their Majesty was definitely arranged.

That we are still mostly children of nature, Britishers will continue to think for some time. The fact that most successful lecturers in Canada before Britishers, have been men like Steffanson and Grey Owl, seem to east us definitely for that role.—Timmins Press.

"Tommy's Ends" Disappears

Progress, according to the mod-nust ern interpretation of the word, has been fatal to many quaint landmarks in a great many instances. Picturesque highways throughout the continent have given way to more practical and beautiful scenic highways, however, and in the long run the change is generally beneficial.

Even hotels, however, an institution in this district which has given way to modern things. "Tommy's Ends," the most unusual store in the country, disappeared years and years in the village of Janetville by one Thomas Hawkins, now deceased, is being turned into a garage by the new owner, Robert Argue. For the first time in its long history, the Post's Janetville correspondent informs us, friends of the store will find a new home to move the building back on the property at the rear and convert it, adding it a shelter for Mr. Argue's car.

"Tommy's Ends" was known in all the cities and towns of the continent which sent tourists to this district in past years, it was one of the "must see" places of the district for visitors. Thousands of curious folk from faraway places came and went through the doors and were apt to find anything from a church pulpit to a package of pins. There was no end to the variety of articles to be found in the store, and the proprietor was always ready to accommodate his customers in any way possible.

Another aspect possessed by the store was the personality of Tommy himself. He didn't believe in doing business unless he could find out what they wanted and the formality of taking their money was the limit of his interest in the proceedings. If one were to ask him for change for a dollar, he knew his answer would probably be a vague, "I don't know, go in and get it."

The business prospered over the years and he died supposedly substantial income for the owner. At any rate, many of his customers serves us right, a few years back while returning by boat from a winter vacation in Bermuda, he also believed he left substantial estate behind him.

His death meant the end of the business because no one could fill the place quite like he did and it didn't seem the same without him. —Lindsay Post.

VIOLENT DEATHS

Mother Attempts Rescue

Four of the Ontario drownings involved children less than 10 years of age. At London seven-year-old Donald Coombs died in the Thames River despite frantic rescue attempts by his mother. Jacky Townsend, seven, was found drowned in the Avon River at Stratford after being missing for an hour.

The Detroit River claimed the life of John Campbell, nine-year-old resident of Riverside, Windsor suburb. Donald Viggers, eight, of Pembroke, died in the Indian River near his home.

Bobby Watson, 16, of Orillia, weakened and sank before the eyes of helpless cottagers as he tried to swim half a mile to Grape Island in Lake Simcoe. Ontario's other death was three-year-old Lauretta Brunelle, who toddled seven feet to jagged rocks on the Trans-Canada Highway near her Kenora home.

Boat Upsets

British Columbia's two drownings were Carl Lindquist and George Ross who died in the Kootenay River when a rowboat overturned. At Kamloops, Anthony Larue, Acting Chief of the Kamloops Indians, and Merle Watson, Kamloops lifeguard, were killed in separate accidents on railway lines.

Frank Lucas, 16-year-old Chilliwack youth, suffered fatal injuries when he fell beneath the wheels of a hay rick on his father's farm. Palmer Alcock, Penticton, B.C., suffocated when a small sand bank tumbled on him while at play.

At Grande Cache, Leopold Landry, 26, drowned near that Temiscouata County village while swimming in the Long River. Flavien Roy, 84, fell into shallow water at St. Stanislas De Champlain, Que., and drowned.

Quebec's other drowning occurred at Repentigny, northeast of Montreal, when Marcel, 16, Joseph Lemieux, died in the St. Lawrence River.

One Man Asphyxiated

Montreal's other two violent deaths were Anthony Lyson, 48, and Ronald Prudhomme, 24. The former was asphyxiated by fumes from a furnace in the Lyson Contractors garage. The latter died early today (Wednesday) of injuries suffered last night when he was thrown under his truck in an overturned on the Laurentian Highway near Ste. Therese.

James Britt, 22, was the only Maritime casualty. An expert swimmer, he drowned in Saint John, N. B., harbor. He had a habit of diving deeply and blowing bubbles to the surface.

Bancroft

Bancroft — Miss Katharine McClaw of Belleville, returned from girls' camp at Eagle Lake to undergo a serious operation for appendicitis. She is recovering nicely.

Mr. Billie Douglas, Port Stewart, suffered a serious injury when he fell off a load of hay Thursday. It is reported his neck is broken.

Roy Reid of Ormsby, returning from a dance Wednesday night, smashed his car considerably around the front end shifting the motor about 6 or 8 inches.

Mr. Leslie Broad returned home from summer school due to sickness of his wife.

It is reported the rock which contains the radium outside of Bancroft a short way has considerable platinum in it, which makes it very valuable rock.

Mr. K. Sprung of this village has taken over the Bailey Block and is starting up a tobacco shop and billard room.

Misses Peggy Lumb and Dorothy Hagerman have returned from Irondale where they were instructors at Girl Guide camp.

Mrs. Leslie Broad was taken to Belleville Hospital recently where she is to be under special care.

BUSH FIRE

A bush fire which broke out along railroad and river early Friday morning was put out after several hours' work by Forestry Department and section men. It is believed it was started by youngsters who were fishing the night before.

Self-Strangulation Jury's Verdict

Napanee, July 26—A Coroner's Jury under Dr. F. C. Wilson last night returned a verdict that William Keeley, North Fredericksburg Township farmer, came to his death by self-strangulation Saturday night in the cell block in the Town Hall.

Keeley was arrested by Highway Traffic Officer Henry Jillings about 7 p.m. last Saturday and lodged in the lockup. Three police officers described Keeley as highly intoxicated, but there had been no indications of contemplated violence. Constable D. Chambers visited the cell at 8:30 and found him sleeping.

Chief Constable Wood was there at 9 and 10:15. He said Keeley was just coming around when he last saw him and had told him to snap out of it and he could go home at 11 p.m. He returned at 11.30 and found the man hanging from the cell door with a belt around his neck.

Marmora

Marmora—Sure the bass are biting said Williams Bevoy, young but seasoned Crowe Lake guide on Saturday on being told of a big catch by American visitors. He said it was out myself this morning and landed two bass, one four and the other four and a half pounds. About five years ago Willie nearly lost his lines by killing a wolf not far from Crowe Lake.

An interesting visitor to Marmora over the weekend was James Moyer, 87 year old resident of Fort Maitland, who with his nephew Michael Moyer of Tillsonburg are visiting the former's niece, Mrs. S. W. Narrie. Mr. Moyer is visiting Marmora for the first time and is taking a keen interest in everything throughout his trip.

Misses Gladys—Gehan, Margaret Couture and Nora Miron of Trenton spent Sunday at the former's parents Mr. and Mrs. James E. Gehan.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Mikulski and children and Mrs. J. Turcotte of Buffalo are holidaying at Crowe Lake.

Germany Refuses Passports to Certain Workers of Shoe Co.

Baltimore, July 26—(AP)—Robert H. Archer, counsel for the Bata shoe factory interests in the United States, announced Germany has refused passports to certain workers in the Bata Czecho-Slovakian factory who were to come here to establish a factory at suburban Belcamp.

All Czech workmen who are army reservists were refused permission to make the trip, Archer said. The Czechs were to train American workers in Bata production methods.

Archer said the Nazi move would force the company to bring older workmen, beyond the age for army service, to the United States.

FRANKFORD

Roscoe Vanderwater, ex-reeve of Sidney, then came to the platform and called for a taxpayers' by-laws pertaining to voting on such matters. Such a taxpayers' meeting is eligible to vote at such meetings, said Mr. Vanderwater, and this excludes all tenants, farmers' sons and daughters and twenty-one years of age. Interpretation of the proposed by-law before it becomes effective, will be required only a majority of the electors' approval (that is, 50 per cent. plus of the votes polled.)

Not Under Option

"According to the assessor's roll," continued Mr. Vanderwater, "the land upon which this company has options on, consists of about 750 acres, all owned by the late Mr. Trent River. Just south of Frankford at present this land is practically worthless as far as agriculture goes, but with the rock so near to the surface it is an ideal building spot. Altogether the present assessment amounts to $7,800 on this property- but in view of its unprofitableness, the taxes on some of it for many years have remained unpaid, therefore, if the Bata Company agreeable to a fixed assessment of $20,000 for ten years the ownership is dead no matter how you look at it." "It is the intention of this company to spend a great deal of money in construction work in the near future," stated Mr. Vanderwater, "and if they employ permanently say 1,000 men, the township will reap a great benefit from it. We are all engaged in the one occupation of agriculture and if we all sell produce to the population, and to a local market, we shall have to depend on just that much less upon export."

Advises By-Law Support

"According to the newspapers," stated Mr. Vanderwater, "there is legislation afoot whereby certain labour unions of the Province of Quebec, Montreal, City can, the location of the Bata Company in the Frankford district, or in any other place in Canada, and there are rumours floating around, that they will spend a lot of money to accomplish their purpose. The Bata Company pay a higher rate of wages to their employees than do many other manufacturers of this kind operating in Canada, and these other companies would spend easily ten times the amount of the increase they would be forced to pay the employees annually, if they could prevent this new company from locating here." In closing Mr. Vanderwater advised the electors to go to the polls on Saturday and support the fixed assessment project wholeheartedly, saying that whatever would benefit the Township as a whole would benefit the individual equally as well.

Councillor Danford then told the ratepayers, that he was at the meeting by request, a short time ago, when solicitors representing the Bata Company met with representatives of the Ontario Municipal Board to draw up the proposed by-law, and assured his listeners, that the Municipal Board were entirely in favour of the fixed assessment on the Bata Company's property. "Unfortunately," he said, "a copy of the by-law was not at hand, but the essence of it was that a fixed assessment of $20,000 would be given on the first manufacturing plant and one community house to be constructed in the near future, and, was to be of ten years' duration." This assessment was to date from January 1st, 1940 and any additional units, which might be constructed afterwards were to be assessed on the same proportionate basis at $20,000 for the cost of the first, and also were to be of ten years duration. The company also asked the right to assume the road, which at present runs through the property, stating that it was not the intention to close it, but merely to change its course if they so desired." In reference to the assessment and relief, Mr. Danford stated, that the company would be liable just the same as any other property holder within the township, but further intimated, that ment for school taxes, municipal some time in the future the company might wish to establish their own school. Such a school would be operated on the same principles as any ordinary school section and the costs would be apportioned entirely within their own community.

The demand for metals exceeds the supply despite Germany's claim that it has taken the lead over Britain and steel producing countries including the United States.

Leaders regard the labor shortage as even more serious than the lack of materials. Prau Gertrud Scholtz-Kling, German women's leader, appealed to all women to do their share in harvesting and to volunteer their services for other work as far as possible.

Women in general were called upon to relieve the labor shortage and take over men's jobs they could fill. They are being trained as postal carriers and in many cities as street car and bus conductors.

Labor experts assert the country is short 1,000,000 hands needed to bring in this year's harvest and to keep up the pace of rearmament and construction.

BLISTERING HEAT

More than 100 men have been kept busy battling a dozen bush fires in the Sudbury area. Three small fires near North Bay are under control but a fire-hazard warning has been issued to berry pickers. Two outbreaks in the Sault Ste. Marie area are not considered menacing.

Tobacco Crop Hurt

Downhearted farmers already are counting their losses. District growers at Tillsonburg predicted the 1939 flue-cured tobacco crop will be one-third less than last year's yield. Unless soaking rains fall within 48 hours, the drop will reach 50 per cent.

One bright note was added to the generally dismal tune. Agriculture Representative T. G. Cooper forecast the best harvest in 10 years for Gray County. Wheat already has yielded 40 bushels to the acre. More rain is needed.

Pastures Turn Brown

Pasture areas are turning brown in Huron County and the Hamilton district. Small fruits and late grains are suffering from lack of moisture. In the Chatham area, tomato, bean, tobacco and corn crops are in need of rain.

Milk processors in London said that a widened area of supply had to be sought as production was cut sharply by almost complete destruction of pasture. Many streams beds in the area have dried up and shallow wells are empty.

Vegetable Growers Need Rain Badly

Toronto, July 26—(CP)—Vegetable growers of Ontario need rain, especially in the Niagara, Burlington and Elgin districts and throughout eastern counties, the statistical branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture reported today.

Continued dry weather in Eastern Ontario is going to reduce the yield of all vegetable crops unless a change comes soon, the monthly report declared.

Potatoes, major factor in 1938's vegetable production of 812,400,000, are below average in Eastern and Western Ontario. Cold weather in the spring and the lack of moisture caused a below average set and development of tubers. The potato crop in Western Ontario last year was worth $6,500,000 and in Eastern Ontario $1,800,000.

Western Ontario's tomato crop is above average despite lack of moisture. Acreage has been sharply reduced this year, dropping 26 per cent in acreage devoted to tomatoes grown for processing and four per cent in acreage devoted to fresh tomatoes. About 80 per cent of the total tomato crop is grown for processing.

Early celery production this year was normal and the late crop is far above normal, the report states. Celery yielded $280,000 to Western

Plans For an Elopement

Dear Miss Fairfax

I have gone with my boy friend for a year and a half, and we are very much in love. He is almost 20 and I am nearly 18. We would like to marry this summer, but our folks don't approve because they say we cannot support a wife, and because we're so young.

He makes $24.70 a week, has no debts, and is sure of his job. If they won't let us get married here, we will run off where we can. We have all our plans made. What shall we do?

P

If you should chance to see this answer to your letter in the paper and have not already eloped, please stop, look and listen, as the railroad crossing warns you.

As the young man is employed and has no debts, it is more than likely that if you continue to love for the next six months or a year, your family will waive their objections.

And it would be a better plan to marry with their consent. Your parents, a lady of vast experience, said that runaway marriages and runaway horses, ended in smashup.

Secret Marriage Brings Worries

Dear Miss Fairfax

We have been married for two years, love each other devotedly, but have never told our families or friends of the marriage——the reason being each works for a small salary. I should have to give up my job if our marriage were announced and my husband's salary would not keep us both. So we've been happy for the past two years, and have told no one.

Ten days ago my husband was in an automobile accident. He has only regained consciousness in the hospital, and came continually, and I have been at the hospital whenever it has been possible. But it's hideous, going to my job day by day, and acting as if the dearest thing on earth to me were a casual friend.

If he should die, what must I do? Shall I announce our marriage now, or wait for the outcome of his accident? I have no marriage certificate. The clergyman's wife and son were witnesses of our wedding.

Distracted

There is no reason to complicate your present life by announcing your marriage at the present time. Wait for the outcome of his illness. And here's my best wishes, that he will recover and things turn out happily for you both.

make very definite strides in the realm of business or in literature, or wherever willings, publishing, advertising or promotional campaigns are involved. Suns have great promise despite under-currents of intrigue, duplicity or peculiar frustrations. delays or obstructions. Those in high places may have to be placated or yielded to, but deftly.

A child born on this day may have outstanding talents and versatility. It may be highly successful in either a commercial or professional career.

Fashion Flashes

Just about the nicest frock seen at a smart night resort was of beige chiffon, deep, almost toast color. The bodice has horizontal tucks, the skirt is accordion pleated. Worn with the frock a hand-knit cardigan of silk with a giant of gold thread running through.

Let it rain so long as you've got a good rain coat. A swell model is silk in rose or green with white turn-down collar, cuffs, front border and edging of detachable hood.

A big season for prints this year. A charming afternoon model is pure white silk crepe with an ivy leaf design in two shades of green. Buttons are green composition in ivy leaf motif.

Big sighs of admiration—possibly of envy—for that lady wearing a knee-length coat of black lynx made with swirled sleeves.

Just the thing for smart daytime wear is a frock of blue linen taffeta, the skirt full, the bodice snug. Collars and cuffs of white organdie and lace beautifully embroidered give delicacy to this frock.

Pick out neat little suits for daytime wear. A good model is sheerest wool crepe in navy, red, green and white plaid. The bolero has short sleeves and is worn over a white jersey bodice with round buttoned neckline yoke.

Jane Withers Returns

There's exciting days ahead for the millions of Jane Withers fans whose enthusiasm for her pictures has kept the mischievous miss right up among the first ten most popular screen stars. Jane's gay as her first "crusher" in her newest film, "Boy friend"! She goes romantic-mad. The first chopped off tresses to grow to a length that is manageable is no pleasure even to the most angelic young lady.

It's just one more look to find her first love when she's busy smashing the gang that put her professional career on the spot in the 20th Century Fox action-packed comedy. And you know Jane—she'll be sure to be able to go places and do things if you're with her!

As Jane says "What good's a beau if he can't help you fight?" To which George Ernest says "Any friend" of the picture coming next to the Belle Theatre replies, "What a girl friend for a boy friend to have! Give me a nice, quiet wax!"

As the "kid sister" of a two-fisted young police rookie whose exploits lead to the smashing of a dangerous gang, Jane not only discovers her first heart interest but plunges into the most dramatic situations that give her new opportunities to display her extraordinary acting ability.

She also introduces a brand new hairdo as making the etchavi-e dance "The Socialite", which is billed to the Belle Theatre. Lanchester Walk seem quiet and sedate in comparison. With music and lyrics by Sidney Clare and Harry Akst, "Doin' the Socialite" is expected to be the new craze in the dance age world. The dance was staged by Nicholas Chadwell and Geneva Sawyer, experts who have produced many spectacular musical numbers for 20th Century-Fox.

Arleen Whelan, Richard Bond, Douglas Fowley, Harvey Stephens, Robert Kent and Minor Watson are included in the cast of "Boy Friend", which was directed by James Tinling.

"Return of the Cisco Kid"

Warner Baxter brings back to the screen of the Belle Theatre O. Henry's famous outlaw of the romantic pantion feature, whom he created in "In Old Arizona" in the first of a new production "The Return of the Cisco Kid".

Irene Immortal Robin Hood of the Rio Grande inspires new action-packed legends of the South Seas in this hard-paced fun-filled film.

Leon Barl has her most important role to date as the girl for whom the romantic bandit sighs, and with a thousand senoritas high for him.

Production Chief Darryl F. Zanuck also cast the remaining roles with great care and the result is a sterling lineup, including Cesar Romero, Henry Hull, Kane Richmond, C. Henry Gordon and Robert Barrat.

Herbert I. Leeds was entrusted with the megaphone-wielding assignment.

An entirely all new Edition of the March of Time will be presented on the same program.

Now being presented is "Garden of the Moon" with Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, John Payne and Jimmy Fiddler and on the second bill is Kay Francis and George Brent in "Secrets of an Actress". The Belle News of the day will also be shown.

"Let Us Live"

Little is known about John Brahm, because he prefers it that way. Director of "Let Us Live", one of the most widely discussed films of the year, M. Brahm prefers to let his pictures speak for themselves.

And, so far as his work in America is concerned, his pictures do.

In 1936, Mr. Brahm directed "Broken Blossoms", starring Dolly Haas, an English film company. The picture was an international sensation, and Mr. Brahm was immediately besieged by Hollywood offers. He accepted a Columbia contract.

His first assignment was "Counsel for Crime", starring Otto Kruger. This initial success was followed by "Penitentiary", featuring Walter Connolly, Jean Parker and John Howard. Believing Brahm versatile enough to handle a light-hearted comedy as well as graver subjects of crime and punishment, he was assigned by Columbia Studios to direct "Girls' School".

Brahm did not disappoint them. His Girls' School", featuring Ann Shirley, Nan Grey and Ralph Bellamy, scored on the screen as a delightful and ingenuous story of romance.

This last success, and its demonstration of Brahm's polyvurous talents resulted in his immediate choice to direct "Let Us Live", which combines romance, comedy, tragedy and other elements of all three of his previous productions. . . . BUT MAKE THEM WITH CERTO IT'S SO QUICK AND EASY - GIVES SUCH SPLENDID RESULTS!

WHY CERTO JAMS AND JELLIES ARE MADE SO QUICKLY—TASTE SO FRESH AND WHOLESOME—COST SO LITTLE

A Whole Batch in 15 Minutes!
Yes—with Certo it takes only 15 minutes from the time your fruit is ready to make a whole batch of jam or jelly. The old-fashioned way often takes 3 times as long.

An Amazingly Short Boil
With Certo you give only a one-minute to two-minute full, rolling boil for jam—for jelly only a half-minute to a minute. You don't exhaust yourself stirring over a hot stove.

Much More Jam or Jelly
With Certo you get about half again more jam or jelly from the same amount of fruit. The boil is so short that practically no juice goes off in steam as it does in the wasteful long boil.

Better Taste — Brighter Colour
All the fresh, natural taste and colour of the fruit—when you use Certo. The boil is too short to affect the one or darken the other.

No Anxiety About Results
Easy-to-follow recipes are included free with Certo. They detail every step and give exact timing for each fruit. Follow them closely and you'll get good results.

FREE BOOK OF 72 RECIPES
Under the label of every bottle of Certo there is a book of 72 tested recipes for jam, jellies, marmalades and conserves. Since different fruits need different handling, Certo gives you a separate recipe for each fruit . . . Be sure to follow each recipe exactly.

What are the most important qualities in jam or jelly? Taste, texture and colour rate highest. And judges in exhibitions and contests usually allow 75 out of a possible score of 100 for taste and texture alone!

Certo gives you a grand start in fresh, natural taste as well as colour, because you can use luscious, fully-ripe fruit instead of the under-ripe fruit commonly used in old-fashioned jam and jelly making. The tested Certo recipes all ensure a firm desirable consistency.

That is why 3 out of 4 jelly champions use Certo.

Use this splendid opportunity while fresh fruit is plentiful to try Certo. For the Certo way is the modern and certain-by-the-most scientific way to make jams and jellies. Order Certo with your grocories today.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

My daughter plans to be married in the fall. Parents in the city where she attended college several years ago. Only a few friends, and our families, will be present.

1—Would it be correct, for her to wear bridal attire? No one goes her away? She will be married late in the afternoon.

2—She will dress in a hotel before going to the church chapel. Is this all right, if she wears bridal attire?

3—Her sister will be her attendant. What would be correct, for her to wear? Also what should I, her mother, wear?

4—If the bridal veil and outfit is correct, would it be all right to go to a hotel for a dinner party after the wedding and for her to wear her bridal outfit?

Mother

1—It is correct for your daughter to wear formal bridal attire at her wedding. Your daughter's wedding can be a very lovely one if you will follow along the order details with care and taste.

2—You did not ask me about this, but I wonder if you and your daughter realize that it would be correct, and very fine, for you, her mother, should present her in marriage. If she has no father or male relative or a man who is a close friend of the family, to walk up the aisle with her, you may walk alone and, at the proper time in the ceremony, you could step from your seat in the first pew on the left of the aisle and give her in marriage. This is just a suggestion, of course.)

2—Yes, it will be quite all right for her to dress in her bridal attire.

3—To be consistent with the formality of the bride's attire, the dress of her attendant should be of the formal side. That is, she would wear a floor-length dress of such a material as chiffon, organza, light-weight crepe, taffeta, lace, or similar material. This might be of lovely pastel shade. the shade must become to the bride's attendant—but not might be of the same shade or a harmonizing shade. Or she might wear a hat made entirely of flowers, very popular for brides-maids this year.

You, the bride's mother, would also wear a long dress, perhaps of lace or chiffon fin, for example, velvet. While if the shade is becoming to you, or another becoming shade of blue, or burgundy or violet, depending wearer as an ensemble dress and matching short jacket . . . always effective for the bride's mother. And you would wear a hat appropriate, in style and color, to your dress.

4—Yes, the bride should wear her bridal costume to the dinner party after the wedding. She wears her hat in a car, but does not change to her travelling clothes.

Friend is Right

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Will you please help me? My husband died two years ago. His name was Mr. Morton V. Cummings. My name is Beatrice V. Cummings, although I have never been called anything but "Bee".

A friend of mine in another state wrote me recently addressing me a letter, "Mrs. Morton V. Cummings". When I answered her, I wrote, "You know my name isn't Mrs. Morton V." Cummings any more. Please sign Mrs. B. V. Cummings. Sincerely Bee".

When I was in her city a few weeks ago she talked for about the first ten minutes about the fact that I was not Mrs. Cummings, and should write to you. She also said that I was not divorced, but explained that my husband was no longer alive, and that, therefore, it is correct for me to sign my letters "Mrs. B. V. Cummings".

Please set me straight on this "Mrs. B. V. Cummings".

Your friend is completely right about the form of name that you should use . . . and it was friendly of her, I think, to be willing to set you right. Most people hesitate to embarrass us by setting us straight about this kind of thing, but apparently she is such a real friend that she did not want you to continue to do something that other people, not such courageous friends, were criticizing.

A widow should use exactly the same form of name that she used when her husband was living. So when you sign your letters, it will be Mrs. Morton Cummings. This is the name for you to use for formal social occasions.

Never should you write your self as "Mrs. Beatrice Cummings". What is the story of a hunted couple enmeshed in a net of circumstances beyond their control that will make it the talk of Belleville after its first performance at the McCarthy.

As a special added feature attraction at the McCarthy theatre, screen will also present with "Let Us Live", Bill Elliott, one of Hollywood's new outdoor screen stars in a splendid action-drama entitled "The Law Comes to Texas" and in addition a Popeye the Sailor cartoon, entitled "Wotta Nightmare".

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Scrupulous Cleanliness Necessary To Combat Summer Disturbances

Yesterday we discussed the mildness of summer diarrhoea which affects babies; today we will go on to the more serious kind which every year claims its many lives.

This kind of illness is due to some infection which the baby gets, very often in the food, on the nipples or bottles with which he is fed. One of the first things to do is to make sure that the bottles and nipples are sterilized always, and that the milk he is going to be fed has no chance to become contaminated before it is put into the sterilizer.

These simple rules should be followed all year, but during summer precautions should be doubled for the chances of infection are then increased. It has never been entirely proved that flies are the chief factors in the spread of this infection but the evidence against them is very strong.

You have only to see how the height of the diarrhoea epidemics always come in the early part of the season to realize what goes on. You can also see quite easily how these creatures, with their sticky hairy legs, carry the infection by lighting on the food or the mouth of over the nipple just before he is fed. Another indication that flies are the chief offenders in the spread of this type of diarrhoea is that I have noticed how much more common it is in homes where there is no special steps taken to keep flies out.

The death rate used to be much too high in this part of the country from this disease. I went around everywhere preaching to the mothers that diarrhoea comes from dirt and flies. As soon as I would get a case of it I would immediately see that the flies were eliminated and that all the milk used was boiled. Now I don't get as many cases of diarrhoea as I used to and the reason is simply that the mothers people have learned how important it is to keep the flies outside. I cannot remember a single case in the last hundreds of cases of diarrhoea I have treated when flies were not present in the home.

But the kind of diarrhoea afflicts your baby, you will find that the hospitals develop much more rapidly than in the first type I mentioned. Your child will be perfectly well and healthy one day; the next he is sick, vomiting every time he takes anything by his mouth and passing a lot of watery stools It is quite likely that they will contain traces of blood. Sometimes this blood will only be a stain on the diapers, but too often the blood will be there in large quantities.

If your baby develops these symptoms, lose no time in calling your doctor. Success in treating promptly he is likely to lose his life from the extremely rapid loss of water from both bowels and mouth.

The prevention is simple. Any water used in the baby lives should be well-screened, to prevent flies, the bottles and the nipples should be kept clean and sterilized, and the milk ought to be boiled before it is used. Milk that is boiled for the child must be kept covered until drinking time. This makes it not a contagion gets to them.

It isn't hard to see the advantage of breast feeding when it comes to the question of preventing summer diarrhoea, for it is almost impossible for breast milk to become contaminated by flies, and in fact, analyses of the figures in this infection show that infection is almost entirely confined to bottle-fed babies.

Even so, the mother of a breast fed child must take care to see that her infant doesn't come into contact with another baby who is suffering from infection. If he does, then he is likely to fall a victim.

16 ARE INJURED

Fete For Yards

The force of the explosion was felt for several hundred yards from the check room, reaching out to the station platforms and to parked automobiles in the streets.

Windows over a wide area were smashed. Splinters were torn from woodwork. Police believed the bomb was planted in a parcel or suitcase checked in the station. A woman bystander told police she saw smoke coming from the checkroom "after a vivid flash."

"As I got there," she said, "I saw a porter collapse on the ground bleeding from his arms and legs."

Sir Samuel told the House of Commons Monday the government has 'reliable information" "terroristic activities of the I.R.A. are being "actively stimulated by foreign organizations." He said the organization, which seeks by terrorism to carry out its campaign for a complete break between Ireland and Great Britain, had plotted to blow up the Houses of Parliament.

When questioned in the House about today's explosion Prime Minister Chamberlain said he hoped it would be possible to enact tonight the government's bill designed to curb the I.R.A.

When Mr. Chamberlain qualified his first remarks by saying he "understood" and "was told" that a fresh explosion had occurred, Viscount Astor, Conservative, remarked in an audible aside, "we may all be blown up."

REGATTA RUMBLINGS

While chairmen of the various committees have been working both and month mouldings the different items into a whole that augurs well for the success of the Regatta here on August 7th, genial Joe Short, chairman of the sports committee has been working in his own quiet way and as a result has or is producing a sporting card that will knock your eye out.

Genial Joe, ever a pal of the kiddies, is leaving no stone unturned to make this the best field event of the year and has arranged a of y's fun that sports lovers will not forget in many a moon.

Lovers of, the mushball, or softball, as it is more familiarly known will get their appetites whetted, and Joe has secured a handsome Challenge Cup for competition on that day. Four representative teams will flash into action in an elimination tournament that should be a honey. The games and other sports will be going on while the races are being held on the water, and by way of diversion, if the speeding boats do happen to get a little too much for the fan, they can cool off and relax watching the sports on the park.

There will be races for the kiddies and for the grownups. The old fellow can peel off his shoes and go into that one hundred yard dash as well as junior, while Ma can toddle down the course either in the fat ladies' race or in the spoon contest. Its say nothing of teaming up with Mrs. Jones, the next door neighbor in the three-legged event. Joe has arranged several novelty events that for comedy and fun should bring down the figurative house.

And Joe has a real suggestion. He extends an invitation to churches, lodges or any other organization to hold their annual picnic at Massassaga Park on that date, Aug. 7th, and join with the Rotarians and their guests in the general jollification, It will be a regular picnic, he says, and he means that in two ways. So arrange that picnic you secretaries, and get the gang! You won't have to worry about your sports program and Joe will provide the prizes.

But he insists upon one condition. Those participating in the events MUST NOT wear spiked shoes. Professionals are barred. This is a meeting place Joe says, and the committee intend to hold it as such. Of course the spiked athletic edict does not include the baseball players. Anyone can enter the various events, the only stipulation being that they must be the possessor of an admission ticket.

The list of events will be published in this paper at a later date. Meanwhile prepare your plans to attend this gala affair, for without a doubt it will be the biggest event of its kind ever held in these parts.

ROTARY JOE.

STEWARD KILLED BY CRAZED SAILOR

Fatally beaten by a sailor who ran amok, Jesse C. Ortega, a steward, is lowered over the side of the tanker Dungarvon, to a waiting seaplane which rushed him to a hospital at Norfolk, Va. He died en route and another victim, also rushed by plane to Norfolk, is said to be in a dying condition. The crazed sailor, identified as Joe Swam, a pumpman, jumped overboard after the sudden wave of attacks, and was rescued by another seaman. He is being taken to Providence, R.I., in irons.

Dr. Maurice R. Moore Named Sup't of Backus Hospital

Son of Mr. Alex Moore of Belleville Has Had Brilliant Career as Pathologist at Norwich and New London, Connecticut

Dr. Maurice Roberts Moore, son of Mr. Alex Moore of this city, has been pathologist at the W. W. Backus Hospital, the Norwich State Hospital and the Lawrence Memorial Associated Hospitals in New London, Conn., for the past nine years. He has been appointed the new superintendent of the Backus Hospital. He succeeds Mrs. Lucy Abbott Pollock, who has been superintendent for the past thirteen years.

In assuming the new post Dr. Moore planned to retire as pathologist at the Lawrence and Memorial Associated Hospitals in New London and the Norwich State Hospital.

Dr. Moore was born in Belleville, the son of Mr. Alex Moore and the late Emma Maurice Moore. His grandparents on his mother's side were originally from the Norwich section of Connecticut.

Following his graduation from Albert College, he attended Queen's University, Kingston, graduating as B.A. in 1927. He received the degree of M.D.C.M. from that institution in 1930. He then passed the L.C.C.M. examinations.

Two at Queen's

Prior to his graduation, Dr. Moore tutored for three years in pathology and at his graduation he was awarded the Richardson fellowship in pathology, which brought him the post of senior interne at Kingston General Hospital where he served for a year.

In July 1930 on completion of his internship, he went to Norwich, Conn., and took charge of the laboratories at the New London Hospital and the Backus Hospital then, in August 1931 he took over the work in pathology at the Norwich State Hospital.

In 1932 he made a fellow of the American Board of pathology, a year later he was admitted to practise medicine in the State of Connecticut.

At Toronto Dr. Moore married Mary Petit Leggitt of Fergus, Ontario. They have one son.

Dr. Moore is a member of the Union Fishing and Hunting Club, the Westbrook Fishing Club, member of the staff of the Connecticut State Medical Journal, a member of the Connecticut State Tumor Committee. In 1937 he served as President of the Connecticut Association of public health medical laboratories.

A testimonial dinner to Mrs. Pollock the retiring superintendent of the William W. Backus Hospital on Dr. Moore was given by the active medical staff and the consulting and courtesy staffs of the hospital.

PIKE RETURN AFTER LENGTHY ABSENCE

After a decided scarcity of the fish for some time past, pike are once more beginning to bite in the bay and several catches of fair size have been reported lately. Pat Longhurst of the Bridge Street Road reports catching several lately of considerable size, while last evening Wilfred Burgess landed a nice seven pound pike from one of the stone piers of the bridge, using a grasshopper as bait.

Under Western Stars

By IDA DRAPKIN

"I wonder where Peg can be so late? You don't suppose those gypsies—"

"Now Mother," protested her husband over his newspaper, "stop fidgeting. You've been to the window a hundred times tonight if you've been once."

"But she said she'd be home for supper. She said she and Annabelle were running over to the Carlaval right after work to have their fortunes told. It's past seven now."

"Probably the woman's rushed," remarked her husband dryly.

Mrs. Connors rose and went to the window. "I never did trust gypsies. I'm with she hasn't gone. But she and Annabelle set their hearts on it work ago. So I didn't say anything."

"If you're through with that page, may I have it?"

Returning to her seat, she handed it to him absent-mindedly. "I hope she didn't take what Gaul woman has to say too seriously. One of those gypsies told poor Catherine Birch—"

"How many times have I told you it wasn't the gypsy? It was cards! Says here that Pelham Cogood's spending the summer with his brother at the Congo parsonage. I didn't know the Reverend had a brother."

She was diverted from the unhappy end of Catherine Rich to the newcomer in the community. "Mrs. Cogood told me at the Ladies' Aid meeting. He teaches out West."

The front door opened and closed. A glowing Peg entered, greeted her parents, and dropped into a chair breathing, "I'm so excited."

She and Annabelle had had lunch on their way to the grounds, she had to hustle before Ken called. Annabelle was giving a party.

But what of the fortune? What had the gypsy said?

Well, the gypsy said a lot of nice things. She'd live to be an old lady. She'd never know want. She'd never have any serious illnesses.

"But what about—Kenneth" inquired her mother. What joy in growing old in acquiring riches, in being healthy, if you didn't have a husband?

"She said I'd marry 'a man who first saw light under western stars."

Mother's mouth drooped. "Pa, that's law tell. They were both partial to Easterners. To a certain Easterner. And Mother was quite sure the man born under western stars would be 'a traveling salesman.

Several weeks passed. Mr. and Mrs. Connors sat in their customary rockers in the screened porch. From within the house came sounds of a man reading on and on in a book of poetry. After one of this, Mr. Connors rose and walked desperately up and down, coming to a standstill just over the head of the forsythia bushes.

"I don't think I can stand this everlasting poetry much longer. If he isn't reading it, he's hating it. What did he have to come to this town for? What did he have to pick our daughter for? And why doesn't he ever take her out?" Mrs. Connors tried vainly to hush him. "Their guest might hear. "These evenings weren't made to be spent indoors."

Her husband shook his head. "Something's happened to our Peg. To think—throwing over a chap like Ken for a breeze from the West! Sometimes I wonder if she's wholly sane!"

In some time before Mrs. Connors smoothed things over. But she did. And even tried to paint a favorable picture of Pelham. "A good . . . good family, good position—and such manners!"

"I suppose he's coming over for supper tomorrow night?"

"I suppose so," she said, patiently. "You'd think a fellow with an appetite like his would put on weight."

"Most brainy men are thin."

"I like the good solid type. I'm still rooting for Ken. But I guess I'm the only one left on the bleachers."

"How pretty the sunset is over Kenton Manor," she observed contentedly. "Doesn't that big purple cloud look like a big bear with red-lined cloak?"

Her husband reflected. Suddenly he smashed one hand on the other. "Of all the duba! Why didn't I think of it before?"

"Think of what?" she asked, puzzled.

He called her attention to the fact that Peg was twenty-one and it was only eight o'clock. He seemed to be in very good spirits. He refused to answer her questions.

Mrs. Connors looked out of the kitchen window. "Why there's your father coming up the path with Kenneth. You'd better put another plate on, dear."

Peg flushed angrily. "All right, Mother, I only hope Ken doesn't make any break. He doesn't know any poetry but Edgar Guest."

But it was good to see Ken again, it seemed natural for him to be coming through the back door as if he were one of the family. Pelham always used the front door. But she had to let her mother speak, fuss over him, flatter him. Mother liked Ken.

Peg went to the living room to call Pelham and the family ad down to a supper of ham, green peas, and hot rolls—a favorite dish of Ken's. But Peg kept wondering. What was Ken doing here anyway?

Ken praised Mother's ham, baked with brown sugar, pineapple and spice. Pelham, although eating generously could praise only the book he had just finished—Miss Marietta Fish's latest volume.

"Have you ever read any of Fish?" he asked Ken with haughty civility.

"Fish? I thought you ate it!"

"Barton's line is automobiles," supplied her father, laughing heartily. "And he's a wa at it, too. Best sales record in the—"

Peg wished her father wouldn't go on apologizing for Ken's boorishness. It wouldn't have been so obvious if he had simply let the remark pass. She noticed Ken's early tan. He tanned easily. He looked so genial and strong. The kind of man you could depend on in any difficulty. The kind of man you wanted to scrub floors for and cook for in nine mornings and—but she mustn't think of those things.

"Haven't you a hobby? What do you do with your leisure?" asked the intellectual Westerner when Mr. Connors had finished his eulogy.

"I like to fish," replied Ken wickedly.

Pelham was hurt.

"Were you born out West, Mr.—Cogood?" asked Ken.

"I hardly see how much a detail would interest you."

Ken smiled. He had an agreeable smile. "Now I'd be surprised!"

"As a matter of fact," said Pelham condescendingly, "I was born in Maine. After I received my academic education at Bowdoin, I went West to teach. Is that all you wish to know?"

Ken smiled again. "What town in Maine?"

"Colport."

Ken knew it well. "Which side of the bridge?"

Pelham gave him a scornful glance. Which side would he expect? "East side."

Ken waved his fork in air. "Good. Now I'm going to tell you where I was born. On the western edge of this town is a big brown house, originally a log cabin. Been in the family for generations. Acres of good woodland, fine gardens, and a wide lawn."

"My dear young man, I'm not interested in your family."

"My parents used to walk across that lawn spring evenings," went on Ken serenely, "picking under the trees, frogs of, in the distance, big stars overhead. Then one night under the western stars of—"

He didn't have to say further.

"Why didn't you tell me?" cried Peg. "I never thought . . . And yet, every evening I look over at your house to see the sunset."

"Margaret!" It was Pelham's last chance.

"Hereafter, perhaps you'd find it more convenient to be right there for the sunset?"

She thought she would.

JOINER PITCHES A THREE-HITTER AGAINST TORONTO

Leafs Shut Out 4-0 Getting Only Two Players to Second Base

WINGS THREATENED

Both Syracuse and Buffalo Very Close to Second Place

(By The Associated Press)

Among all the noteworthy pitching performances that have marked the rise of Jersey City to their present comfortable position in the International League—5 1-2 games ahead of the second-place Rochester Red Wings—the work of Roy Joiner appears as bright as a Harlem belle's Sunday finery.

Roy has allowed only 10 hits in the last three games he has pitched, winning two by the shutout route. With a record of 14 victories and seven defeats, he has already surpassed his 1938 record of nine and nine, and is far ahead of those behind only those mainstays, Hy Vandenberg and Bill Harris, on the Jersey City mound staff.

Joiner toiled in his second three-hitter in nine days to blank Toronto Maple Leafs 4-0 yesterday and add a big game to the Little Giants' lead. He whiffed only one rival batsman but granted only two walks. And only two runners got as far as second base. His teammates gave him a two-run working margin in the first inning and nicked Bill Weir for 12 hits, three by Johnny Dickshot.

Wings Threatened

Meanwhile Syracuse and Buffalo both threatened Rochester's hold on second place but failed to make the grade. The Chiefs split a doubleheader with the Red Wings, winning the opener 8-2 behind Johnny Gee, then dropping the nightcap 3-2. Buffalo's Bisons split with Montreal Royals at an 8-2 drubbing and then coming back to win 3-0 as Clay Bentley hurled his 14th ball.

Bill Lillard performed the remarkable feat of being a hero and "goat" all on one play as Baltimore nosed out Montreal 4-3 in the evening's other game.

Gee marked up his 15th victory for Syracuse with a seven-hit job in the opener. The Chiefs themselves were limited to seven blows but bunched them with John Grodzicki's circuit clout in the fourth. The Red Wings got on to Jake Mooly in the seventh frame and Ken Silvestri scored all three runs on four hits.

Kids Enjoy Games

A "father and son" crowd of 8,436 at Newark's Ruppert Stadium saw Barney limit Buffalo to four hits and two unearned runs in the opener and the home forces rap out seven straight hits for five runs in the first inning. Bill Zuber went through with a near perfect performance and he faced only 30 batsmen. And three Newark hits were scratched off Jim Mallory's glove for close plays at first.

Lillard's odd feat was performed in the ninth inning and resulted in Baltimore's winning run. With one out, Gill on first and Stiles on third, Bill smacked out a hit to center in the winning rally. Then when Gill failed to run, Lillard went right past him and was declared out.

Pre-race favorite, the big fourth American horse up to enhance matches and gave his owner his second win in the event, beating Sun Lover, Challedon won by coming from behind, to surprise more than 40,000 fans in attendance

This is the margin Charles S. Howard's Argentine-bred Kayak II had on his rivals as he crossed the finish line to win the second renewal of the Hollywood Gold Cup race at California's Inglewood track. Pre-race favorite, the big fourth American horse up to enhance matches and gave his owner his second win in the event, beating Lovely Lover by a length.

NEW TRACK RECORD AS KAYAK II WINS HOLLYWOOD GOLD CUP RACE

As he crosses the finish line he has a four-length margin on second-choice and second-place Crawl, with Specity third. George Woolf, Alberta Jockey, is up on the winner, who also set a new track record of 2.02 and 3-5 for the mile and a quarter route, as more than 45,000 fans cheered on Kayak II, a four-year-old, has now won $136,480.

Old Wizard Went 13 Full Innings to Beat Cards 6 to 3

TWELVE FOR DONALD

Yankee Rookie Allowed Only Five Hits in Beating Browns

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

A pair of great pitchers, one on the threshold of a brilliant career and the other in the twilight of his reign, dirdled the cheers of the baseball world about equally today through two noteworthy performances.

It was hard to say which gave the followers the greater thrill, young Alley Donald of the Yankees in pitching his 12th straight American League victory of the season, beating St. Louis Browns 5-1, or Carl Hubbell, the Giants' famous veteran, in coming out of virtual seclusion to beat St. Louis Cardinals of the National League 6-3 in 13 innings.

Hubbell's feat was the more dramatic, for when old "king pants" went out there as a sort of forlorn hope yesterday the Giants paid for their last nine games and were deep in the dumps, not to mention supplied with gloom.

For three lemon hours his creaky left arm had lie old wizardry. For the last seven innings he allowed the Cards only two hits, until his teammates tied it up and Manager Dismaree finally rewarded him with winning home runs in the 13th inning. It was only Bubb's third victory of the year, and his first complete game since mid-May.

Though he didn't have to strive so hard for victory, Donald's smooth performance against the Browns served to spotlight one of the most amazing streaks in diamond history. He's already set a record for consecutive victories by a first-year pitcher. He gave the Browns only five hits yesterday.

Hubbell's triumph, while spectacular, had no appreciable effect on the National League race. Cincinnati Reds pounded their way into two games by licking Boston Bees under the lights 2-1. Bucky Walters held the Bees to three hits in pitching his 17th victory of the year, and Harry Craft provided both runs with his home run in the eighth inning.

Reds Increase Lead

Brooklyn opened its western trip by knocking Chicago Cubs off 8-6 and 3-1. They scored three runs off four Wrigley pitchers in the ninth inning of the first game, which was a mess all around, and then took the second behind Hugh Casey's six-hit pitching.

Pittsburgh scored a lucky triumph over the Phils 3-2, the tying and winning runs scampering across in the last of the 10th when Hugh Mulcahy mustered a wild pitch with the bases loaded.

The Red Sox tightened their grip on second place in the American League with a double victory over the challenging Chicago White Sox 3-2 and 6-3. Joe Cronin's home run supplied the margin in the first game, giving marqin in the first, while fourbaggers by Jimmie Foxx and Bobby Doerr were equally decisive in the second, which went 10 innings.

Dutch Leonard pitched Washington to a 5-3 decision over Detroit. The knuckle-baller kept seven hits scattered for the most part. Freddie Hutchinson, the year's most expensive rookie, finally started and finished a game for the Tigers, but the seven walks he issued proved disastrous.

A REAL TIGHT RACE

(By The Canadian Press)

The tightest part today of the Canadian American Baseball League's pennant chase was down around the bottom of the first division where Cornwall Buccos and Ottawa Senators are trying to edge out Rome Colonels and Ogdensburg Reds for the last two playoff spots.

Only four games separated the fourth-berth Senators from the second-place Colts after games last night when Ottawa nailed Cornwall, 4-2, while Amsterdam Rugmakers downed Romas, 10-2, and Newyego Netherlands blanked Ogdensburg, 8-0. Both clubs are in the standing got together in the other game with Gloversville winning, 11-10, over Utica Braves.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

Hartford, Conn.: Sat Batallino, 145 1-2, former featherweight contender, outpointed Oscar Suggs, 144, New Bedford, Mass. (10).

MUNGO OUT

Where, oh where are the good base-runners? Manager Leo Durocher of Brooklyn's up-and-down Dodgers, had no one to run for Art Parks in a game against St. Louis Cardinals, so he sent in Van Mungo, one-time pitching ace, who this season had shown a few flashes of old-time form. Van moved from first to second on the next play and sliding into second ended up with a broken foot. Result, Van Mungo to pitch for the Dodgers for six weeks or two months.

During Monday's soccer rankings League play-off game at Latta a very unfortunate accident occurred, when Gerald Sager, first baseman of the Shannonville "Hawks" suffered a broken leg after attempting to slide into the home base. We have been reliably informed by eye witnesses, and others in a better position to know, that the accident was entirely unavoidable, and that Sager, because of the injury was not in any case blame at the latter. Ball park is not exactly level, and firmly sunk into the ground, as required by rules and regulations. We are not assuming for a single moment that the Latta diamond is the only one in this part of the country, where the home base protrudes or sinks above the ground until it becomes dangerous and a hazard. Actually we are merely citing the unfortunate Latta incident to bring more forcibly to the attention of other sponsors of ball games, the folly of permitting ball games to be played on fields until for players to perform properly.

One has to go no further than our own ball park, diamond at Coleman Flats. Here the home plate is sticking up out of the ground to such a degree that whenever a low pitched ball strikes the front of the plate, and frequently they do, arguments long and loud as to the legality of the pitch, which, we can assure all concerned is legal and the ball is in play and base runners may advance. However, the point we are trying to bring out is the playing of ball games on diamonds not adequately equipped for the protection of the players. For the greater part ball players in this district are semi-and-amateurs and playing the game for the love of the sport, therefore they should be protected from injury as far as possible. If would take very little effort to fill in the holes around the home plate at the Flats diamond, as well as those gopher holes around the pitchers' slab and other parts of the infield. No player should be asked to play ball on such rough fields, when such evils could so easily be remedied.

Let us refer back to the case of Latta's unfortunate player, who is unable to engage in gainful employment while recuperating from what was purely an accident. We know of no ball club, or league, which insures within a radius of 50 miles of Belleville that carries accident insurance to protect the player in case of such emergency, accidents on the playing field. We did hear that a collection carried such protection years ago, but today players are in a position of chancing it by playing their favorite diamond sport and therefore they should be afforded the same reward in protection insofar as a level and properly prepared playing ground. Not that we expect it or even wish to refer to it—but what if some player were to slide into home plate at the Flats diamond with the same unfortunate result as occurred in the Sager case? Catcher Alex Simpson narrowly escaped serious injury on Monday night when his shoe caught on a hole near home plate at the Flats. The diamond at the Fair Grounds is much more level, even if it is as hard as the proverbial cement.

Rotarian Joe Shortt is a busy man these days endeavouring to arrange a district softball tournament to be played in conjunction with the Rotarian regatta on Civic Holiday at Massassaga Point. As a boy long years ago in the days of the old Varuna and North King we remember some mighty fine baseball games to have been played at old Massassaga Point in what should condition the present diamond is, we are not prepared to say, but a softball tournament at Massassaga will doubtless bring out goodly following of old timers. Rotarian Joe tells his associates are sparing no effort to assure the biggest day of land and water sports ever attempted in Eastern Ontario.

A new drive to rid baseball of metal spikes is under way. Mickey Cochrane, former manager of the Boston Americans, says he sees no reason why a leather or rubber cleat would not do just as well.

Roly Rorke's Picton ballsters rang up their 11th win of the Bay Quinte League by taking the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" into camp on the aerodrome yesterday by a 9 to 7 score. Picton took an early lead, but the "flying men" eventually made matters interesting with a belated rally. However, the Air Force is a vastly improved team over the nine that played its initial game in Belleville early in June, when Joe Kelleher pitched a no-run no-hit affair. Since that time the Flyers have played the locals' measure on two occasions on the aerodrome, but Bud Wilkins' charges have rowed vengeance when the "Airmen" were in the Pair Grounds on Thursday evening.

Sports Trail—Tommy Carruthers, local young golfer, was eliminated in the first round of the Canadian Amateur Golf championship....Ralph Birstack, of Brooklyn, N.Y. beat Tommy 3 and 2.....Joe Louis is to be married! They've started to import rugby football players already.....After batting nine straight the Giants finally won as Carl Hubbell went the route and the Giants beat the Cardinals 6 to 3 yesterday..... Alley Donald, the Yankee phenomenal first-year pitcher, ran up his 12th consecutive victory, setting a new record, as Yankees beat the Browns.....If you live until 1940 you may see the end of the Yankees baseball dynasty, says Broadway Jack Doyle ..... And Doyle isn't noted for his mistakes in these things. It doesn't pay him....Fred Wilhelm of Belleville hatters can clinch a Quinte League play-off berth when entertaining their next two games from the Airport....What about it fans?

I ate what berries I could find," Conn told McMoarn as Mrs. McMoarn gave the lad soup and coffee before sending him to bed. "I drank water from stagnant pools until I found fresh water."
He was all but naked, his clothing torn off by the tangled growths through which he had plodded for days. His body was covered with scratches and insect bites, but his first thought was to notify his distraught parents.
Mrs. Pendle waited impatiently to see her boy. Her brother, a physician, said Donn might be taken out of the isolated section, 15 miles from other habitation, some time today and brought down the Petitscot River by boat.
She planned to meet him at Hay Brook near where she spent the night and hurry with him to a Banger hospital where her husband is recuperating from an eye injury suffered in the search.
Donn wandered away from his father and his twin brother Henry in a thick cloud atop the mile-high mountain a week ago Monday.

PREMIER EXPECTS

"We have sent certain instructions to Sir William Seeds (Ambassador to Moscow) but I have not yet heard what the reactions are."
In response to another question he said "the French and the British governments are acting in full collaboration."
The new instructions sent to Sir William, British officials said, were to agree to immediate staff talks. Since these began, it was this all along, there was held to be little doubt that the proposal would be accepted.

Proposed Mission

The disclosure followed reports of rapid progress in the latest conversations of British, French and Russian Diplomats looking toward a three-power mutual assistance pact.
It was understood the three governments have agreed the negotiations have progressed to such a stage that staff talks could begin without waiting for conclusion of the pact.
The cabinet considered details of the proposed mission at its weekly meeting today.
The cabinet considered the chief outstanding point in the pact negotiations—definition of "indirect aggression." It was understood a new formula on this point would be sent to Sir William Seeds, Ambassador to Russia.
Immediate military discussions would pave the way for placing both military and political parts of the pact into effect at the same time if differences are ironed out. In working out agreements with Poland and Turkey, Britain sent "then military missions"

Little Benny's Note Book

I watched pop getting dressed this morning to see if he would put on the 13 cent necktie I gave him for his birthday yestiday, being a green and yellow and red necktie with lots of stripes and some dots, only he started to put on a plane one instead, me saying Aw jimminy pop.

No doubt but why? pop said and I said You're not going to wear the necktie I gave you.

Just wait till I tell you why I'm as disappointed as you are pop said. Last night I went to bed with my mouth all set for that necktie this morning but I had such a vivid dream about it that if I didn't dare wear it. Firstly I dont take much stock in dreams, but this one was more like a vision, and I'd just be a plain fool if I wore that tie today. I dreamed that every man I met, even perfect strangers, stopped me when they saw that tie and begged me with tears in their eyes to either give it to them or sell it to them or lend it to them. Well, I kept explaining that I was sorry but it was a birthday present and all that sort of thing, and I managed to get through the day without losing it, but just because I was that strong minded in a dream doesn't prove I could keep on resisting in actual life, so I decided not to take a chance, he said.

But gosh, pop, maybe it was only a dream, I mean it, you never want really happen, I said, and pop said, Well, if you're willing to take a chance I'm sure I am. I'll be only too-delighted, naturally.

And he took the plane blue one off and put mine on and after breakfist he looked at it in the hall mirrer and fixed it strate and left for his office, and tonight he came home wearing the plane blue one again, saying he knew it would happen and it had, and claiming he had put the plane blu one in his pocket just in case.

FIGHTING RENEWED

Tokyo, July 25 (AP)—Fighting was reported renewed today along the border between Outer Mongolia and Manchoukuo as the Japanese launched their second offensive in two days in an attempt to dislodge Soviet-Russian supported Mongol forces from a foothold on the east bank of the Khalka River.

The Japanese Army issued a communique stating that 58 Soviet planes had been shot down.

LIEUT.-GOVERNOR WELCOMED BY KIWANIS CLUB

"Bob" Smith Makes Official Visit and Gives Fine Address

TWO NEW MEMBERS

Lieutenant Governor "Bob" Smith of Oshawa was welcomed at the Kiwanis Club luncheon on Tuesday at the Queens Hotel by one of the largest attendances of the year and the meeting generally was one of the best held in many months. The club, besides welcoming the distinguished official on his official business to the club, also played hosts to three distinguished visitant parts, one being Walter Collins, who was born in this city and has returned to the city after 40 years spent in the United States, he now being a resident of Bloomfield, West Virginia. The others were Tom Brodie of West Toronto Kiwanis Club who spends his vacation in this district and does a "spot of fishing" and John Orr of Creighton of Washington, Penn., who incidentally is counting every cent in the Kiwanis Club. They drove their families up for their attendance, Brodie being a threeboy member with a hundred percent attendance.

Two New Members

Two young men, sponsors of the city, Adl. Cymonds Butler and Fred Stevens, manager of the Rawson Bus line, were welcomed as new members. They were introduced by Eddie Logan and initiated by Cliff Saragar, The Lieut. Governor complimented the club on the fine quality of men being induced to join the organization stating that upon the younger men, the work of Kiwanis in the district is carried on. Another treat was a piano solo by the ever popular Leo B. Riggs and the visitors at the luncheon praised the club on the fine artistry of their pianist. The community singing was in charge of Ted Hughes with Riggs at the piano, which made the repartee across the table was the most subtle heard in some time. The first prize of $5 went to the fine Italian tenor Mario Bertolo and the league title on Thursday night and a full team is requested for this important game.

Club Complimented

The Lieutenant Governor was introduced by Past President Alvin Boynton and complimented on his fine address complimented the club on their splendid work during the year and for the members on the appointment at the last district meeting, Mr. Smith told of the wonderful time planned for the Kiwanians of this district at the district convention to be held in Ottawa in September and requested every member attend the meeting. Mention of the fine time had at International convention in Boston and drew $1 per hog premium with the top reported at $13.50.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: cattle 430; calves 230; hogs 1,070; sheep and lambs 50.

POLICE SEEKING FOR INFORMATION

Are Asked by Almonte Police to Cooperate in Hunt for Man Wanted in Alleged Picture Racket

The story of "your enlargement" was selected as one of the best ten in the contest and we would advise you to purchase one of these better class picture frames in order that your enlargement will look better than the 8 x 10 inch size offered the public.

The modus operandi is always the same, Chief Kidd warned today. A man or woman and in some cases both, appears at the home with some snapshots of which the family will be proud. Upon entering, they tell the operator tells the householder that the operator he represents is holding a contest and that he is to enter the contest $5.00 is needed to defray the cost of enlargement. Then along comes the "much-needed" cash and from that angle, but strangely in every case yet reported to the police it is alleged there has been some misunderstanding or the picture frame and lastly or the enlargement.

Today Chief Kidd received a picture from Almonte, Chief R. McLaughlin, with the request ing a warrant for the arrest of a man described as about 32 years of age, 5 foot, 8 inches tall, dark complexion, fairly bald and fair moustache. He is also accompanied by a woman, is alleged to have been operating somewhere in Eastern Ontario through the picture racket methods. Local residents are cautioned to notify police if such persons approach them.

Miss McCoy Speaks To S. A. Young People

The Salvation Army Youth Group held its meeting in the Station St. Church. Miss Ivy was the leader, the subject of prayer and the topic to be spoke on prayer.

"Prayer is a petition of the soul to God, some are silent, some are aloud. Prayer should be said in the morning soon and morning," said Miss McCoy. Old and New Testaments were prayed when he was in the lion's den. Peter was imprisoned, prayer ceasing. Saul prayed for healing and Ananias, a disciple, was sent to him. The Lord's prayer was taught to the disciples by Jesus. Jesus prayed for His disciples.

"We pray earnestly things can be accomplished," said Miss McCoy, "such as the healing of the sick. Prayer is a wonderful thing to children. Prayer is a wonderful subject, read it and you will receive an answer. Prayer is not too much.

"Are prayers answered? Yes," said Miss McCoy, "if we pray for the right things, the Lord gives us what He sees best."

The collection also gave an illustration: "Peter's mother-in-law's eldest son saved but found it hard to pay. Peter's mother-in-law's eldest son saved by praying saved." They both knelt by their beds and the youngest sister was saved through prayer."

Miss Ivy closed the meeting. Testimonings were given on prayer and the meeting then sang a vocal trio.

SECOND ATTEMPT TO REMOVE JETT

Hamilton, Ont., July 26.—(CP)— An attempt to remove a .22 calibre rifle bullet from the head of three-year-old Robert Strout, who, on May 29, Alfred Stroud, Caledonia, was made in hospital here today. The operation was unsuccessful and another will be performed.

The boy was shot through the head yesterday when a gun in the hands of his six-year-old brother Raymond, discharged accidentally while the youngsters were at play. The bullet pierced the nostril and is believed lodged in the head. The boy is resting comfortably.

The boy's mother attempted to take the gun from Raymond when she learned they were playing with it. She was unable to reach them in time.

DUPLESSIS TO LEAD MAYORS

Quebec, July 26.—(CP)—Premier Maurice Duplessis promised today to lead a delegation of Quebec mayors to Ottawa to discuss with Dominion authorities the question of Federal Government contribution toward unemployment assistance.

CANNIFTON BOY STRUCK BY CAR

Riding Bicycle Near Foxboro at Time of Accident Early Last Evening

Foxboro, July 26 (Special)—Fourteen year old Dougald Hopkins, second son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hopkins of Cannifton, was seriously injured here at Foxboro early last evening when he was knocked from his bicycle, as he was on his way home and run over by a car driven by Mr. George Sprackett of 11 Purdin street, Belleville.

According to an eye witness of the accident, Dougald Hopkins and Mr. Sprackett were travelling south towards Belleville and were both on their own side of the road when the mishap occurred. In rounding the corner at the south end of the village it appears that Mr. Sprackett failed to see the boy on the bicycle ahead until it was too late to avoid him and ran into him down with the rear wheel of the light sedan passing over his body.

Although badly injured, the young lad was able to gain his feet and staggered off to the side of the road where he was picked up by his father who operates a garage here a few rods from where the accident occurred, and taken to the Belleville General Hospital. He was admitted and given an X-ray and it is found that the left front part of the lad's injuries could not be definitely determined.

Mr. Sprackett was allegedly travelling only about fifteen miles per hour when the mishap occurred, Provincial Officer Everett Smith investigated.

FORMER CITIZENS VISIT BELLEVILLE

Mr. W. P. Dempsey and Sister, Miss Margaret Dempsey, of California Meet Friends Here

"If it were a little cooler at night, this would be ideal California weather," said Mr. W. P. Dempsey of Belleville boy, now a resident of the San Bernadino Valley, California who is paying a visit to his old home scenes, said this morning.

Mr. Dempsey and his sister, Miss Margaret Dempsey, have been guests at the New Queen Hotel for the past few days. They leave for Toronto today and will journey thence to Chicago and from there to the California home after an enjoyable visit with friends here.

"There have been some changes in Belleville," said Mr. Dempsey, "but Belleville will always be Belleville to me."

Mr. Dempsey was born on Front Street in 1871, above the stationery store now owned by Mr. Hatfield. He late Michael Dempsey. He received his early education here and got his start in life with the late John Cunningion, prominent cheese exporter and dealer. He left here with the late James Cook, of this city, for upwards of four years. His brother, Michael Dempsey, was a local member of The Ontario staff years ago.

Leaving Belleville, Mr. Dempsey became associated with the Chicago and Northwestern Railway and remained with that company as a passenger agent for thirty-nine years. He retired a little over a year ago and made his home in Oalifornia.

"It feels good to settle down," he said, "but there is always a longing for it made my home alternately in Toronto, Detroit and Chicago."

Mrs. Dempsey, the former Miss Mc-sel Dempsey, taught in St. Michael's School for a number of years the early days, later leaving that vocation to start a stationery store on Front Street which flourished for many years.

Mr. Dempsey entered the realm of the benedict. "My wife's maiden name had been Mary Ann Foley," he said. "She has kept house for me and we are practically inseparable."

Paralysis Spreads South to North

Berkeley, Calif., July 26 (AP)— Evidence that infantile paralysis epidemic which originated recently from south to north was reported to the Pacific Science Congress today by Dr. C. C. Lieb, chief of the district of Columbia Health Department.

In some widespread outbreaks, he said, increases in number of cases first noted in the southernmost parts of the areas involved. These increases had occurred generally weeks ahead of the increases in the more northerly parts of the infected area.

Dr. Dauer said weekly reports by cities also showed that such increases in the number of cases were found simultaneously in two or more places, suggesting that the infection came from more than one centre instead of jumping from place to place in a chain-like operation.

Infantile paralysis, he said, has a predilection for attacking in the late summer and early fall, and rarely occurs in other seasons, although the epidemic of October and November, 1924, in Southern California was an exception.

OLD-TIME PRINTER VISITS IN CITY

Albert Nolan, Detroit, Set Type by Hand in Belleville Ontario and Intelligencer

Sturdy, ruddy-faced, a picture of health that belies his seventy-five years, Albert Nolan, who spent three years of hand-set printers and former employee of The Belleville Ontario and The Belleville Intelligencer, wrought colorful link with the past yesterday when he visited the offices of The Ontario Intelligencer.

Now living in Detroit where he retired three years ago after completing forty-two years of creditable service with the Ford Motor Company, Mr. Nolan and his son Albert, his wife and daughter, have been the guests of Mr. Don Gunn, Sidney Township, and Mr. Douglas Moxam, Rosamore. They are returning to Detroit today.

It was way back in 1883-84 when Mr. Nolan first set type by hand in the shop of The Belleville Intelligencer. The Ontario when the latter paper was under the management of the late T. S. Carman. Later he went to Peterborough, where he worked in the type-rooms of the old Review, the Examiner and the Times. He was foreman in the shop of the latter publication.

Mr. Nolan then went to Syracuse, At that time the linotype machines were being introduced. He worked for considerably a year on one of the new machines, then gave up the printing profession. Moving to Detroit he became associated with the Ford Company with which firm he remained for twenty-two years.

"I retired three years ago," he chuckled, "I have plenty and enough work in my life."

Mr. Nolan visited Peterborough during his present trip, it being the fourth time he has returned to the district since leaving it many years ago. He has, however, visited Belleville frequently during the years, renewing acquaintances and friendships that do not dim with the passing years.

SNOW IN ROME

Rome, July 26—(AP)—Rain with hail "the size of walnuts" fell today which Romans experienced the hottest July in 60 years. Snow fell in the mountains of northern Italy.

Rome's temperature fell from 104 degrees Fahrenheit to a minimum of 52. A low of 50 was recorded at Bolzano.

MAY BE POSSIBLE TO REFLOAT BOAT

Wreckage Identified as Boat at Aycliffe Hall Sank in 1936

Port Burwell, Ont., July 26 (CP) —A mystery which has kept Great Lakes shipping guessing for three years is solved with the identification of wreckage lying in Canadian waters on the bottom of Lake Erie as that of the ill-fated Aycliffe Hall which sank in 1936 after a collision.

When the Government lighthouse tender Acadia steamed into port here late last night she carried with her the solution to the vessel's disappearance after unsuccessful salvage operations undertaken after the accident. H. E. Foland, a diver, identified the wreck as that of the missing boat.

Attention was drawn to a submerged obstruction in the centre of Lake Erie earlier this shipping season as a possible menace to navigation. Federal marine authorities found a 26-foot heavy wooden hull with the name obscure, attached to some sunken object.

This spar was identified as one attached as a marker to the Aycliffe Hall wreckage in the fall of 1936 after the vain salvage attempt. Positive identification followed yesterday.

The Acadia will stay in for 50 feet of wear and marine authorities believe it may be found practical to refloat and re-fit her for service.

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby Cayzer

The roads were deserted—the meadows wet and forlorn—but something in Jane's heart was singing as she hurried along. It was as if some one were calling out to her. "This way adventure," as if some one had opened a gate in life of which she had hitherto been ignorant.

Gavin was there waiting, standing at the door of the car in the rain, looking anxiously down the road.

"I thought it might be too wet for you to venture," he said with a smile.

Jane laughed.

"It takes more than the weather to stop me," she declared and then, "Oh, it's a much better car than ours."

"It will get us there," he promised.

"Where are we going?" she asked, and he answered, "Does it matter? I haven't the slightest idea."

"That's the best way," she said.

She looked up at him with dancing eyes they drew away.

"How do you like my family?" she asked.

"Very much—though they're not a bit what I expected."

"You mean—judging by me?"

"Yes—"

"I've always been the sort of odd man out," she told him contentedly. "You see—my mother hoped I should be a boy."

"I'm glad you were not."

"I've been sorry—sometimes."

"Why?"

"Oh, I don't know—perhaps because I could have had more freedom. If I had been a boy I think I should have gone abroad as you did—"

"And you might have come back—as I have."

"Do you think you will really settle down in England?"

"I hope so."

"Sidney was rather a wet blanket last night, wasn't he?"

"Sidney? Oh, the chap who came to dinner."

"Yes— he wants to marry Pamela."

"So I guessed. I think they are very well suited."

Jane laughed. "I should go mad in ten minutes if I had to live with him, and yet he's awfully kind—and clever."

"The sort of man who will get on. I should think," Gavin said dryly.

"A real John Citizen—the backbone of the empire and all that."

"It sounds dull," she said, "And if I ever marry——" she stopped abruptly.

"Go on," he prompted.

Jane looked away from him to the wet fields.

"I was going to say that he wouldn't be my idea of a husband —but then I don't suppose I should be his idea of a wife either."

Montford, laughed. "Hardly, I imagine."

"That doesn't sound very much like a compliment."

"Doesn't it?" But he did not explain.

"You've got another sister," he said presently.

"Yes—the flower of the flock. She'll be home soon, and then you'll see for yourself."

"If I'm here," he said, and she turned her head quickly.

"You're not going away?"

INSTALMENT 4.

"I must look for a job," Montford said.

"What sort of job?" Jane asked.

"Anything I can find—I've got a little money—not much—not enough to last. I rather hope that my uncle may interest himself in my future—not having any family of his own.

"I hope he will. Is that why you came?" she asked innocently.

He laughed at that. "What a very leading question."

"I'm sorry—I didn't mean to be rude, but relations never seem much good when it comes to the point, do they?"

"I thought you had a fairy-godmother."

"Yes, I did—but nobody ever expected she would be. I can't remember her very well except that she was rather a stiff, forbidding sort of person, though sometimes there used to be a little twinkle in her eyes. I'm afraid I was rather rude to her, and yet she left me a thousand pounds."

"Lucky you."

"Yes," Jane laughed. "You'd be amused if you knew how often I've spent it in my mind—and in what different ways."

"Would that pay?"

"I shouldn't think so," she admitted honestly. "I'm not very good at business, but it would be fun having people driving up in cars and asking for eggs and bacon, I should expect."

"So do I."

"Pamela says—she's so businesslike—that if I'm wise I shall just save it for a rainy day. You see Pamela has quite made up her mind that I'm to be the old maid of the family."

"How very impolite of Pamela."

Jane laughed. "Oh, I don't know —I shouldn't make much of a wife, I know. I think domestic things are so dull, don't you?"

"I don't know much about them. You see, I've always roughed it—my people died when I was a kid at school, and as soon as I was old enough I cleared off to Canada—it was only twenty then."

"And then what did you do?"

Gavin shrugged his shoulders.

"Anything—everything. Once I worked on a railway—once in a store; then on a farm. Two years ago I went into partnership with another fellow, raising wheat—but two bad seasons broke us, so I got out—what I could out of the wreckage and here I am."

She said with a touch of envy, "But at least you've seen something of the world."

"Only a bit of its seamy side, I am afraid, and there's not much romance in that. I can remember thinking how wonderful it would be to have a good meal on a white tablecloth with some one to do the cooking and to wash up to get a newspaper every morning and a hot bath." He slowed down a little as they came to a crossroad.

"Which way?" he asked.

"The left," Jane said promptly. Gavin swung the car about and for a little neither of them spoke till he said, "It was queer—meeting you, wasn't it?"

"How do you mean?"

"Well, I was feeling fed up. The Binghams are kind and all that, but it's possible to feel just as lonely in a house like theirs as it is in the backwoods. And then, when I met you—it seemed as if I had some face to face with a friend whom I hadn't seen for years—"

"Did it?" Her voice was a little tremulous. "Men don't like me as a rule," she added with rather painful honesty.

"You mean men like our friends Sidney," he answered.

"Yes, I suppose I do," she laughed. "But I had a proposal of marriage once."

"Who was he?"

"Oh, he was very nice, and I liked him—just as a friend. He's engaged to some one else now, so he couldn't have been very broken-hearted."

"Do you believe that hearts ever break seriously?"

"Yes, I think perhaps they do—with some people. I can imagine that they do."

"You're full of imagination."

"What do you mean?"

"That I've never met a girl like you before! you're so downright and honest—and real."

"Thank you; it's not very often I get a compliment."

"And you're not quite sure even now if I'm sincere," he suggested.

"It must be if you say so," she said politely.

They both laughed and Montford said, "What about this place for lunch? Do you think it will be any good?"

"I've never been there, but if there's bread and cheese it will be all right for me," she said happily.

He looked down at her, his brown eyes warm.

"Do you ever quarrel with life?" he asked.

"Sometimes, but on the whole I think it's good."

"It's what you make it," he said. He stopped the car at the door of the little inn.

"It may be only bread and cheese," he warned her.

"I love bread and cheese," she answered.

There was a bright fire in the little parlor and a sleepy old grey cat purred in the window seat that opened one eye and said, "Hullo, mate!" as Jane walked across to him.

A girl with red hair and a white apron came in.

"We want some food," Gavin said.

"Yes, sir, roast beef and potatoes and cabbage—and apple tart."

"Lovely," Jane said with enthusiasm. She sat down by the fire, loosening her coat. "Now I call this fun," she said.

Gavin leaned an elbow on the mantelshelf, looking down at her.

"I can imagine that with you life would be always fun," he said.

Her face rose a little, and she shook her head.

"The family would not agree," she said.

"Oh, the family!" he echoed.

"A very nice family," she hedged gently.

There was a little silence while the maid laid the cloth, and when she had gone Gavin said, "You ought to have been a gipsy, Jane."

Her blue eyes flashed him a quick glance.

"I shouldn't have minded. I can imagine far worse places than a caravan drawn by an old grey horse."

"They have motors nowadays," he reminded her.

"There's the danger of running out of gas," she said.

The beef was tough.

Across the table Gavin looked at Jane and grimaced.

"This must be a cut off the old grey horse," he said.

"If you're hungry you'll enjoy it," she answered. "And the cabbage is lovely."

He laughed. "You remind me of the last girl I took to lunch," he said reflectively. "It was in Toronto—we went to the best hotel. It seemed marvelous to me, but she wasn't so pleased."

"Spoilt," Jane said briefly.

He leaned his arm on the table, looking at her steadily.

"Has nobody ever spoilt you?" he asked.

She shook her head. "I don't think so—I'm not the kind that gets spoilt. Pamela says——" she broke off abruptly.

"What does Pame's say?"

"That I'm the kind that stalks along through life with my head in the air."

"Alone," he said, but Jane did not reply to that, and presently he said, "I believe in comradeship—in being good friends with some one—with one person—in being able to laugh together, and to take the rough with the smooth. Sentiment is all very well, but it's not weather-proof."

"You seem to know a lot about it," she said.

He shook his head.

"I don't—it's only what I've seen —with others. I've known fellows—fellows who've lost their heads over a girl—been ready to chuck everything for her sake, and then—once they've got her—" He stopped, and Jane nodded seriously.

"I know—I've seen it, too," she said.

They sipped their coffee by the fire and smoked cigarettes. The rain pattered down against the windows, but the fire burned cheerfully, and Jane looked around the little room with happy eyes.

"What are you thinking about?" he asked, and she said with a twinkle: "I was wondering perhaps if I could run a little inn like this —make it pay, I mean."

"Is it absolutely necessary to run something?" he asked.

She nodded. "I think it is—I don't want just to do nothing for the rest of my life."

"You'll marry," he said.

Jane sat very still, her hands clasped loosely in her lap, suddenly conscious of her quickened heartbeats, though she managed to say indifferently, "I am not sure that even that's a very alluring prospect."

He walked away from her to the window and stood looking out at the steadily falling rain, and Jane's eyes slowly lifted to follow him.

"Still raining," she said, when at last the silence became unbearable. He did not answer, but he came back to stand beside her.

"Will you marry me?" he asked.

She sat there limply, just staring at him, and after a moment he went on, "I don't know why I'm asking you—we've met only three times, but I like you—I think we should be happy together. Life would be—rather a picnic—but there's no need for me to tell you. We understand each other."

Her lips moved, but she could find no words, and he went on a little agitatedly:

"You believe in friendship—comradeship—as I do, I'm not going to —pretend that I've fallen violently in love with you or—or anything like that, but—but it seems to me that life might be—rather a good thing—shared with you."

The color deepened in his brown face as he saw the sudden tears in her eyes, and he said in distress, "I don't know—I must sound like —presumption on my part, but——"

Jane moved a little, slipping her hand into his.

"Don't be sorry," she said simply, "because I think life would be rather a good thing, too—shared with you."

INSTALMENT 5.

They paid the bill for the lunch and drove away. "Shall I have to speak to your father and make a formal request for your hand?" Gavin Monford asked comically.

Jane laughed. "I shouldn't think it matters," she said serenely, "Because even if he objected—and he won't—I should marry you just the same." She frowned. "I wonder what the girls will say?"

"That you've made a bad bargain, I imagine," he answered grimly.

"I don't care what they say—I don't care what any one says." She glanced at him and away again. "Except you, of course," she added softly.

Gavin Monford flushed a little.

"Thank you," he said, and then after a moment, "I may not be able to marry for some time."

"I don't mind that either," Jane was feeling utterly content. She had never yearned with life. Her that day it seemed as if she could never be sufficiently grateful to it for giving her so much happiness.

"I'm perfectly happy," she thought, and her thoughts ran on ahead into the future. They would be such good friends, as Gavin as lover; they would understand each other, they would never quarrel; she was not the least hurt because Gavin had said that he was not "wildly in love with her"—love was such a disgusting, short-lived thing—it was far finer to be sure of companionship.

Montford said suddenly with a half sigh, "I shall have to beard the lion in his den tonight, I suppose."

"You mean—Doctor Bingham?"

"Yes—"

"What about?" she asked in her direct way, and he answered:

"I want him to put up the money for a partnership in a firm in London—it's quite a good thing, and of course, it would be a purely business arrangement. "They're an expert firm—I've interviewed them already, and they seem to think I'm possible."

"Do you think he'll do it?"

Gavin Monford shrugged his broad shoulders.

"I don't see why he should re-

"I saved a dollar today"

It's a great satisfaction to look over the day's accounts and find you've been able to save money by careful buying.

Knowing WHERE to buy is part of the trick. But knowing HOW to buy is a bigger part. The wise "business manager" of the home plans her shopping as skilfully as a business man plans to spend a thousand dollars

Advertisements help greatly, of course. On daily necessities like meats, fruits, vegetables, they show you how to save 2c here, 3c there, adding up to much. But advertisements are just as helpful on larger purchases—furniture, draperies, motor cars, clothing. Followed carefully, advertising saves you money all down the line . . . helps you run the household more economically . . . gives the budget a chance to breathe.

U. S. Envisions Embargo on Japan; Ends 1911 Treaty

Japanese Consider Announcement of Abrogation an Unfriendly Act, Coming Without Warning to Japan

WASHINGTON SURPRISED

Senator Vandenberg, Usually Critical, Praises Action of Administration at Washington in Announcing Treaty's End

Washington, July 27—(AP)—The United States cleared the way today toward an embargo against Japan by terminating the 1911 treaty of commerce and navigation with that country.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, with the approval of President Roosevelt, sent a note to Japanese Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi saying the United States would expect the treaty to expire in six months.

When Congress meets in January it may proceed with legislation for an embargo on shipments of war materials to Japan, any legal obstacles having been removed by cessation of the treaty.

Mr. Hull's action, announced last night several hours after the Japanese Embassy here had been notified, swept the capital with surprise. It followed by only a few hours the decision of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to defer consideration of the Vandenberg resolution calling on the government to terminate the treaty.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Michigan Republican and ordinarily one of the administration's strongest critics, said he was "glad to find himself "in agreement with the State Department."

TWO SENTENCED TO 4 YEARS EACH

Pair Arrested Near Brockville After Stealing Car at Belleville

Brockville, Ont., July 27.—(CP) —Elgin Grattan, 21, London, Ont., and Preston Brown, 22-year-old Chatham negro, who had previously pleaded guilty to three charges of breaking, entering and theft, and admitted criminal records of approximately nine years each, were sentenced to four years in penitentiary.

Early morning of July 12 the men broke into the residence of Wm. Reid, Chatham, which they stole clothing and blanket. Grattan was armed with an unloaded revolver. Later they stole a car belonging to Joseph Schelbert, a Chatham negro, and went to Gananoque Lake. When arrested July 13 at Marble Rock, near Gananoque, they had the stolen car and goods as well as an automobile belonging to Dr. F. J. Reid, Chatham, which they had taken July at Chatham.

Skirl of Pipes and 'Language Of Eden' Heard at Gaelic College

By JACK TRACEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. Ann's, N.S., July 27—(CP)— Classes in the first Gaelic college in North America opened today in a little log cabin on the north rim Cape Breton hills. Plaid-clothed Donalban MacKinnon, the only publisher of the world's only purely Gaelic newspaper, presided as Dean.

The college was instituted by the Cape Breton Island Gaelic Foundation as a means of preserving the language, customs and traditions of the Gaels. It was inaugurated by ceremony here yesterday. More than 2,000 people, most of them with highland blood in their veins, heard skilled Premier Angus L. Macdonald address the first assembly.

Highways Minister A. S. MacMillan, who also is Provincial Secretary back to Scotland, dedicated the Gaelic museum housed by the rough walls of the cabin. Memories of the back-breaking toil of the men and women who braved a civilization out of the Cape Breton hills are on exhibit there.

The skirl of the pipes sounded through the hills. Here and there Scots talked easily in the tongue which they know as the "language of the garden of Eden."

They stood on historic ground. The land stretched to the waters of St. Ann's Bay into which sailed Rev. Norman MacLeod and a little log cabin in 1821 years ago. The hills in which MacLeod's flock settled and where their descendants still farm lowered over the bay.

Premier Macdonald counselled the gathering to preserve the Scottish spirit of independence and self-reliance.

"I feel that independence of mind that self-reliance which ought to be ours" he said, "we shall be easy victims of any new theory of government that is advanced. We shall be the prey to the first doctor. We shall lose that democracy of the old Gaels for which they have defended and maintained more vigorously than the people of Scotland."

The first Gaelic classes will continue for two weeks. Dean MacKinnon has seven Gaelic scholars assisting him. MacKinnon himself once published the world-renowned Gaelic newspaper at Sydney, N.S.

UNCERTAINTY IN EUROPE MAY DEFER GENERAL ELECTION

King Makes Above Statement Following a Cabinet Meeting

BY-ELECTION IN SEPT

Hon. Ernest Lapointe to Take Over Duties of Secretary of State

Ottawa, July 27—(CP)—Uncertainty in Europe may defer Canada's general election until next year, political circles believe after weighing an announcement by Prime Minister Mackenzie King following a cabinet meeting last night.

"As long as the situation in Europe continues as it is I don't think we would be justified in dissolving parliament," Mr. King confirmed last night. He said parliament may have to meet again this year to decide on matters of national importance.

"Whether there will be an election this year or not I cannot say, because I have not decided. I am keeping in mind European conditions, and also the treaty agreement in many quarters that the government should be conditioned by the people and we don't need an election," he said.

(Elected in 1935, the King government's five-year term in office will not expire until 1940.)

Tighter Laws Sought Admitting Aliens To Citizenship

Kootenay Association Would Have Aliens Renounce Allegiance to Any Other Country

GRAND FORKS, B.C., July 27 —(CP)—The Association of Kootenay Municipalities yesterday started tightening of requirements for admission of aliens into Canadian citizenship. Mayor T. A. Love of Grand Forks said formation of Nazi organizations in the Okanagan Valley and flying of the Nazi swastika there proffiged the basis for the action.

R. L. Maitland, K.C., Vancouver, Conservative, and Colin Cameron, Leader, commented that the Swastika has been flown at Okanagan Fraser Valley Centre 50 miles east of Vancouver. A Nazi group has been organized there, he said.

As adopted, the resolution proposed that aliens before the oath of citizenship should be required to renounce allegiance to any other country; that Canada should withdraw from membership; and write English so as to understand the laws of their new land and that they should be required to apply for citizenship within five years of entering the Dominion, or be subject to deportation.

BODY IS RECOVERED

Ottawa, July 27—(CP)—Kenneth Karook, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Karook of Ottawa, was drowned yesterday in the Rideau River at Hog's Back, near here, while swimming. The body was recovered.

The "Parachute Stroke" Would Be a Threat To Great Britain in War

By JACK BRALEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 27—(CP)— The "parachute stroke" by which men could be dropped on Great Britain to perform acts of sabotage under cover of an air raid would be a serious threat in wartime, in the opinion of Captain Liddell Hart, one of Britain's foremost military strategists.

In his latest book, "The Defence of Britain," Captain Liddell Hart seeks to answer the question whether Britain can be invaded.

He writes that while Britain is not safe, he finds no invading army on its soil unless as a sequel to capitulation from other causes, the "parachute stroke" might be used effectively. However, parachute battalions dropped where there was no main body to come to their relief soon would be wiped out.

Paying tribute to troops from the Dominions as the "first line," he writes:

"It is significant that in the last war the armies which collapsed were those of the autocratic states, the Russian, the Austrian, the Austrian and the German in turn. They were armies in which conscientious assistance was laid on unthinking obedience.

"Canadian, Australians Best

"By contrast, the best fighting bodies in the British armies of the wars, by general recognition, the Australian and Canadian Corps. They were the forces in which discipline, while it grew, remained most free; where it was natural to hear a foolish order roundly criticized."

SCOTLAND YARD DIRECTS HUNT FOR TERRORISTS

House Adopts Drastic Measures to Combat Irish Republican Army

5 MEN SEIZED

London, July 27—(CP)—Spurred by an angry public, Scotland Yard directed a vast hunt today for terrorists who shot blood and destroyed property in a series of bombing outrages launched as the House of Commons adopted drastic measures to combat the Irish Republican army.

Authorities said the explosions were in line with an I.R.A. "plan" which Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare described to the House Monday as calling for wrecking of key industries, blasting of the parliament buildings and pollution of water supplies.

Five men were seized for questioning in the explosions here in Liverpool, but authorities said none had been detained on specific charges.

CANADA'S CROPS ARE THREATENED BY HEAT WAVE

Timberlands Also Threatened by Wind-Fanned Flames

RAINFALL LIGHT

By The Canadian Press

Canada's crops today were threatened by the ravages of heat and timberlands by the onslaught of wind-fanned flames.

From east and west came reports of raniless, sweltering weather. The prospect persisted of more heat and heat threatened ruin to crops in many areas and magnified the hazard of forest fires.

Across the Atlantic, wheatlands anxiely mounted as a 12-day heat wave continued to cause serious crop deterioration. Rain and cooler showers showed no immediate signs of fruition.

Scattered clouds over Saskatchewan brought prophecies of relief although temperatures remained high. Scorching blasts continued over Manitoba grain fields but farmers claimed there still was a chance of a fine crop despite the "terrible beating" the wheat has already taken.

MANION AGAINST NATIONAL GOV'T FOR DOMINION

Would Not Remedy Ills Besetting Country at This Time is Claim

AT PORT STANLEY

Port Stanley, Ont., July 27—(CP) —A national government could not solve the problems of Canada, according to Conservative Leader R. J. Manion.

In an address to 4,000 Western Ontario Conservatives yesterday, Dr. Manion declared that a coalition in the Dominion party this would be followed in turn by a coalition of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, Social Credit and "other cave of adullam groups."

Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, charged that the policies of Canadian taxing bodies were leading the Dominion to bankruptcy. Canada's major internal problem, he said, was the creation of employment and employment was not encouraged by taxation.

4 Million Citizens Can Survey Imaginary Heap of Ruins in Capital.

UNFITS TAKE PART

Berlin, July 27—(AP)—Berliners went to work today past imaginary heaps of wreckage left by "enemy warplanes" in a test of air raid precaution which involved practically every able-bodied person among the capital's 4,000,000 residents.

They saw eight anti-aircraft batteries fired into the moonlit sky while planes soared overhead dropping mock bombs. Then the raiders theoretically shattered hundreds of buildings, tore up streets, overturned street cars and caused unestimated casualties among civilians.

"For the next four nights Berlin will be blacked out completely," a voice drawn or cut off the light from their windows with black paper as the tests continue.

URGES VETERANS TO JOIN MORAL REARMAMENT

Delegates Told Canada Has Greatest Chance to Lead in Making New Men

CANADIAN MESSAGES

Canada Day is Observed at Monterey, California, Conference in Battle for Peace

Monterey, Calif., July 27—(AP)— Fifteen hundred delegates to the second world moral rearmament assembly yesterday discussed the enlisting of veterans of the Great War in "the battle for peace."

Brig. Gen. W. G. Beeman of Kingston, Ont., one of the 400 delegates from Canada, urged former soldiers to become "new shock troops in the battle for their countries' lives."

It was "Canada Day" at the 10-day assembly and representatives of the Dominion told the delegates gathered there the greatest chance to lead the world in making new men.

General Beeman termed moral rearmament a new form of preparedness "comparable to the call to arms for war," and urged former service men to aid in giving direction to their country.

A score of Canadian delegates spoke on what Canada has been doing to bring internal amity.

Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman, beyond the statement of King George on his departure from Canada recently, "I wish her even greater growth in mind and spirit."

Colonel Leonard Vernon, former officer of the Canadian Royal Mounted Police said: "When all policemen are in moral rearmament, they will do their jobs better; when all people are in moral rearmament there will be less need for police.

"Through moral rearmament, revolutionary ideologies can be changed that they will become constructive forces for rebuilding the life of the nation."

Dr. Frank Buchman, of New York and London, conference leader, read messages from 15 Canadian Mayors which said:

"The world assembly for moral rearmament is an event of significance and hope for our nations. We are grateful in these days of crises for the faith that there are people who are persistently fighting for the battle for moral rearmament....is a call to sacrifice and service which no man who loves his country can evade."

Signers included the Mayors of Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec and Toronto.

Represents France At Staff Talks Held at Moscow

Paris, July 27—(AP)— General Joseph Edouard Doumenc, newly appointed member of the superior war council, left today for Moscow to represent the French general staff in the conversations opening in Moscow with Russian and British officers.

General Doumenc will undertake this mission as soon as negotiations for an Anglo-French-Russian mutual assistance treaty have been completed.

Advices from Moscow and London indicated an agreement was near and might be reached in a meeting in Moscow late today.

Tonight Will Mark Mars' Closest Approach to Earth in 15 Years

London, July 27—(CP)—Astronomers tonight will get the closest view of Mars they have had in 15 years but no one expects to find anything that the planet is peopled by mechanised monsters or lillle red men.

Scientists have been viewing Mars for some days already with powerful telescopes and they will be added, however, that any Martian would have to stand a temperature ranging from 65 above to 115 below zero in a desert world where no water and vegetation appears only when the ice field at the poles melt.

Mars, riding tonight a few minutes before sunset in the constellation capricornus, should be looked for in the southeastern sky. Its course during the night will be in a fairly low westward arch through the southern heavens.

Owing to its proximity to the horizon, the planet is not expected to be easily visible until an hour or longer after sunset.

High Soviet Army Officers Included In Today's Decree

Publication of Such a List in Soviet Union Usually Is Tantamount to Announcement Those Mentioned Have Been Arrested

TAIROFF INCLUDED

List Also Includes Some Russians as Guilty of 'Actions Unworthy of Order - Bearers'—Among These is Naval Engineer Oras, Former Attache at Washington

Moscow, July 27—(AP)—Seventy-nine prominent Russians including 18 of the high Soviet army officers were stripped of their decorations by a decree published today.

They include Tiroff, former Soviet Minister to Mongolian People's Republic; Division Commander Sergyeff; Air Force Commander Smirnoff; formerly Marshal Vassily Blucher's assistant in the Far East, and Shevchenko, chief of the political administration in the rural military district.

"Actions Unworthy"

Also listed as guilty of "actions unworthy of the decorations" were:

Naval Engineer Oras, former Soviet naval attache in Washington; Rappaport, former political commissar of the Svetnaya Naval Academy; Sudying, former vice-commissar of foreign trade; Submarine Commander Orlov, and a Comandi (Communist youth) leader in Kharkh named Prchinkin.

Publication of such a list in the Soviet Union usually is tantamount to announcement those mentioned have been arrested.

THREE TRAPPED IN DIVING BELL

Climb Out of Escape Hatch After 2,000 Gallons Pumped Out

San Francisco, July 27—(AP) — Three men were trapped for 50 minutes below the surface in a diving bell at a Golden Gate Exposition concession today before climbing out the escape hatch after 2,000 gallons had been pumped into the 25-foot tank.

The three were Louis Olipin, 22, operator of the concession, and two customers, Edgar B. Simmons, 22, and Robert Brisky, 23.

Olipin submerged the bell with Simmons and Brisky inside calling movement of the steel cylinder from the inside. On the ascent, the power cut off and they were left in the darkness and halting it three feet below the surface.

After the bell had been submerged a half hour the Treasure Island Fire Department arrived with pumping equipment and as the water line lowered below the hatch, the men emerged. They said their only ill effects had been a smarting of the eyes. Two air hose maintained a flow of fresh air circulation in the bell, which has room for about eight persons.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Observations for air traffic! The growing use of navigation demanded more weather observations, and as airplanes navigated their natural paths, a great part of the increased number of observations are at the upper air stations many of which are on the airways, (2) wind, speed and direction at various levels up to 14,000 feet by watching free balloons with a theodolite, and (3) observations of press ure, temperature and humidity taken and transmitted automatically by ground by instruments carried aloft by 6-foot balloons.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

5,000,000 GALLONS DAILY

Guelph, Ont., July 27 (CP)— City Engineer H. S. Noble announces the unprecedented total of 5,000,000 gallons of water is being used daily in Guelph, threatening pressure and fire reserves. As a precaution, lawn watering will be restricted to certain periods of the day until the dry spell passes.

BOY PINNED UNDER CAR. NO BONES ARE BROKEN

Hamilton, Ont., July 27 (CP).— Albert Harter, 18, was knocked down by a bicycle which he collided last night with a car police said he was driving by Carl Carpenter. The boy was pinned under the front wheels of the car and it had to be lifted se he could be removed. He was taken to hospital and physicians said no bones were broken. He returned home later.

FIRST STRAY HORSE IMPOUNDED IN 11 YEARS

Ridgway, Ont., July 27 (CP)— Kenneth E. Edmonds impounded a stray horse for the first time in 11 years when he boarded Bertie Township Clerk 11 years ago. He went back to a by-law dated 1927 to find the owner of the animal, Mack Carter, had to pay a charge of 25 cents for the impounding, for receiving the animal, 25 cents a day for feed and water and 50 cents for releasing the animal.

84-YEAR-OLD MAN PAYS FOR FLYING RIDE WITH PIG

Flint, Mich., July 27 (CP) — Henry Minsphe, 84-year-old farmer, waited to celebrate his birthday with an airplane ride but had no funds so he paid Officers Guth, manager of Whiyville Airport, a pig for a ride. Guth "took him up."

CAT-KILLER POLICE DOG MOTHERS KITTEN

Montreal, July 27 (CP)—Teddy, two-year-old police dog known throughout her neighborhood here as the cat-killer, has undertaken the motherhood of a kitten to replace a beating for pups she twice has been unable to bear. The kitten likes it.

PREACHERS ABBREVIATIONS

Atlanta, Ga., July 27 (AP)— When Principal W. Heinz Costa of Emory University addressed the Sixth Congress of the Baptist World Alliance, reporters were handed a mimeographed sheet. Costa explained "an" meant "and," "b" meant "brother," "sr" meant "senior," "ex" meant "extra," Baptist witness, "wi" New Testament, "ot" Old Testament, "Christ" was the reason. He broke the speech on the backs of sheets of the mimeographed sermon.

READY FOR AN. WEATHER, EVEN SUMMER

Galt, Ont., July 27 (CP)—It has been a cool summer here, Charlie Miller, 68-year-old transient. He will be ready for it. With the sun pouring it on at 95 degrees, Miller sat on the Galt post-office steps and drew down his big rubber boots. He also wore heavy sweater and coat and salt coat—and carried an overcoat over his arm.

BURGLAR HIDES IN WINDOW

Pittsburgh, July 27 (AP)—The burglar who broke in here was no dummy—even if he did pose as one. Police found inside through the store and were about to go out there search when they spotted him "hiding" in a display window.

TRENTON QUINTE SUN ACQUIRES NEW OWNER

It was announced today that the Trenton Quinte Sun has this week changed ownership, Mr. J. S. Cowan has, said the weekly paper on May 5. J. McMaster of Toronto, well-known to the printing trade, but McMaster will take over this week.

TRENT RIVER YIELDS RECORD BLACK BASS

Fishing in the Trent River about one mile west of Hastings this week Edward Baumann of Cleveland, O., landed a six and one-half pound large-mouth black bass, the largest believed caught in that section this year. The fish measured 20 inches in length and 16 inches in girth.

BAY WATER LEVEL ONE HALF INCH LOWER

Water levels of the Bay of Quinte today stood one-half inch higher than the normal depth one year ago today, it was revealed by a check of the Dominion water level book. The present season has been one of comparatively high water and all seven depths of 14 feet 6 registered at the dock end and turning basin at the west side of the pier.

SUGGEST THREE SHIFTS CITY WORKS JOBS

Larger city works jobs on streets where traffic tieups or slowing up is apt to occur while excavation of the roadway is performed should be carried out in the three 8-hour shifts in the opinion of one Front Street manufacturer who has made this suggestion in a letter to the department of public works.

While practically all hours to the work now being carried on in Upper Front Street are considered safe, the afternoon traffic slowing up noon and evening traffic slowing up is said to have occurred while work de is being completed and that at present while plenty of labor is available, this and other work of a similar nature could be more speedily finished in the three shifts.

MAYOR BONE LEAVES ON NEW YORK TRIP

Mayor Bone left the city today for New York, travelling by motor, accompanied by his sister, Miss Bone, Wm. Marr, of Glasgow, Scotland, who has been visiting friends and relatives in Canada and the United States. They will travel by way of the Adirondacks and by the Vorld's Fair and return to New York City by way of the White Mountain route through New Hampshire. Mrs. Marr will sail from New York to her Glasgow home at the completion of the trip.

PICTON TEACHER GOES TO CAMPBELLFORD

Albert Case, Picton, has been engaged by the Vacancy Board of the Campbellford Public School staff created by the resignation of Mrs. J. Staples. The appointment has been received by the Board for the position. Mr. Case will be paid a salary of $725 yearly.

TRAFFIC CASES TO BE HEARD FIRST

Pursuant to instructions from Attorney General Conant's Toronto office, all traffic cases to be heard in Ontario police courts will hold precedent over other cases, Magistrate R. J. Deacon, K.C., announced in County Police Court here today.

"No doubt this procedure was suggested as the motorcycle patrolmen would not have to loiter about the court house awaiting the trial of their cases. The Attorney General desires the traffic officers be on their beats instead of having to wait around our courts," suggested Crown Attorney R. G. Donovan, K.C. when commenting upon the new procedure this morning.

Immediately today's court opened with Worship called for the disposal of traffic cases which resulted in Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine introducing 14 cases, all being for minor offences such as speeding, careless driving and other minor violations. The 14 cases were disposed of rapidly and the traffic officer sent back on his beat in a short time.

PELT CLASSIFIED AS DOMESTIC DOG

Classified by government experts as a species of common dog, a short haired pelt taken from one of two animals shot by George Hailstone, resident of Tudor Township, was returned to the owner today as being ineligible for the government's wolf bounty of fifteen dollars.

The two animals were found by Hailstone to be molesting sheep in his vicinity. He shot one, the pelt missed the other.

Treasurer James Haggerty of Hastings County forwarded the pelt to Toronto for identification with the above mentioned results.

EMPHATIC DENIAL GIVEN REPORT

Emphatic denial to reports that there is a shortage of skilled labor in the city, said to have emanated from his office, was made today by Employment Office Superintendent William Ross.

"No such statement came from this office," he said, "in fact conditions are very much to the contrary. We have plenty of carpenters, masons, painters and other skilled artisans on registration here, ready to go to work".

Since Mr. Ross has besieged his office, Mr. Ross added, demanding to know the origin of the report, after learning that the statement was said to have come from that source.

LOCAL BOAT SOLVES GREAT LAKES MYSTERY

The little, grey Grenville, government lighthouse tender and busy sister ship to a regular passenger visitor to the local port is now the centre or interest on the Great Lakes.

The compact little steamer has been the cause of mystery which has kept sailors guessing for three years by identifying wreckage lying on the bottom of Lake Erie as that of the ill-fated Aycliffe Hall which sank in collision with a lake freighter.

When the Grenville steamed into Port Burwell yesterday she carried with her the solution of the vessel's disappearance. H. E. Foland, diver on the Grenville, identified the hulk. The Aycliffe Hall is under fifty feet of water, and market authorities have declared it a practicable to refloat and recondition her.

C. D. S. EMPLOYEES HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC

Blue waters of Lake Ontario and the sandy shores and shaded groves of the Sandbanks provided an ideal setting for the annual picnic of the Canadian Department Store staff of the city yesterday. Fifty-two employees and friends made up the gathering and during the day the usual games of softball, races and other features were held. Swimming was also a attraction and the hazy fun-filled day was ended by a dance in the pavilion.

Canoeists From Upper Montclair, N. J., Pay City Visit

Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Bertuche of Upper Montclair, N.J., who left Oswego, N.Y., on July 8th., arrived today afternoon in Belleville. They are making the trip entirely by water in a 12 foot canvas canoe. The canoe, which has an 18 inch beam and draws only 3 inches, is equipped with two double paddles, a small sail and an outboard motor. They are touring and carrying a message of goodwill from the mayor of Kingston, Ont., left yesterday for Trenton, Ont., by island to enter the Trent Canal and travel to Peterborough.

PARCHED FIELDS WELCOMED RAIN

Rain Prevalent Only a Short Distance From This City

Parched pasture fields of the rural districts brown sere lawns of the city that have not had the benefits of life-giving water from the Consolidated hose; dry gardens and woods, whose leaves were turning up from lack of moisture, welcomed the heavy downpour of rain that fell on the district shortly after six o'clock today.

But old Jupiter Pluvius was in a fickle state of mind. He sent down the life-giving moisture in more favored parts of the district while in others a short distance away got "nary a drop."

The rain fell more or less steadily on the city for a period of fifteen minutes. In Redmerville and the immediate surrounding points of water lay in the roadways. Five miles south on the Prince Edward County village no rain fell. Wooler and its district were likewise denied the benefits of the slight fall. No rain at all fell there, a city motorist, vendor from that district said this morning.

"The district immediately north of the city was benefited but a few miles further north still suffered from the heat wave.

"It wasn't much" a Pusboro farmer stated today," and within a few hours you won't know that any rain fell. However, it was welcome despite the fact that little benefit will be derived."

Forest Ranger Crosbie Warns Berry Pickers and Public Against Fire Peril in Dry Woods

District Forest Ranger H. W. Crosbie, of the Tweed Forestry station has issued warning to the general public contemplating trips through the northern section of the county, and Algonquin-Park district, and blue and huckleberry pickers in particular to be careful of fires and pipes and cigarettes, until the present fire threat in the dry woods is ended.

Careless blueberry pickers and motorists have been responsible for the innumerable fires that have occurred lately in Eastern Ontario district, fires which alert rangers have nipped before gained conflagrations ensued. At least twenty-five small bush fires have been reported through the northern sections of Peterborough, Hastings, Lennox-Addington and northern section during the past few days.

But the grim threat of fire still lingers and extra precautions are being taken by the rangers.

Magistrate J. J. Kelly of Northbrook has reported that during a trip through the northern section he observed three fires in as many locations. "There is a haze of smoke over everything, and we need rain in the north badly," he reported.

Expects to Salvage 50,000 Bricks

Demolition of the roof of the Salvation Army Citadel, Pinnacle Street, entered its initial phase today with workmen under the direction of Contractor Harry Parry removing brick and sliding them conveniently placed chutes to waiting trucks below.

The brick generally is in good condition, it was stated, as is the mortar, testifying to the excellent workmanship of the craftsmen of a half-century ago.

Heavy cement facgs that held the bricks in place slowed work to some extent today, Mr. Parry stated, but completion of the work of demolition is expected to take place within the next two weeks.

Never Knew So Noisy A Place at Night As Belleville

So Says Tourist—Mayor Bone Hears Many Complaints

Low awnings and the tinny blare of music machines and phonographs are responsible for much of among the latest complaints received at the Mayoralty office, complaints which have been numerously registered by citizens and visitors alike.

"I've never heard such a noisy place as Belleville at night," one visiting tourist who visited attempted to woo sleep in a city hotel complained this week. "What with trucks backfiring and banging and restaurant phonographs blaring long after midnight, it's a wonder the apartment dwellers get to sleep at all."

Awnings suspended over city sidewalks must be, according to regulations at least six feet above the concrete, but along Front Street many of them do not conform to this height, declared Mayor Bone. "It's six feet tall, but I bump my head on a lot of them when walking. It's getting to be a habit of taller people, this dodging along under awnings. This latter matter has been referred to the office of the city engineer for action.

HEAVY MIDWEEK MARKET SEEN

Raspberries Offered in Crate-Lots at Seven Cents Per Box

Another heavy midweek offering of farm and garden produce was displayed this morning in addition to raspberries, despite the continued drought, establishing themselves as the main attraction.

Prices showed no inclination to change from Tuesday quotations, the latter were offered at seven cents per box.

Red and white currants were quoted at ten cents the box with "stacks" offered at two for twenty-five cents. Gooseberries were steady at four boxes for twenty-five cents, cherries in six quart basket lots sold at from sixty to eighty cents per basket, depending on quality.

Potato prices were steady with cobblers ranging from twenty-five thirty and thirty-five cents the peck. New beets, carrots, onions and radishes were offered at twenty-five cents.

Prices were steady at twenty-four and twenty-five cents the dozen for good quality "A's," Whitefish sold at four pounds for twenty-five cents, one offering selling at seventeen and twenty cents the pound. Perch and bullheads were offered at three pounds for twenty-five cents.

Tweed Team Wins Over Trenton 15-4

Tweed, July 27 (Special)—Tweed Softball team handed a team from Trenton a 15 to 4 defeat in the Provincial Park on Wednesday evening. Davidson on the mound for the locals was in rare form, striking out twelve and limiting the visitors to seven scattered hits. Bells scored two of his team's runs, G. Bellis and Murray scored the others, spread over four innings.

The locals scored in every inning but the fifth. J. Wagar, Lindsay, Mervel and Mrs. G. Bellis collected twelve hits equally divided among them. Merne besides playing a bang-up game at third scored three times. Everyone of the locals hit safely early Glendale failed to cross the plate at least once.

Tweed—J. Wagar, Langevin, Lindsay, Orr, Thompson, Davidson, Merne, Sinclair, G. Wagar.

Trenton—Mrs. G. Bellis, C. Bellis, C. Urch, G. Bellis, H. Day, J. McDonald, K. Bellis, I. Murray.

Men Regaining Old Strongholds, Their Barber Shops

Girl Gives One Reason Why Fewer Women In Men's Tonsorial Rooms

Mere man, whose exclusive strongholds have been stormed and captured by the fair sex, is coming back for himself one of the most popular institutions of the old time barber shop.

A girl seeker, beside men on the polished barber chair, a compound sight in recent years, has now become a common one. Here the good old days when those waiting could browse in the latest copy of magazines, tell a good story, and bask in the reflected glory of huge fish caught—"not as big as yours, but nearly so. But will they be the same?

The reason for the exodus of the fair sex from the men's barber shops is a simple one The American Industrial Standards Act has fixed the price of hair cutting at 35 cents instead of the old handier price of 25 cents.

Women, it is claimed, have rebelled against the extra quarter charge. They will cheerfully pay five dollars for a permanent wave or formal hair do, but 35 cents for a trim or to have a little fuzz clipped from the nape of the neck has almost resulted in a boycott of the men's barber shops. It was explained by one local barber today.

According to the city officials' stenographer of the city executive offices, and a former regular patron of her favorite barber shop:

—Why should I pay 35 cents to have my hair bobbed shortened around the edges and the neck trimmed? It it gets a little straggly my mother does 'a neat job in about five minutes. If she's busy I just pester my big brother, and he has become just as good at it as any barber. p

Obituary

MISS FERNIA H. MULLETT

The death occurred last evening in Belleville General Hospital of Miss Fernia H. Mullett, 104 Dundas Street East, after a lengthy illness. Born in Barrie, Miss Mullett was the daughter of Mrs. George R. Mullett, and the late G. R. Mullett. She resided for some time in Lindsay and lived in Belleville for the past three years. A member of the teaching profession the late Miss Mullett for the past year was on the staff of Kirkfield High School. She was an ardent Bible student.

Left to mour her passing are her mother, Mrs. George R. Mullett, one sister, Mrs. Everett Neil, 200 Dundas Street, three brothers, Fred Mullett, Pueblo, Colorado; Mr. George Mullett, Regina, and Reginald Mullett, Marietta, Ohio.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this issue.

MRS. A. E. FOLLWELL

The grandchildren of the late Mrs. Amy Elizabeth Mullett, who passed away at her home, 61 Grier Street, Wednesday morning, include: Mrs. H. Pollett of Belleville; Ellen Betty, Sidney and George Duffield, Belleville, and Billy Follwell of Port Erie North.

Capitol Theatre Plans to Start Foto-Nite Feature

Fifty-three Belleville girls started out this morning in search of the names of 5,000 of Belleville citizens over the age of 16 who will be photographed. The Capitol Theatre has announced the starting of a new weekly feature called "Foto-Nite" and the registration of Belleville citizens is being made in connection with this attraction.

Mr. Pete Barnes representing Foto-Nite Corporation, originating in the United States was in town this morning with officials of the Hanselaire Corporation to get things under way. The girls were thrilled to hear that Mr. Barnes is a personal friend of Gene Autry's and only a few days ago played at his ranch for several days. As Gene Autry is Belleville's No. 1 cowboy screen hero the girls readily made friends with Mr. Barnes.

"Foto-Nite" will be a weekly feature at the Capitol Theatre every Wednesday night starting Wednesday of next week. On being questioned about "Foto-Nite" Mr. Barnes smiled and suggested that we come down Wednesday night and enjoy the fun and hear all about it then. He promised some fun and also dropped the hint that a considerable sum of money will be involved. He also added that part of the proceedings would take the form of amateur acts, so anybody with any talent of any kind should get in touch with the manager of the Capitol theatre without delay. Mr. Barnes himself will be acting as Master of ceremonies next Wednesday night so we suggest that anyone who thinks he has a real Texas accent should be on hand at the first round of Gene Autry's in his capacity as M.C.

Forest Fires Not Serious In This District

Tweed—(Special)—Although the continued dry weather of the past month has made the fire hazard high in Tweed forest district, extensive fires, as have occurred in fires, according to Chief Forester H. W. Crosbie, Tweed, the present twenty-five fires have broken out but have been kept under control with small areas destroyed.

Most of the fires have been caused by berry pickers through campfires and carelessness with cigarets and matches. Few of this class if any, realize their responsibility as citizens and refrain to see the value of the timber resources of their country. Eight of the fires were due to lightning, all breaking out during a severe electrical storm of July 9th.

Altogether, less than forty acres was destroyed in this period, the largest fire burning ten acres. The remaining fires averaging slightly more than one acre each. A thoroughly up-to-date system of detection and control was evolved by Forester Crosbie has made possible this splendid record.

DISPUTE REPORTED AT RESTAURANT

Shortly after midnight last night Constables Taylor and Thomson rushed to the Globe Cafe where it was reported some trouble was in progress. Upon the arrival of the law enforcing agencies the officers found it is said, several Chinese disputing over the day's financial receipts.

One Chinese displayed a much discolored optic, while still another carried facial scratches. Upon questioning by the police peace negotiations were entered upon and the troubled waters

BY SUBSTRATOSPHERE

News entirely different from the run of foreign reports, which heavily laden with international politics, was published throughout the world that Britain will have in commission by next year three land planes flying at the rate of 240 to 275 miles an hour through the substratosphere over the Atlantic.

Breakfast in Canada, dinner in England, see a play and then back to Canada.

Or go to bed in Canada and awake in England.

There is a giant race of the nations for supremacy of the air. War armaments may have helped to speed up and in some other ways may have inclined to retarding the development, but all nations see that a good percentage of trade will take the airlines. Britain has been working on her new planes for more than a year. That shows she thinks of development of the airways.

Britain is going to pioneer the substratosphere—something unknown to man a little while ago. Now everyone is speaking of it.

Britain seemingly has a start on the rest of the world in the attainment of speed by use of the higher rarer atmosphere. She knows the value of trade.

MARS AGLOWING

Today Mars, the red planet, named for the heathen god of war, is nearest to the earth, a little over thirty-six thousand miles. Nightly it has hung like a huge reddish lantern, gleaming in the southern sky and has been visible for many weeks. It is fifteen years since the skyey visitant was so near and it will be seventeen years hence before the Martial visitor pulls in as close a resemblance and returns to its present brightness.

Mars as the red "star" (really a planet) is of the same type of birth as Mother Earth and has always been looked upon by man with wonder because its glow is so remarkable. At its greatest redness as shown recently it looks like a double star, part very red and part less red.

Heathens and cultured ancient Romans looked upon this planet. Many through the ages have said its redness signified war and blood and that it boded death to millions of men and women. Modern man cannot adopt this view. It cannot be true unless there are physical forces at work unknown to man and science, but give the astrologers a chance and they would declare it a messenger of ill-omen.

In the early months ago that a drama on the air was so realistically presented that there were tens of thousands of persons who gathered the belief that inhabitants of Mars had landed in the Eastern United States and were fighting the humans on earth with deadly weapons. Now we have the planet itself a mere thirty-six million miles away from the slater earth and we are not afraid of collision, of landing of Martians or of an immediate outbreak of war. No one has even considered sending an earth expedition to Mars.

Scientists are trying to find what is the type of life that is possible on Mars.

Some say that conditions on Mars may be like those on earth. For life to exist there at all there would have to be probably somewhat similar conditions.

But there seems a body of view if there is life on this seemingly fiery visitor it has not taken the line of development of that of earth. Earth's conditions have given rise to developments of what are to earth natural developments of immaterial things and to life represented by vegetation and breathing things.

Man has learned much of the solar system. He may yet come to know definitely what has been the evolution of Mars.

Tradition and fiction have found interesting the red planet. Some think that Martian visitors may have been on earth in Eastern Asia as huge mounds have been found, built some think, by creatures of other stature than that of earthly man. Some hold that these visitors came to earth and left their marks in the days of the floods. But science does not agree.

With Mars now beginning to move away from earth the problem of Mars will not cease attract. Some will cling to such an idea that there may be creatures on the red "star" and that it is of an entirely different life than what we know of. But science, the which has absolutely ruled, will continue its studies and may learn something. Meanwhile the astrologer and the believer in astrology will pin their faith and some others' faith to the planet.

The everyday type of men takes a sober view of Mars, wonderful as may be the revelation which science will bring. But such refuses to accept the view of Mars as an omen of war, or give the "star" credit for influencing men's lives.

ASPIRATION

If I could give a helping hand to those
Who wander through this weary world of stress,
Give cheer each day, or to a child a rose;
A lover's message or a warm caress,
Then I would feel that I had done my part
To feed the courage of some hungry soul;
For well I know that I with fainting heart
Strive timidly to reach a shining goal.

We each have gifts that we could share
With others;
A verse, a lilting song, a charming book
That brings to one a world of phantasy,
And there perhaps the happy hours recall
Where once we sought a quiet hidden nook.

And lived awhile in childish ecstacy.
—Katherine Gunn Dame, in Montreal Star.

PHILEAS FOGG WENT ROUND THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS, on paper, as recorded by Jules Verne, that sensational writer with the extravagant ideas which never could come true. Around the World in Eighty Days was just another phantasy conjured by a disturbed brain—but "Nellie Bly", sent by Joseph Pulitzer for the New York World to knock the spots off Phileas Fogg's pseudo record, did the trick in seventy-two days. Since then the record has been constantly lowered. "Bud" Ekins, for the New York World Telegraph went round the world by commercial airline in 18½ days in 1936. Last month a wealthy widow Clara Adams, started around the world, taking passage on the Dixie Clipper, Pan-American airliner, from New York city. She was back again in sixteen days, 19 hours, 4 minutes, after having flown all the way. Total mileage 25,000; cost $2,500—only ten cents per mile.

"WHERESOEVER I AM CONVINCED FROM THE WITHIN that my personal activities will be more contributive in the end to bringing a abolition of segregation and discrimination and establishing righteousness according to the Constitution and its amendments I am glad to be represented in the acts of promoting truth and integrity according to the Declaration of Independence. If a final decision is reached please wire me . . . . . Peace. REV. M.J. DIVINE, BETTER KNOWN AS FATHER DIVINE."

Thus a cloud no bigger than a negro preacher has begun to hover over Newport, the swanky summer colony of the Yankee millionaires.

Fear is about because the owner of a castle sought to commercialize her property and applied for a liquor license. She was refused, whereupon she offered the property to "Father" Divine for a song for his dusky angels. The telegram she sent "Father" Divine read:

NEWPORT IS SEETHING IN CORRUPTION AND POLITICS. I OWN A CASTLE. KINDLY ADVISE ME WHEN YOU CAN COME.

"Father" Divine explained to his "angels":

THE ATTEMPT OF A SOCIETY LADY IN NEWPORT TO BECOME WIZE THE MAJESTY OF GOD HAS RESULTED IN UNPREMEDIATED CONSTERNATION GROWING OUT OF PREJUDICE AND BIGOTRY. I COME TO PUT A CURB TO SUCH.

A lien has been placed on the property in the hope of preventing the transfer, but Father Divine says he has taken boatload of his "angels" to Newport to inspect the property, which he claims to have purchased and placed in escow until legal difficulties are settled.

Miss L. Judd has returned to her home in Stirling after visiting her sister, Mrs. R. S. Praieck, Moira Street West.

The Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church, is spending a few holidays in camp on an island in the Ottawa river.

Miss Rosie Meagher has returned to her home in Montreal after visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Meagher in this city.

The camp meeting at Oak Lake was opened yesterday with large attendance. Among the following trustees are in charge of the camp: President, J. A. Lott; Vice President, G. W. Woodley; Secretary, G. V. Ketcheson; Treasury, C. J. Massey; D. A. Thrasher, G. A. Sine, S. W. Lloyd, Mark Holden, George A. Ketcheson, R. N. Bird, F. W. Allen, J. F. Rikley and William Tufts. Programme Committee: Bert L. Sharpe, Rev. J. S. McMullen, Nelson Parliament, M.P.P., R. N. Bird and J. F. Rikley. The Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church, in Canada, was the special preacher at the opening.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Osborne of Calgary, Alberta, formerly of Belleville, are visiting in this city.

Mrs. F. S. Armistead of Vancouver, B. C., formerly of Stirling, is the guest of Mrs. H. F. Forward in this city.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., is spending a vacation at West Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Smith have returned to their home in Belleville, Ont., after visiting friends here.

A large frame building situated on the north city limits and owned by Ald. Orman, was destroyed by fire last night.

The making of the last pavement on the north span at Holloway Street Methodist Church was celebrated on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Williams are spending some time at the 1000 Islands.

Messrs. Tickell and Sons, who have occupied the premises on the corner of Pounder and Pinnacle Streets as their furniture factory, for the past 25 years, have decided to close down. As yet they have not decided whether the machinery will remain here or removed elsewhere. They will offer their furniture business which was established 41 years ago.

The outing of the employees of the Ritchie Company which took place yesterday at U. Grove's Point was most enjoyable. The Steamer William Booth conveyed the party down the bay. Mr. W. H. Gordon, a member of the firm was present and the staff expressed to him their appreciation for the pleasant holiday.

Mr. J. Bird and family and family will leave tomorrow to spend some time at the Sandbanks.

St. John's Anglican Church picnic to Big Island yesterday was a great success. The steamer Nellie Cuthbert was well loaded with the children, their parents and teachers.

The party who took a black vaise, not their own, from the Belleville station platform will be advised to return it to the Intelligencer office at once, as they are known.

At present there are eight patients in the hospital and eleven inmates at the home.

The Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent of the Methodist, will preach at Bethany Street Methodist Church on Sunday morning next.

Fishing is now excellent in the river near Foxboro. Within a couple of hours yesterday Mr. Jas. Mitchell and Constable caught a maskinonge which weighed 15 pounds, three pickerel and two bass.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police

In 1920 the name was changed to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on the amalgamation of the Royal North West Mounted Police and the then Dominion Police force. The R.C.M.P. succeeded the only Federal Police Force in Canada, and were entrusted with the enforcement of all Federal Statutes. Under the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act, they are to be employed on provincial and municipal police work by agreement with the Provinces concerned. Their headquarters were moved to Ottawa.

The accommodations of the R.C.M.P. since the War have lived up to the high standards established in the half-century before. From 1922 onwards important detachments were established and some of the Force's most important exploratory work was made in the Eastern Arctic. Its powers were gradually extended, and at present it enforces Federal Laws throughout the whole Dominion, the Criminal Code and Provincial Statutes as well in six of the nine Provinces, has a Preventive Service to prevent smuggling of arms, liquor, etc., is the sole Federal Force in the Northern Territories and operates in the Yukon Territory. The original 300 men has grown to over 3,500, and horses have mostly given way to motor cars and aeroplanes. It now have four airplanes, 403 motor cars, 434 dogs and 200 horses. We have also started the Academies of reserve force which will probably be used for the first time during the Royal visit. This we hope to enlarge gradually along the lines of Sandhurst itself.

Like all other police forces throughout the world, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police have raised their educational standards during recent years. Candidates must be between the ages of 20 and 40 years, and only those placed in the higher categories are selected for service. Their training for not less than six months is now essential. Modern methods of detection, and the use of modern transport; to cope with them and enjoy the confidence of the public in the prevention and detection of crime our men have to be specially trained. Only the results on enlistment are sent to the training depot at Regina, where a course of training is full and up-to-date. It is now possible to give lectures to the R.C.M.P. personnel from other police forces.

The R. C. M. Police at Regina have their own scientific laboratory, and a second near Ottwa is projected. We still have a mounted section and have no intention of discussing the horse entirely.

Finally the future holds even greater reconsolidities for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. A pardonable pride that I am able to record that in the Provinces where the R. C. M. Police are enforcing provincial laws in the rural districts we are now receiving numerous request to take over the policing of towns and municipalities. This appears to be one of the future tendencies and will receive our careful attention.

It is one of the duties of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to arrange with city and other police forces in Canada the necessary police protection to be afforded to Their Majesties during their visit. I have, therefore, been interviewed by many representatives of newspapers concerning the history of the Force, and most of those who represent periodicals outside Canada find it difficult to realize that I find it still necessary to explain that the motto of the Force is Maintiens le Droit, and not "Get your man" as some fictional writers would have it.—Col. S. T. Wood, Commissioner R.C.M.P. in London Canada Numbers.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Overeating and Overexercising May Cause Fatal Heart Attacks

A well known heart specialist, Dr. John Ollis, Toronto, told the members of the medical profession that overeating with coronary thrombosis (blood clot blocking a vessel supplying the heart) often elicit in their sleep and not immediately following strenuous exertion or the eating of a large meal. By this he did not imply that severe exertion or a large meal did not bring on the attack, but that the attack did not always immediately follow severe exercise or heavy eating.

More recently, Dr. J. C. Paterson, Regina, Saskatchewan, points out in the Journal of the American Medical Association that it has been the common belief that overexertion or strenuous exercise of less has a direct bearing on the fatal attack of coronary thrombosis, whereas his investigations while overexertion and emotional distress associated with it, may predispose with their great blood pressure and produce the coronary thrombosis, they do not "immediately" cause attacks.

From his studies of these cases after death, Dr. Paterson is of opinion that the clot from the bleeding of torn bloodvessels forms gradually, possibly taking several days before it completely obstructs the blood vessel.

It can be understood, then, why the patient is put at complete rest for four to six weeks after an attack of coronary thrombosis. Moving quickly about, or even eating a very little work is put upon the heart, the clot gets a chance to be partially absorbed and so gradually becomes drawn into the blood it able to flow into the heart muscle. This increase of its blood supply enables the heart muscle to do more work and the patient is enabled to get up and about again. I believe that many deaths from coronary thrombosis and attacks of coronary thrombosis have not overexerted himself or eaten a large meal for a few days previous to his attack, we are apt to think that overexertion has not suppressed to him their appreciation for the pleasant holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and family will leave tomorrow to spend some time at the Sandbanks.

ADVICE TO PREACHERS

All churchgoers at some time encounter the preacher who grows red and raises his voice until he seems about to lift to a whisper. Why some ministers want to dramatize this part of their work we do not know. If they would deliver them in an easy, conversational tone the more emphasis here and there, it would be much more effective. Nevertheless, this trying to the nerves. Yet these ministers cast aside the very means which would serve the service is over and become what might be no longer under the spell into which they cast themselves when in the pulpit.

The ordinary churchgoer likes his minister to be himself when he is in the pulpit. He does not want—and there is no necessity for—a different personality from that of him as if they were something very disagreeable to endure.

We have also met a few preachers who grinned and joked when they were in the pulpit. Humor is a good thing in its proper place, but we see if their stories made a hit. That type of preacher is objectionable to normal to normal people—and services should be normal, too.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

THE PARSON'S PAY

Our favorite parson, whose long age told us of the unbelievably high appreciative bridegroom who, in lieu of cash, presented him with a check. But the rectory gas meter so it wouldn't register, has a new way of showing his appreciation of a service of a fellow minister to the souls of a fellow-parishioners.

A bright young parishioner, who had been christened and confirmed by the parson, was married and after the ceremony the best man presented the bridegroom handed the clergyman an envelope. The envelope was sealed, but it could be bounced right back.

"Look here!" said the rector on the occasion after the honeymoon when it was feasible to bounce cheques. "You mustn't do not the way to start out in life. You shouldn't give me cheques. I don't want cheques if you haven't the money in the bank."

The bridegroom asked the bridegroom, wide-eyed. "Let me get it.. I gave him the cash. Isn't that legal tare! That's the best man's signature. I gave him the cash in cash to pay you."—Printed Word.

INGENIOUS WAITER

Frank Noel, Associated Press photographer of the Albany, N.Y., bureau who went with the Royal Family Friday and Saturday tells another dish. In a small Canadian town, he found a waiter who was a waiter. He says he'll hire some day.

After Frank ordered a steak the waiter asked: "What'll it be? Good and Faithful Servant or Day in Bed?"

Frank pondered, then asked an explanation.

"Well done," said the waiter, "or what is so rare?"—Editor and Publisher.

Gentlemen of the Prize Ring

Premier Hepburn has had many visitors who have gained distinction in various fields, chiefly public service, but Mr. Eugene Tunney is the only one who achieved distinction in the line which made his name a household word throughout the world a decade ago. Mr. Tunney not only won distinction, but gave distinguishing it when the old English "professors" called "the noble art of self-defence."

In the early days after James Figg won the first championship of England in 1727, thereby becoming the first heavyweight champion of the world because there was no boxing before else, the prize ring that as it was then called, had many kings and lords and dukes of society as patrons. Lord Byron, beside being a noted swimmer, was also a skilful pugilist, his tutor being Jack Jones noted Gentleman Jackson who became champion when he defeated the Jerish fighter, Mendoza. The pugilists of those days were not all prizefighters, many were hangers-on around public-house, as so many people appear to think, for another champion, John Gully, became a member of Parliament. However the malpractices brought the ring into disrepute and it was not until the advent of pugilistic clubs and the drafting of rules by the Marquis of Queensbury, that boxing became more of a scientific sport.

The most successful boxers of modern times, with a few exceptions, have been Americans, the first being, beginning with Jim Corbett, who was a bank clerk. Bugene Tunney is of the same type, with a fine physique and a fine intellect he entered the ring, won a world championship and then quit, leaving writers took the same attitude as Lord Byron's opponents that they do today regarding Joe Louis' and with that combination of mind and matter he not only defeated the "Master" but repeated it to prove his first win was no fluke. Dempsey and Louis have one thing in common. They could hammer their opponents down by sheer dynamic force, but when up against a man who could think quicker than they and beat them to it in both giving and taking they did not know what to do. The present generation of heavies is more brawny than brainy and that is why, as we said the other day, Louis is just a big frog in a little pool, our guess is the cool, calculating Gene would have had Joe in a fog after the first round. If he did in 1934. There is no doubt about who is, when the King is crowned in Westminster Abbey in May of 1937, the Duke of Gloucester, 4th son of the late King George and brother of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Kent is that order of seniority.

And if vacancies occurred before then, and while the present royal children are minors, their places could be taken by the Earl of MacDuff, 24-year-old son of Princess Arthur of Connaught, and by Lady Maud Carnegie, 46-year-old daughter of Princess Arthur of Connaught.

This plan, which was evolved by Sir John Simon when the late King George ascended the throne in 1936, is known as the Regency Act of State Council. There is no argument about who is who, when the King is crowned in May, 1937. The line of succession, as applied to adult members of the Royal Family, determines the Counsellors of State.)

—W. L. Clark in Windsor Star.

In Succession to the Throne

To deal with routine matters in Great Britain while King George was absent, the State Counsellors met. They were the Duke of Gloucester, the Duke of Kent, Princess Royal (Countess of Harewood) and Princess Arthur of Connaught.

The Duke of Gloucester takes part in the line of succession for the throne. He is fourth in line, but only if any one of them will be either a King or a Queen of the British Empire.

Princess Elizabeth is in line to succeed her father, King George VI. Next in line is Princess Margaret Rose, the younger daughter of King George. Then come both minors, neither sits on the State Council.

The Duke of Gloucester is third in line for the throne, as is the case with the younger son of King George. He is the senior member of the State Councillors.

The Duke of Gloucester has no children, as his younger brother, the Duke of Kent, is next in line of succession for the throne. In that event, he is the second senior member of the State Council.

The children of the Duke of Kent are minors, so the Princess Royal, who is "the Countess of Harewood, grande as the next adult in line of succession, although she would not succeed to the throne unless both His Majesty and Dukes of Gloucester and Kent had been exhausted. That is an extra, although she is the third member of the State Council.

Both of the Harewood children are minors. That leaves Princess Arthur of Connaught, widow of the son of the Duke of Connaught, as the fourth adult in the line of succession. She is actually the tenth in line.

Lord Lascelles, son of the Princess Mary, Duke of Kent, is the next to a Council of State formed after that, he will take the place of Princess Arthur of Connaught.

Princess Elizabeth will be 21 in 1947 and she will succeed. All Lord Lascelles, and Princess Margaret Rose will be 21 in 1951 and Princess Mary will be 54 in 1951.

After 1951, if King George is still living and the Duke of Gloucester's children are adult, and the Duke of Kent is living, the Duke of Gloucester would succeed then be Princess Elizabeth, Princess Margaret Rose, the daughter of Princess Arthur and the Duke of Kent in that order of seniority.

A SQUIRREL'S PROTEST

This is written under difficulties and provocation. I am being bullied and cursed and told to get out. A shrill little voice is shrieking in my ear words terrible enough which, to anyone with a sensitive nature like mine, is most distressing.

Of course the old squirrel has reason to be annoyed. We had this cottage to himself up to a few days ago and he resents us as intruders. Before we came he could scamper about the roof as he pleased and climb up and down the posts from and leap from there into the pine trees and eat his meals in peace and quietness, without vulgar interruption.

When he came this morning and sat down on a branch, cone in hand, he looked out in amazement at a great recumbent animal lying on a bed, watching him with unblinking eyes and munching away his breakfast. He dropped the pine cone and walked off with dignity and a fine show of unconcern, but like an old man who has been told to go indoors to move on.

Now he has taken up his position at a safe distance on the roof of the boat house and shouting at the top of his voice, telling everyone that he owns the place, that strangers are here, that their homes are no longer safe because the big brute from the city has "stuck" again.—Bruce Hutchinson in Victoria Times.

NEWSMAN'S LAMENT

Is it anything so amazing that an occasional split infinitive creeps into the columns of our newspapers, or that our writing from time to time isn't exactly what the college professors have in mind when they pronounce on our style? Most of us don't have time even to re-read the typewritten shee's we compose —I'd venture to say that I don't review more than one piece in a month a day, except to stick in a subhead, or change a word or two to suit the linotype operator. I'm not asking for anything to be done to me, I have the strongest lot of myself and my fellow-sufferers—I'm only asking for a little more tolerance. My point of all this is that "we're doing our best" and very often a good deal better than all things considered.—Detroit Quill.

A MODEL SPEECH

We heard a model political speech at Col. Drew's picnic at Orillia the other day, one which we commend to candidates as well as copy. The orator was a talented member of our political staff, and not identify beyond saying that she is the wife of a doctor who is not a politician. Throughout the whole of the main speeches were over and the candidates had retired, she climbed the stairs to discover what her voice would sound like over the air. And she was startled and thrilled by the startled picnickers in all corners of the house crying out encouragement. I thank you for your kind attention. Good afternoon.—Ex.

The name came down from the stand Colonel Drew congratulated upon his masterly speech technique she had stood just the right distance from the microphone, had modulated her voice perfectly. it was the briefly of her remarks, that made them so effective. And at that, she said quite as much as many times as she could have done.—Midland Free Press.

HUSBAND'S TRIBUTE

Addressing a Conservative women's conference, Premier Minister Mackenzie King said his wife: "She is the lady who knows all of my secrets but who finds them out. She gently corrects my faults, who never forgets to praise me, who remembers my friends and forgets and who, for now nearly thirty years, has been my friend and counsellor." This can certainly be characterized as a beautiful tribute. —(Brantford Expositor).

RUN DOWN BY BOAT

Smith's Falls, Ont., July 27 — (CP)—Lloyd Crawford was run down by an outboard motorboat while he was swimming in the Rideau River here yesterday and received painful back injuries.

He was first reported to police later he was the driver of the boat and that Crawford had jumped and had he been aware of the accident until he had heard about it.

REGATTA RUMBLINGS

If you susceptible gals happen to notice a broad-shouldered, handsome young giant, dressed in the white overall and life-saving equipment of the speedboat driver, while you are resting during the forthcoming regatta. You are gazing at youthful Don Forman, scion of a notably prominent Buffalo family and an entry in the rapidly-swelling list of the 225 cubic inch class.

For while Don may or may not have been born with that talented gifted with a prominent metal, in his mouth, he has been hanging around boats and water for the better, part of the twenty some years that he has been enjoying life.....He took to the water like the proverbial duckling before he shed his first feathers, and has been hanging around it ever since.

He is a likeable cuss, this handsome youngster, and is rated as being a sportsman of the first water, (no pun intended). It was only a few years ago that he took to speedboat racing, and as successful were his initial efforts that he went himself better and later last year decided to enter the 225 class.

Dav looked around for a suitable name for his sky-rapidlier, a century hull, powered with Lycoming power plant.....Like all sensible sportsmen and fellow citizens, he decided that stirring at the bottom was the best place.....And he accordingly decided on a name that likewise was emblematic of something young that while starting on the ground would upon maturity soar to the heights.

So, being an American and an ardent supporter of the flag with the Stars and Bars, he chose the name "Aguilla" just an old Spanish custom-made interpretation of "Eagle" Bird.

Anyway, the "Eagle Egg" was officially hatched and sent on its first flapping flight at Rockledge, Florida. Followed Miami and a few points and the Eagle was ready for a crack at the fast Canadian "two-tenners."

The fledgeling made good. It fairly flew to and at the crack Canadian boats, "Miss Quebec and" and "Shadow Jnr" in her first race north of the "border line without a gun", crossing the line in a flurry of tail-feather spray, the winner, in one of the greatest upsets (still no puns intended) in Canadian speedboat history.

That win was like growing mash to a chicken, to the proud young Eaglet. Dave decided there was beggy game for the hunting, and proceeded to bag his seasoned out with his first 225 cubic-incher. This beauty bears on her brilliantly varnished side the same name as her 219 predecessor.

She finished third in the Picton Regatta this year, when "Pops" Cooper and Bobby ate, sped across the line ahead of Don, but, as he says, that was that race. This affair at Massanga is another, and things are likely, quite likely to be different......"Aguila" has had her feathers ruffled.....her power plant tuned up and she is ready to go.

Dave is connected with the Bellair Airplane Company of Buffalo, and is not fooling around with strute, engines, ailerons, fuselages, etc., can be found during the quiet hours of Georgian Bay with his boats.

Dave is married.....Mrs. Dave is a beautiful blonde who always accompanies him on his regatta trips.....She is a staunch rooter for "Aguila" and follows the grass around the course with the aid of powerful binoculars.

Rotary Joe.

Stirling

Stirling—St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was filled to the doors on Sunday morning for the third in a series of union services in addition to the fine inspirational message given by the minister, Rev. W. H. V. Walker, music lovers of two churches were given an added treat by the presence of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Pypher and Miss Marjory Pypher prominent musical artists of Trenton, N.J. The trio are at present holidaying in Ontario and consented to assist in the service, Mrs. Pypher is organist in one of the major Methodist churches of Trenton, where her husband is soloist and Miss Marjory Pypher is an undergraduate at the famous Westminster School of Music and associated with the Juvenile Wesley minister choir. Presiding at the organ Mrs. Pypher displayed an enviable musical knowledge in her renditions of Arias from Mendelssohn's and Handel during her prelude, interlude and postlude and also played the accompaniment for her husband and daughter for their special numbers. Mr. Pypher offered two sacred solos in splendid fashion "His Eye is on the Sparrow" and "My Redeemer". Two unusually fine voices, combined in a special duet arrangement of "Just as I Am" and Miss Pypher displayed the results of careful training in her solo, piano solo given in faultless fashion.

Shed is Destroyed By Fire

Believed to have started from a small bonfire last Friday evening, a fire totally destroyed the small barn on the property of Miss Sarah Delaney, Front Street. An alarm was turned in and the local fire brigade under Chief R. H. Williams were playing water on the blazing building within a few minutes. Their efforts were confined to keeping the flames from reaching nearby houses rather than saving the building which was completely enveloped in flames before aid arrived. Included in the loss which was only partly covered by insurance was an eighteen foot skiff stored in the building which was the property of Mr. James Lagrow. Mr. Lagrow estimated the value of the boat at about seventy-five dollars.

Dr. and Mrs. G. H. Stobie and family have returned after a holiday at Westerton Lake.

Mr. Ross Lough underwent an operation at Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gimblett and Mrs. A. C. Rogers, Oshawa, are spending a week with relatives in Bellevigne.

Miss Mira J. McCreary and Mr. L. A. McCreary are guests at Picton Manor.

Misses Peggy McLean and Dorothy Wonnacott are spending the next ten days at C.G.I.T. Camp, Bean Bridge, Lake Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Pindall, Weston Street, have returned home after a three weeks' vacation in Western Canada.

A wedding of interest to many friends in this district took place in Trenton, on Monday, July 24, Rev. Canon McCrae officiating when Miss Imelda Gregor Wales of Toronto, formerly of Trenton, was married to Mr. George A. Kingston, barrister, of Toronto.

Mrs. Ted Haslip, 35 Station St., entertained at an enjoyable shower at her home last evening in honor of Mrs. Earl Moon. About twenty guests were present and Mrs. Moon received many gifts for which she graciously thanked her friends. Mother and daughter were assisted during the evening. Winners at euchre were Mrs. Doyle, first; Mrs. Moon, second, and Mrs. Brown, third, and Mrs. Haslip, consolation. Delicious refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallers, Catherine Street, spent the week-end at Bear Lake, the guests of Mrs. Gertrude MacMullen.

Fashion Flashes

In town for the day, and wearing a lovely twin print ensemble. The dress, of crepe, is in black with a lily of the valley design in green and white. The long-sleeved, full-length chiffon coat has a matching print.

Dance away the hours in a cool chiffon frock. A charming model in pale, smokey gray, its bodice trimmed with bands of tangerine yellow ribbon. Small clusters of the same ribbon are set at the left shoulder. The skirt is gathered and has a ruffled detail on the fitted jacket which is worn over a lacy or frilly white blouse. Suitable for fun, patent leather pumps and a black hat with white trim completes this luxurious looking, yet simple, costume.

Going big is the little afternoon frock. A new and lovely model of navy silk crepe, the skirt fashioned of many tiers or flounces, the tiered shoulder capelet matching the skirt.

A bright future is in store for ostrich trimmed hats. A new import is rose colored felt, a small high crowned turban with soft ostrich in two shades of rose twisted around its fold and finishing in back in tiny plums at the peak of the crown.

Better than ever is the verdict on the season's prints. A beauty shows a white gull and small sailing ship design in gray, white and light blue on navy silk.

"Boy Friend"

It must be awful to have a "crush" when you're busy dodging bullets, but that's the madcap William wayout. It makes for exciting, madcap entertainment in "Boy Friend", Jane Withers' newest 20th Century-Fox comedy, which is now on the Belle screen.

The "Boy Friend" is what Jane's latest is about. The Hollywood boy, then has her first "crush"—young George Ernest, erstwhile Roger of the Jones family. There, perhaps, is Jane's bane: you have to be able to go places and do things, as poor George finds out.

"What a girl friend for a boy friend to have!" he is moved to exclaim. "Give me a nice, quiet war!"

As the "kid sister" of a two-fisted young police officer whose exploits lead to the smashing of one of New York's most dangerous gangs, Jane not only discovers her first heart interest but also plunges into a series of dramatic situations that give her new opportunities to display her extraordinary acting ability.

In addition she introduces a brand new dance "The Socialite", which makes the Lambeth Walk seem sedate by comparison. Jane's switch to start a craze in the "teen-age world. With music and lyrics by Sidney Clare and Harry Akst, the dance was staged by Nicholas Castle and Geneva Sawyer and is beautifully put over by the versatile Miss Withers.

Arleen Whelan, Richard Bond, Douglas Fowler, Warren Hymer, Robert Kellard and Minor Watson are included in the cast of the film.

"Return of the Cisco Kid"

Here's another gay, sweet, mad gal-lant gun-fighter of them all! It's the Cisco Kid, O. Henry's immortal Robin Hood of the Rio Grande, brought to the screen of the Belle this week in a packed feature attraction by Warner Baxter and a stellar cast, in "The Return of the Cisco Kid". Back into old Arizona rides that gallant caballero and bullets and bullies and bills can't hold him and posses can't get him. A thousand senoritas sigh for him but the one girl he really wants, he can't have!

It's an entertaining piece of screen refreshment that 20th Century-Fox has given us in "The Return of the Cisco Kid". Herbert I. Leeds directed, under the supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck, with Lynn Bari, Cesar Romero, Henry Hull, Kane Richmond, C. Henry Gordon and Robert Barrat are featured in the cast.

An entirely all new Edition of the March of Time will be presented on the same program.

TEN REPORTED MISSING

London, July 27.—(AP)—Ten persons were reported missing and 24 were rescued today from the French tanker Sunik which caught fire after a collision with the Swedish steamship Grangesberg in fog in the English Channel, about 50 miles south of Plymouth.

The Grangesberg was damaged in the bow and her wireless was put out of action, but managed to make Falmouth under her own power. Lloyds reported the British steamship Dartford rescued 24 of the Sunik's crew.

The Sunik is a 5,000-ton vessel and the Grangesberg 4,575 tons.

Wooing Slenderness

By HELEN FOLLETT

YOUR TEACHER of pulchritude refers frequently to treatment of fatted calves because short-stout plumpkins are making such a fuss about them. Madame Fashion always has it in for the fat girl; when she insisted that hems almost to the knees, she must have had the idea that all feminine legs were bona fide perfect legs. Which, alas! happens not to be the case. If you would woo slenderness, get out and play hop scotch. Or stay indoors and play hop scotch. Hop on one foot until the calves are fatigued, then plug along on the other hoof. This practice will wear down adipose tissues. It will tighten up muscles that have gone slack. Use the tape lines before starting on this campaign for better anatomical proportions.

There are other means of combatting this trouble. Give a small rolling pin and use it, pressing firmly into the flesh. Pat cells and method of treatment continues long enough. After the rolling pick up the flesh and pinch it. Finish with a rub with moistened salt.

The trouble with the heavyweights is that excess poundage does not inspire an expenditure of energy. And it takes energy to burn up adipose tissue. A sad, sad story.

The best way to accomplish this is to go to a beauty shop where a special booth is reserved for each customer who is seeking complexion highlights. The patrons can dip into open containers, and in come to conclusions that will help them make the beauty grade.

Pinch the flesh on cheek until it glows. You will observe your natural blush tone then and can get acquainted with it. Lay the pigment on the edge of cheek, and note how near the synthetic rosiness comes to the natural glow.

When applying rouge, place it where to give the eyes radiance. Be canny with it. The heavy blobs do any more. Girls are supposed to look sweet and romantic but not sophisticated as in the past.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

A Kiss That Disrupted Two Families

Do you remember the case of Margaret Fair. She was the type of woman you meet every day, a contented wife, a good mother, a good housekeeper, a woman an event for her to go to the movies, have a day's shopping and a week's vacation, married three stars. All said and done, she is Mrs. Average American housewife.

Last New Year's Eve there was a distinguished guest, and Margaret kissed her brother-in-law. Then something happened. They discovered they always have been in love with each other. Margaret wrote me that wasn't the type of woman who could lie or cheat, so she told her husband about it, and all four of them love husband, the brother-in-law, his wife, and Margaret—talked the situation over.

Margaret and her brother-in-law want to get divorced, marry their spouses and eventually marry. The only thing that stands between Margaret has a baby, whom the brother-in-law is willing to adopt. We asked for letters on this case, and believe we got them. Here are a few.

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"I think that what Margaret in your column, I could not help having a sympathetic feeling of disgust and pity for such a woman. I think a woman who would do such things is a cheap, contemptible and at the same time force the child to accept a man as a stepfather, or as the case may be, is a pretty poor specimen.

"From her own account, Margaret is extremely selfish, with no regard for responsibilities or the promises she made in marriage.

Reader of Your Column."

"If It's Real Love"—

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"May I voice an opinion in the case of Margaret. She has a baby and, of course, must be given first consideration. Many good people think carnal knowledge should begather for the sake of the child. However, I differ with them, when they are unhappy as Margaret is. And if she is positive it is real love she has for her brother-in-law she will never be happy with her husband no matter how much she respects him.

"It's not in human nature to be happy living with one person and loving another, and the unhappiness of the parents will naturally be reflected in the life of a child.

Hopeless?

"What's to Be Kiss Anyway?"

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"In regard to Margaret's kissing the brother-in-law a question. Is he say women are such sentimental fools. "What is there in a kiss, anyway, and especially on New Year's Eve and from a brother-in-law, at least? It can't be forgot it."

"This woman has built up a romantic case for herself. The brother-in-law most likely thought nothing of the kiss, but the woman took it as the first step toward the man's wife, and made so much of it that now she's ready to break up a home out of a mole-hill."

"Better brace up, Margaret; you get this romantic foolishness before it's too late.

A Widow."

Cheese and Orange Blossoms

By ESSALYNN BACON

Time came for Percival Pugh to break the sad news to Fenella. "This is the last hop we'll hop together for a long time, darling Ones."

"For why?" Fenmalina raised her big baby-blue eyes in consternation.

"This ain't no Lenten season, you big foxy bluffer."

"Just the same, a man can't eat much less dance, without a job, yet. I am already hopping to pack."

Emmalina's pretty dimples turned inside out.

"But Percival, you wouldn't leave me. You are a celestial lover!"

"That's just where I get rubbed, my Sweet. You sure his your head is a nail to detect and drive. I'm dismounted thing to detec' about."

Emmalina felt a chill creep round brass.

"You could speak to Poppa, already."

"Yeah, you say that. But Emma—dancer knows not about the art of detectifs."

The trouble was, Pugh had set his heart on becoming a sleuth. But circumstances were against him when he was appointed temporary freight agent in Katinka Dell.

Little was happening in the Dell except one train a day, and occasionally a mixed emaxed.

To top it off, at the first dance Percival had fallen in love with pretty, plump Emmalina Googenschmeel; and she had fallen just as disastrously for him. But Poppa Googenschmeel set his number 10 down sternly.

"You must wait, little one," he told her. "I have not a kindly feelin' against young Pugh, but he goes out of a job so quick as Van Bibber comes back. Then what? And you so fine a appelite, yet."

"But Poppa, Percy is almost a great detectif."

A woeful pout swallowed Emmalina's dimply dimples.

"Yah-so? Well, wait until he sake two! Poppa advised, seeming to relent.

So peace was restored until the freight job drew to a close.

No other job was in your Pugh's beautiful his dwindling assets, he knew he must rustle employment pronto.

Meanwhile, Poppa worried over his only child.

At last he sought Momma's council. Then suddenly Poppa's countenance cleared.

"Now I got it, Momma," beamed. "You go with me and make dinner ready."

So Poppa Pugh and Emmalina hammock-spooning in the grape arbor.

He waited, listening.

"If you love me, Percival—"

"You know that, Sweet! But together we must face six months apart. Then back we go, a first class dick."

Right then Poppa would have lipped away, but for Emmalina's next words:

"Oh, no!" she wailed. "I won't got that thing what draws—" ain't

"What thing, Sweetie?" Pugh's voice broke.

"You know, that thing, like the earth to an apple, and the tide to the moon. That magnetic thing."

"Magnet! My darling, you sure got it. To prove it—"

Emmalina Poppa cried from the door. "You to I give yes—hold off" he commanded as Pugh threw his arms around Emmalina.

"Wait! only I give yes when Pugh is a partner in my cheese factory."

Percival's arms dropped. His nose tilted.

"Mr. Googenschmeel, it not a trudition to defend, at least a pride Pugh's got!"

Emmalina, deprived of his caresses, glared. "Cheese! Such for a job, Poppa, to gif to my big detectif!"

"No," cried Pugh. "My nose was not bore for such as cheese odors. Limberger! U-ugh!"

Momma Googenschmeel was on her fourth cup of Ladies Aid Java when the alarm sounded.

Emmalina—distraught.

At last Poppa faced Percival Pugh. "Young man, did you already steal mine darling?"

"Ach, how can you think so wicked?" Pugh moaned.

"Then," Poppa proclaimed, "it is to him."

"The key, please, mister," a factory hand interrupted. The key for the warehouse I cannot find."

Poppa fumbled through his pockets.

"The key—the key then ease!" persisted he pushed the lad. "Away dumb head! Enough cases are in this car! Then to Pugh: "Percival, is now to hire one good detectif!"

"Ach, how can you!" Pugh cried out. "I shall detec' my love in person."

For a moment Poppa hesitated. Then: "I gif one day. Find my child, hot, and you with pet you to marry together."

Pugh did search!

Only one glimmer he found.

The mammoth lunch Momma had set out for Emmalina and Poppa's supper had vanished.

"My love is off on a picnic," Pugh reasoned.

He strutted. He detected. He "dicked."

But after 24 hours' search, he had found nothing.

Poppa came upon the dejected lover moping on the back steps.

"How do I get a detectif," Poppa demanded.

"You taunt me!" Pugh tore his hair. "I is mad I go!"

Emmalina in her new partner to chese with me I would find mine daughter."

"Go! Gladly will I chees it the rest of my life!"

"Now am I happy," Poppa sighed. "Come, Mr. Pugh."

Silhouetted Poppa led Pugh toward the warehouse.

"Hmm!" Momma cried. "Some sobbings it is I hear!"

Emmalina has helped" Poppa strode along coolly, selecting a key on his ring. Sobbings was not in Emma-malina's throat. Here, Momma!

Momma let fall her cup.

Emmalina in tears, flung hipself about her lover's neck.

"My love, was you in that wheysmelling hole all night?" Percival gasped.

"Ach-ho! And only one meal to eat all day." Emmalina sobbed.

"For that a big box of chocolates, my Sweet, to stop crying. Two big boxes!" Pugh promised. "And listen. Tonight we marry yet! But orange blossoms, first. Then every night to walk in the moonlight—"

"And eat chocolates."

"Momma," Mr. Googenschmeel sauntered off. The soft evening breeze was filled with romance.

"A little sparkling beer, a little ripe chese yet, to make Emmalina happy, then for orange blossoms to go."

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Addressing Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—My mother has been a widow for ten years. She uses Leona A. Rivers instead of my father's name, Mrs. Samuel Brower Rivers. What is the correct form for the wedding announcement? Should she say, "Mrs. Samuel Brower Rivers announces the marriage of her daughter" or "Mrs. Leona A. Rivers announces the marriage of her daughter"?

2—I have another question about addressing the envelopes. On the outside envelope does not write, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gates and family, will send "Mr. and Mrs. Gates and," then address the inside envelope, "Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gates, and underneath Miss Betty Gates and under her name Mr. Robert Gates?"

3—How soon after the honeymoon is it customary to be "At Home"?

4—If a prospective husband objects to the use of his middle name on the visiting card, is it proper for his wife to use her own middle initial and last name?

Reader

1—Since correctly a widow should continue to use the same form of name that she used when her husband was living, your mother should when she does use her husband's name after the title. That is correctly she is still Mrs. Samuel Brower Rivers. This is her formal name.

And, of course, it is the formal name that must be used on such formal social items as marriage announcements.

Therefore the first line of marriage announcement should be:

Mrs. Samuel Brower Rivers
This may be followed by either:
has the honour of announcing the marriage of her daughter Mary Elizabeth or announces the marriage of her daughter

2—No, on invitations or announcement we should not use the phrase "and family". The word "family" doesn't give enough compliment to the individual members of the family.

So: if the number of announcements must be limited, we use the individual names, on both envelopes:

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gates
Miss Elizabeth Gates
Mr. Robert Gates

But only the outside envelope carries the address.

3—Only if a name is Elizabeth, you should use Elizabeth.)

4—The "At Home" date depends entirely on the convenience and preference of the couple.

5—Whether anyone doesn't like his or her middle name, I'm most emphatically against their ever dropping it! But I'm not a bit enthusiastic about using initials, especially on formal items like visiting cards. Why cling to an initial when there is a full name to use?

Using an initial isn't a social crime by any means, but unless really quick for-something we like or value, it seems to me useless. Since your name is your best, unless really quick for-something we like or value, it seems to me useless. Since your name is your best possession, why hide it behind initials?

Dr. Dafoe Explains Purpose of Interstitial Feedings

In the last two days we have discussed two types of infant diarrhoea that seem to coincide with hot weather. As we have seen the greatest danger to babies is the loss of water taken from their systems through vomiting and by diarrhoea.

When you see a child who has been suffering from diarrhoea for several days, it isn't hard to tell that he suffers from loss of water. The eyes are sunken, the skin is dry and hangs in folds; when the skin over the abdomen is picked up between thumb and forefinger it will not snap back into place as it should when it is released. The skin and the sub-cutaneous tissues have a rubbery feel.

The first move in the treatment of the condition should take place when the child shows the first symptoms. At this time he should be taken off his regular feeding and given clear fluids. Before you take such a step, however you would be foolish not to consult your doctor. He will tell you the best fluids for your child. These fluid diets generally consist of water and sugar. A solution of one tablespoonful of sugar and two of corn syrup is a good one. Orange juice diluted with water and sugar is also a good fluid for the baby.

These feedings should not be given at the regular four intervals as foods usually are. Instead, fill a bottle with the mixture your doctor advises and keep it beside the baby at all times. Then, at least once an hour, offer him a drink. In this way, even though he only takes an ounce at a time, the baby will take a lot of fluid into his system in the course of a day. If you get the baby to take some every half hour, it is even better. These babies are nearly as thirsty so it isn't hard to get them to drink. The unfortunate part of it is that too often babies with his illness vomit practically everything they take, even water.

When this crisis develops, we must employ more and more drastic methods of administering the fluids. Usually, if the vomiting persists, your doctor will want to take the child to a hospital, for in these institutions they have ways of giving fluids which cannot be employed in the home.

The first of these is subcutaneous-ly. A long needle is inserted under the skin of the abdomen or back and a large volume of the fluids is injected. The fluid used in the injections daily and thus from ten to fifteen cubic centimeters of fluid per pound of body weight is injected. The fluid used in the injections daily and thus from ten to fifteen cubic centimeters of fluid per pound of body weight is injected. The fluid used in the injections daily and thus from ten to fifteen cubic centimeters of fluid per pound of body weight is injected. The fluid used in the injections daily is a solution of sugar, salts and water, supplying the baby with these three ingredients in the proper amounts.

MOON ON THE WATER

by Charles A. Ogilvie

She gave a quick sigh. "That would be wonderful!" And then with her usual frankness, "Where shall we live?" she asked eagerly.

He looked amused. "Where would you like to live?"

"Somewhere in the country."

"So should I—but it might be better to have a place in town to start with—I should have to go to the city every day."

"Oh, of course," she agreed readily. "Well—I shan't mind, and then —when we've made enough money —"

"When!" he said ruefully.

She looked at him with confident eyes.

"You will," she said. "You'll make a lot of money, and then we'll buy a place in the country and keep dogs and a pony—and have a garden, with perhaps a stream running at the bottom."

Montford laughed. "It sounds ideal!" he agreed.

"Almost as good as an advertisement I once came across in Canada, when I was looking round for a bit of real estate. Judging from the advertisement the place was a paradise, but when I travelled five hundred miles to see it—well!"

"Was it so awful?"

"Awful' is a mild word—it was a nightmare. Rocks and withered trees—and no water anywhere about."

"What a shame."

They drove some little distance in silence before Montford said, "And if the old man will be obliging I can fix things up at once."

"And if he—won't be obliging?" she asked.

He looked down at her ruefully.

"Then your place in the country with His stream, will be a very long way off, I am afraid."

Jane smiled.

"Well, it won't matter," she said. "It will seem all the better when we get it."

There was a little silence before he said, "You're a wonderful person, Jane."

"Wonderful?"

"Yes—such a cheery optimist."

Her color rose a little.

"I can never see the sense of worrying," she said simply. "It doesn't do any good, and besides, there's always something to be thankful for, isn't there? Especially now," she added softly.

"How?"

"You, I mean."

His dark brows met in a quick frown, and he said a little gruffly, "Do you think I'm playing—fair?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"I mean that I've nothing to offer you—nothing real or settled. Most girls expect so much."

"That's where they're so silly," Jane said calmly.

"It always seems to me so much more fun to start at the bottom of the ladder with—with some one you like, and to climb up together instead of starting at the top, and not having any worlds left to conquer. Life must be so dull if you've got so much money that you can buy anything you want, and go anywhere you like. I should hate to marry a rich man."

"There is no fear of that if you marry me."

She laughed, and then suddenly grave, she said:

"I'm afraid I'm not a very good manager, but then at home I've always had the reputation of being a muddler, and so I suppose I've just accepted the fact and thought it was true, but when I have a home of my own—" She broke off, her eyes very soft.

"Won't it be fun?" she asked eagerly.

Montford turned his head away.

"I hope you'll always think so," and then after a moment he said, "Out in Canada, there are women from home who have picked up fellows—fellows like me, and have done out there to them, in the hope and good intentions, only to find that it's a heartbreaking job, nothing rounded, hard wood and—a sort of third-rateness that you can't imagine."

"And then—what happens then?" she asked. He shrugged his shoulders.

"Some of them throw up the sponge and go home, and some of them just settle down and make the best of it because they've got to; it's not an alluring prospect unless you've got money."

She was silent for a moment and then she said,

"People think too much about money, and from what little I know it doesn't bring happiness—not by itself. We don't know many rich people, but there are a few 'round about here, and they seem a discontented, dull sort of crowd. Life bores them because it's too easy; they never seem to enjoy anything, not like I do, but then I've never had any money," she added, and suddenly she thought of the three thousand pound which would be hers in less than three months. The bright color raced to her cheeks and her eyes sparkled.

"Gavin!" she said quickly, and she sat up, her hands clasped in her lap. "If Dr. Bingham won't help you—there's my money. We can buy the partnership with my money."

"No," he said sharply.

"Oh, but why not?" she objected. "If we don't spend it on that, I shall only fritter it away—at least they all say I shall, and think how lovely it would be if you ha.. it instead; if we could use it like that so that we can be married."

"No," he said again, then suddenly he covered her clasped hand with his. "You're a dear to think of it," he said. "But—no—I couldn't."

"Then you don't love me," she answered quickly and hurried on, "I mean—if we're friends—friends always help each other, or they should....And it would make me so happy."

But Gavin Montford only shook his head.

"I couldn't, thank you all the same. It's your money—"

"What's mine is yours," she said, but she did not press the matter, although it was in her thoughts all the way home. She would make him agree—he had she not thought of it sooner? She could buy the partnership, and they would marry—and be quite independent of his people and of her own.

She started when presently he said, "I must buy you an engagement ring. What sort would you like?"

She shyly touched the brown hand that rested on the steering wheel.

"I should like that one," she said. He glanced down.

"That old signet ring!" he laughed, "I bought it from a fellow who was hard up; it's not good enough—I'd rather have it than anything else—really," she insisted. "It doesn't mind."

Gavin drove the car to the roadside and stopped. Then he pulled the ring from his little finger and took her hand. "Just till my ship comes home," he said.

"It fits exactly," Jane said presently. She raised her blue eyes to his face. "I've never had a ring before, but I shall wear this always. Thank you so much."

A little flush of emotion crossed his face, but he did not answer and presently they drove on again.

He glanced down at her once or twice with a queer expression in his eyes, and then suddenly he said, "I'll do my best, Jane."

And she answered happily, "Whatever you do, it will be all right for me."

x x x

Pamela stared at her sister blankly when she heard what had happened.

"Engaged!" she said, and then: "But you don't know anything about him! And he hasn't got a job."

"He soon will have," Jane answered confidently. "And then we shall be married right away."

"Well!" Pamela said blankly.

INSTALMENT 6.

Pamela stared at the signet ring on her sister's hand.

"It's not even new," she protested.

"I chose it—he wanted to buy me another, but I like this best. What's the use of my having diamonds?" Jane demanded scornfully.

Jane's father merely looked a little bewildered.

"If you like him, my dear—he seems a nice fellow," he said.

"He is nice," Jane answered.

She went through the next twenty-four hours with her head in the clouds, rapt and with happiness.

She was to be married to a man she loved—could any one ask more of life?

"Any one would think you were engaged to the King," Pamela said sharply. She was a little envious of her sister's happiness. Somehow it seemed all wrong that Jane, who had always been the thorn in the family's flesh, should so suddenly have found romance.

She mentally contrasted Montford with Sidney Dale, and Sidney suffered a little; he seemed rather pale and insignificant beside Montford's height and breadth—inexperienced, too; still, Sidney had a steady and safe job, whereas had Gavin Montford....

"Supposing he doesn't get a job?" she asked unkindly.

But Jane only laughed, and then Pamela said, "Of course he knows about your money."

Jane looked really angry then.

"If you think that makes any difference!" she flashed.

"I didn't say so," Pamela answered. "I only said that I supposed he knew about it." But Jane had stalked out of the room. A hateful insinuation to make, she thought indignantly, and she remembered how firmly Gavin had refused to listen when she suggested that they bought the partnership with that three thousand pounds.

She was to see him that night and to hear the result of his interview with Dr. Bingham.

It would be all right, she told herself confidently, not that it mattered either way, but she felt a little nervous and excited as the day wore on.

A dozen times she went to the window—long before it was time for him to come—and when at last she saw him turn the corner she ran bare-headed into the road to meet him.

"Well?" she said breathlessly, but her spirits sank a little as he answered, "Not well, I am afraid."

He got out of the car and stood beside her.

"Shall we go for a walk somewhere?"

"I should love it."

When they were out of sight of the house he took her arm.

"We shall need a telescope to see that place in the country and the stream," he said moodily.

She pressed a little nearer to him.

"It doesn't matter—tell me what he said."

Pleasure Craft Sailing on National Loop Waters Warned To Keep Lookout for Pirates

Pittsburg in Short Space of Weeks Climbs from Sixth to Second

WIN TWIN BILL

Tom Sunkel for Cards Allows Giants Only Two Hits

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

Pleasure craft sailing on National Baseball League waters are warned to keep sharp lookout for Pirates.

With a surprise attack built on properly co-ordinated pitching, hitting and field, the determined Bucs, in the short space of a week, have climbed from sixth to second place. The twin scuttling they gave the Phillies yesterday 3-1 and 5-3 broke them out of a deadlock with St. Louis Cardinals.

With 16 victories in their last 20 starts the Bucs have climbed within nine games of Cincinnati Reds idle yesterday. And those two twin series yesterday, featuring pitchers Bill Swift and Joe Bowman, were built on a 20-hit attack and some sparkling fielding.

Shares Headlines

But the Pirates didn't make all the senior circuit headlines. Another youngster, by the name of Tom Sunkel, starting a Cardinal uniform, came within one hit of pitching the first no-hitter of the year—against the Giants.

A single by Tom Hafey in the eighth spoiled Sunkel and Billy Jurges' back effort his suspension, got another in the ninth. But those two blows couldn't make the way or helping a lost Giant cause. They lost this one by 10-2 as Sunkel got his first full-length victory and his best effort of the season.

Ol' Diz—Dean came up with a country fair performance in the box he still has a famed "nothin' ball —the one they can't do nothin' with." The spindrafted Brooklyn Dodgers down with five hits and one run. This Cubs apparently chargined over a pair of lickings the day before, slapped out a 12-hit attack, including homers by Gabby Hartnett and Dick Bartell to beat Fred Fitzsimmons.

Scores Every Innings

There were some better than average happenings in the American League, too. Notably two by three record-breakers, the New York Yankees. They tied the modern Major League record for scoring in every inning of a nine-inning till they finally got five tenth and they hammered out a 14-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Bill Dickey hit three homers to come within one of the nine-inning game record held by Bill's former teammate, Lou Gehrig. Red Ruffing choked the Browns with a three-hit performance for his 142d victory of the year.

Boston Red Sox had to call on their meal ticket, Jimmy Foxx, to shake off a Cleveland Indians' duo of White Sox in the second game, after losing the first. The Palm Beach ran out the first one 8-1 and then Foxx came to life in the second game and with two homers and a double drove in enough runs to give the Hoboken a 6-5 victory.

Al Milnar of the Indians won his sixth of the year with an eight-hitter job to check the Athletics, 9-3, and Buck Newsom of Detroit took the 11th of the year with a six-hitter over the Washington Senators. The Senators fired 11 A's for the 50th time this season.

Peach and Grape Crops Heavier Than in 1938

Toronto, July 27—(CP) —Peach and grape crops this year will top 1938 production marks by substantial margins, the statistics branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture reported today in its first estimates of the new fruit crops.

Peach production this year is expected to reach 658,000 bushels, about 15 per cent. higher than last year's production. Grape production is expected to reach 21,500 tons, about 26 per cent greater than last year's figure. The peach crop last year was worth about $746,000 and the grape crop about $700,000. The apple crop, the Department estimates, will be down four per cent. Production this year is expected to be down 30 per cent and west of Toronto up 18 per cent. The apple crop, biggest money crop of fruit grown in Ontario, was worth $1,638,000 last year.

Satisfactory weather conditions and moderate rains prevailed in Western Ontario for apple trees, the Department reports, stating of the apples has been excellent and the crop generally free from insect and disease infestation.

Continued dry weather in the Niagara district has affected the sizing of apples. Production of Spys is believed will be down about 50 per cent and Snows 12 per cent, but McIntoshs, the outstanding variety in the eastern counties, show a fifty per cent increase.

Playground Notes

On Monday afternoon of this week a Junior Horseshoe Tournament was held between the East and West Hill playgrounds. Two junior boys and two junior girls' from the East Hill journeyed over to the West, grounds only to meet defeat at the hands of their rivals, who won both events. Graydon Rogers and Jack Sword of the West taking the boys' doubles by defeating Geo. Cooper and Joe Galbraith of the East, while Maurice Gibson and Blanche McErlein won for the West over Norman Maker and Theresa Alexander.

That same Monday afternoon, Jimmy Foxx and Bill Dickey went revenge as their senior boys' won the baseball game from the juniors by 21-16, 21-16, and 21-14. Jack Sword of the West took considerable of playing their opponents pretty forced coolly to the visitors from the West Hill, especially in the last game, the latter's side after spotting their opponents ten points early here finally to win handily by the count of 21-14.

Tuesday afternoon just one event was scheduled, that being a banner boys' softball game to be held at the East Hill with a mixup repeating in both teams claiming the victory by default, this game was not played but will be held instead on Thursday afternoon.

CANADIAN HENLEY OPENING TODAY

Argo Eight Will "Not be Entrants and May Lose Olympic Trip

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont., July 27—(CP)—Razor blades and razor-edged shell rippled the placid waters of the old Welland Canal today as the initial staging of the Canadian Henley Regatta raced through preliminary heats.

There's a distinct possibility that before the week-end regatta ends Saturday Toronto Argonauts may be displaced as club champions but unless an astounding upset occurs Argo's eight, who rowed for the Argo A.C. of Philadelphia, will take his straight-backed crew with Slingle title.

More than 450 scullers from Canada and the United States will take part in the Regatta, largest aquatic competition on the North American continent. It's unlikely, however, that the Argos will successfully defend from the English Henley and now out of training, will compete, although the entry is listed in the draw.

Keen competition of the eight may be disastrous for Argos. Henley officials have limited the number of candidates for the 1940 Olympic games representatives might come from this meet. The Argo Eight, which went to finals of the English Henley, won the Olympic trip.

Argo Club officials want their crack eight to compete but Coach Ted Punchard has ruled otherwise. He maintains the crew is not in condition and that one of its members is still in England. The Toronto Eight didn't been in the water since the English races.

BUFFALO BISONS ARE NOT AFRAID OF NEWARK BEARS

Register 14th Win of 19 Games Played Against Team This Season

TORONTO WINS

Earl Caldwell Goes Route to Give Team One Win in Three Starts

By The Associated Press

Buffalo Bisons, who like every other team in the International League, have no fear at the sight of Newark Bears, are repaying the Bruins in full this year for indignities suffered last season.

Bringing to life the usual dreams of a Casper Milquetoast, who likes to imagine himself letting go with a left hook to the bully's jaw, the Bisons really are tearing into the Bears and showing little sympathy for the floundering champs who won last year's pennant by 18 games.

Yesterday the Herd registered its 14th victory over the Bruins in 19 starts as it romped to a 6-3 decision behind Fabian Kowalik's seventh triumph. Buffalo collected a double and a single in three times at bat to lead his mates in the 11-hit assault on four Newark hurlers.

At Hollywood's, a contract is recently obtained from the Phillies, started for the Bears and was charged with the loss. The victory moved the Herd a full game closer to the first-place Leading Cubs, who were nosed out by Toronto, 4-3, and kept them within a percentage point of the second place Rochester Red Wings.

Caldwell Goes Distance

Hy Vandenberg started for the Little Men of Maple and after giving a pair of runs in the second settled down to hurl Miller ball until the eighth, when he was removed for a pinch hitter. The Eagles jumped on his successor in the first half of the ninth, however, for two more runs to gain their margin of victory. Earl Caldwell went the distance for the Leafs to register his first victory over the Jersers in their last six games, and give the Leafs their first victory in the three-game series.

In the only night game Rochester, Red Wings bested Syracuse Chiefs, 5-3, in a 14-inning affair. With the Chiefs leading 4-3 going into the ninth, Jack Tising went to the mound to relieve Tex Shirley, and yielded the tying run. He pitched shutout ball from that point the 14th when the Wings got to him for four hits and the many runs. Frenchie Pussell, who took the mound for the Rochesters in the ninth, received credit for the victory.

CORNWALL BISONS NEARING GOAL

Only Half-Game Out of First Place by Downing Ottawa

By The Canadian Press

Twice pennant winners and again finalists in post-season playoffs during three years of campaigning, Cornwall Bisons have been forced to fight uphill all the way in the current Canadian-American Baseball League race. Stung but not mortally, though, Bisons have gained headway.

In last place early in the season, they forced upwards until they became top team in the second division. After tying awhile with Ottawa Senators for the position, Bisons got underway again and six victories in their last seven games placed them today but a half-game out of the first division.

Cornwall jumped into the challenging position behind Rome Colonels last night when they downed the Ottawa, 9-6, while the loop-leading Amsterdam Rugmakers defeated Rome, 4-2. In other games, the cellar-dwelling Utica Braves won, 7-6, and Watertown took an 11-hit assault on four Newark hurlers.

At Amsterdamwhile, the Indians were completed 13 hits with two Rome errors for the decision. Karpel gave up four hits to the Rochesters in pitching the triumph, going all in eight innings as darkness forced a halt.

Eddie Lauer hurled four-hit ball for Watertown while his mates poled 16 hits for an easy victory over Oswego. At Gloversville, the visiting Utica Braves bowed, 7-6, to Jeff Billi Gorman on the homeruns mound.

ROSS SOMERVILLE ELIMINATED BY EDDIE MEISTER

Loses on 19th Hole to Cleveland Player in Canadian Amateur

TOP-NOTCHERS BEATEN

Favorites Fell Like Duck-Pins but Some Good Golfers Left

By Sydney Gruson

Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. Bruno, Que., July 27.—(CP) —The Flintstones, and a lot of the good stuff, too, having been weeded out, The Canadian Amateur Golf Championship was down to a round of 16 today with some of the survivors probably as surprised at being there as the public was to see them there.

Jack Nash of London, Ont., Duane Barr of Calgary, Willis Kirby of Shawinigan, Que., Maurice Pinsonnault and Bill Taylor of Montreal, all are good golfers. They are not rated nearly as good, however, as Ross (Sandy) Somerville, Frank Strafaci of Brooklyn, N.Y., or Bobby Dunkelberger of Charlotte, N.C.

These were the others are still in the amateur hunt while Sandy, the London, Ont., shot master, and the Americans are looking on. This was the result of a startling list of upsets in the first and third rounds over Mount Bruno's baked course yesterday.

To maintain a semblance of sanity to yesterday's goings, Chilliwack, B.C., golfers upheld the prestige of the province by winning two matches, 4 and 3 over Bill Fisher of Toronto and 3 and 2 over Cec Gate of Victoria, and Black also came through as expected, beating Guy Rolland of Montreal 5 and 4 and J. Watson Yulle of Montreal 4 and 3.

Went Down Fighting

Sandy went down fighting at the 19th hole to Meister, a strapping young golfer from Cleveland who has a nice drive, a good iron and just about everything that's needed on a championship course. Meister was behind, leading by two holes with only three to play. The co-ungrossed Somerville, six times Canadian champion, fought back only to lose to a 30-foot putt on the first extra hole.

Ralph Strafaci or Brother Frank didn't last as long as Sandy, and Frank, the victim rankings amateur in the United States, Ken Lawson of Victoria, clipped Frank in the morning round, 3 and 1, after Dunn Saunders, a tuner from Charlottetown, beat Ralph 4 and 3.

Giant Killers Go Out

The Giant-Killers went out them selves later, Barr beating Lawson at the 20th hole and Hogan taking Dunkelberger, who never recovered from a beautiful pitch by Barry that won the seventh hole. Martell finished two up.

There were others in the survivor field who could not be trusted to go through. Wesley warned on the tenth opposition in Penwick by dispossing of Penner Dailey of Hamilton, 7 and 6 and Mort McCarthy of Norfolk, Va., 2 and 2. Gordon B Brown fancy golf. He whipped H Taylor, winner in 1932, also has R. Pickens of Montreal, 4 and 2, and Sherman Peabody of Sherbrooke one up.

In fact anything might happen today. After yesterday the people around Mount Bruno stopped calling results.

CORBYS ADVANCE TO CITY FINALS BEATING DRACUPS

Eddie Schrieder Limits Losers to Eight Hits in 7-5 Victory

RALLY IN NINTH

Tiremen Had Tieing Runs on Bases but Could Not Deliver in Pinch

Chuck Barnett's Corbys A.C. softballers advanced to the city O.A.S.A. finals by pushing out the Dracup "Tiremen" in two straight, winning the second game of the series 7 to 5 at the Flats last night. The crippled Corbys team now meet the Shell "Oilers" in the city finals, the winner earning the right to advance into the Intermediate "A" series playdowns of the O.A.S.A.

Corbys took an early three run lead last night and were never headed, although Harry Kemp's "Tiremen" rallied in the ninth, but left the tying runs stranded on the sacks as Eddie Schrieder hurled good clutch ball. Corbys out-hit the losers 12 to 8 in the game.

Eddie Schrieder ascended the mound for the Corbys and seemingly was never in trouble, until in the ninth when he by Lumberg, Dracup, a walk to Henn, and an error gave Dracups a run and left the bases loaded. Schrieder then fanned Hanna and Barrtage and retired the next batter to grounder on the Corby bench.

Corbys scored one in the first as Jim Rochford welcomed "Cous" Dracup's early deliveries with triple and scored on Barnard's infield fly. Murray tripled in the second and scored on Miller's double, after the latter subsequently scoring on Schrieder's base hit. Barnard, Schrieder, Miller and Cy Barrtage, including Schrieder's triple, gave the Corbys nine safeties in the game as they coasted in from that point.

Ken Hanna's two doubles and a single led the Corbys on the attack. Schrieder helped his own cause with a triple and double, as Miller and Murray chalked up two hits each. Jackson Dracup had three base hit for Dracups. "Doll" Henn got the runs vanquished Dracup with two hits in four times at bat. Both teams fielded well in the clutches. The box scores:

SHANNONVILLE LOSES TO LATTA IN SECOND GAME

Score 9-6 Win in Second Game of the Semi-Finals

PLAY FRIDAY

Pomboro, July 27 (Special)—How quickly the advantage can swing from one team to the other in a short series! Up one game on their Latta rivals, it appeared yesterday as though the Shannonville nine were almost out of the woods in their semi-final series with the northern lads for the first time in the history of the league, would make the finals. Today, however, the situation is entirely changed and with Latta taking their Shannonville rivals for a 9-6 joyride, the series is now tied up at one game each and, for the first time since the series started, Latta are the favourites. The third and deciding game will be in Latta on Friday evening, when these two teams clash again to see which one will go in against Cannifton in the finals.

Reverse Brand of Ball

Playing an entirely different brand of ball than the affair effort turned in by both clubs on Wednesday evening, when the Shannonville batters hooked up in a mound duel, it was a case of knock 'em down and drag 'em out last night at Shannonville as with sheer power of heavy clouting the two clubs kept themselves in the running for the game. With the top half of the inning order accounting for practically all the hits, there was some nifty clouting for extra bases, the heavy hitting of Latta nine proving good for an artistic job, which they never relinquished. Scoring in every inning but two, they continually kept the Shannonville pitcher on hot water and, despite the comedy of errors, which their infielders were won't to make at the critical moments, won the game going away. Only one of the five runs scored by the Shannonville was of the earned variety as Shannonville were held to six hits by the Latta nine-man's only scoring spree of the game. Over the seven inning route, July gave up nine hits, including doubles by Parks and Marsh and a triple by C. Hall struck out nine, walked three and hit two, while Marsh and C. Hall were nicked for eight safeties, all singles, struck out eight and walked two.

Latta scored two runs in the top half of the first frame when, after one was away, Marsh doubled and Gowe was safe on the second baseman's error, with singles by E. Hall and Callaghan driving them both home. Shannonville came back in their half, however, to score their only earned run of the game as Bowmanville failed to field cleanly and after stealing second rode home on Hillis' one-base base blow. Latta added another in the second when a base on balls to Sayers and a double by Parks put them two ahead again, only to have Shannonville come back in their half as Barberstock singled and went all the way home as the catcher threw to centre field in an attempt to nip Hillis at second.

After being shut out in the third, Latta came to life again in the fourth when they scored three times on one lone hit, as two errors, two bases on balls and a hit batsman came materially to their aid. There were no more scoring then until the last of the fifth when the homesters came within one of tying the score as an error and a hit, followed by another error and two consecutive singles pushed three across and ended Marsh's sojourn on the mound. He was added two more runs to their total in the first, to be followed by a triple by C. Hall and a single by Callaghan. They added another in the sixth when Callaghan singled and was followed by two singles netted by the third consecutive Shannonville made one last dying effort to pull the game out of the fire in the first half of the seventh as July was safe when Colden muffed his throw to first baseman and was followed by Hillis' hard-hit drive to centre which was misjudged and Hillis was out short to first and Barnhardt popped out to the catcher to end the game.

The teams:

Latta: Parks 1b; Marsh p and ss; Gowe cf; C. Hall rf and 2b; Callaghan c; Dunning lf and p; Colden 3b; Sayers ss, rf and lf; N. Hall 2b and ss.

Shannonville: Dies 2b and 3b; Cook ss; Hill 3b; Houston c; July p and lf; Archer cf; Barberstock lf; Isole rf; Smith and Barnhardt lf, and Reid 3b.

Score by innings:

	R	H	E
Latta	210 201 1—6	9	1
Shannonville	110 030 1—6	8	4

Umpires: Don Thomas, plate and Jack Carson, bases.

Campbellford Netters Bow to Belleville, 5-1

Belleville, July 27—(Special)—The Belleville Lawn Tennis Club's string of six matches here Wednesday, defeated Campbellford in the Trent Valley Tennis League. The win strengthens the Belleville club's hold on first place with only two matches left. Campbellford's two remaining matches will be in these games that the Belleville club will play on their home courts. Throughout the season's schedule to date Belleville has won all its matches in league play, one from the Air Force, while the Campbellford team has won both at the expense of the "Orphans". The remaining matches of the locals can even their series with the Air Force played thus far.

The sympathy of the sporting fraternity of this city is extended to the Bowmanville Golf Club, one of their best friend—their mother, Mrs. Ethel Hall, who died on Tuesday all taken their respective parts in city sports.

Lyn Chisholm, who jumped from the Ottawa seniors direct to the Syracuse Stars just before the end of the International League season, is back in Oshawa and employed by the General Motors. Lyn will report to the Maple Leaf training camp this fall and will be given a chance at catching on with the Toronto N.H.L. club, while Red (Big Bum) Mackenzie, former Oshawa and Peterborough Canadian Senior Intermediate Porcupine and rushing up his knuckle-dusters awaiting another hockey season. Red was the batman on the International League team last season. In order to stimulate interest the Toronto Maple Leafs are publishing a summer "Hockey News," a four-paged sheet edited by Frank Selke. Copies will be available through the Maple Leafs' office at the Maple Leaf Stadium gratis.

SMART BOWLING ON LOCAL GREENS

Harry Bryant and Mrs. Art Wesley Win Top Honors

Twenty-eight players five-bird up in the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club here yesterday afternoon, that resulted in semi-finalists for the 1940 Olympic games representatives might come from this meet. The Argo Eight, which went to finals of the English Henley, won the Olympic trip.

Argo Club officials want their crack eight to compete but Coach Ted Punchard has ruled otherwise. He maintains the crew is not in condition and that one of its members is still in England. The Toronto Eight didn't been in the water since the English races.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken I. Calling

As was generally conceded the Corbys A.C. erased the Dracup "Tiremen" from the city O.A.S.A. picture in two straight, winning last night at the Flats, despite the fact they trained leg injuries as they stumbled over the rough Flats' turf and the fact that the Dracup of the "Tiremen" stumbled head-foremost as he slid into the "clean home" at the end of the pitcher's slab. Although Dracup's fall was a "clean" one, the fact they left the tying runs stranded on the runways, the crippled Corbys team will be given a break. Many doubtless have to play with a better brand of ball than they did against Dracups, when they meet the Oilers' team, but they did against Dracups.

The Corbys' softballers have hope to represent Belleville in the O.B.A.A. playdowns, the same as eighth game Managers Frank Sidore of the "Oilers" and Chuck Barnett of the Corbys met and mutually agreed to play a best two-out-of-three series to decide the respective clubs for the right to represent Belleville in the O.A.S.A. playdowns, and a tidy series it will be too.

Red Wilmer Belleville baseball nine can assure themselves of a play-off berth by centering their stellar attack on the Bay of Quinte in their remaining three games with the Western division club this evening the local nine cross bats with the Flyers and a win will see the wonders at least tied for the "Orfans" league standing. After this evening's game the Flyers' Grounds each club has one more game with each other and then it will be in these games that the Belleville nine will play their crucial team ties. Throughout the season's schedule to date Belleville has won all its matches in league play, one from the Air Force, while the Campbellford team has won both at the expense of the "Orphans". The remaining matches of the locals can even their series with the Air Force played thus far.

Sports Spice—The Bowmanville Royals are literally sporting from top to bottom of the last season's Belleville loop with eight consecutive wins . . . Boom arm . . . and all, Dizzy Dean pitched five-hit ball as the Cubs beat the Dodgers 10 to 2 yesterday and Dizzy Dean's record on the National League horizon yesterday as the Pirates moved into second place, having moved up from sixth position inside of a week's . . . The Yanks are on a batting spree and the Giants are beaten . . . baseball scribes love their subway series . . . Lou Gehrig's Kinshasha lost another yesterday.

Rotarian Harry Moorman informs the Intelligencer that after his boat, of all classes, to compete at the Belleville Rotary Regatta . . . Moorman's three oil burner entry from the Saranac Lake races of 1938 will be a contestant to Belleville via motor caravan.

Some tidy lawn bowling was staged here Wednesday afternoon when a club mixed doubles was played, with practically all the members participating. The day's winners were Harry Bryant and Mrs. Art Wesley, who had the high; next was J. E. Richards and Mrs. Ed. Reid, runners-up; two wins high and third Ivey Hefkey and Mrs. Hefkey, with four wins high. Ideal-weather welcomed the bowlers and a fine time was enjoyed.

By winning five of their six matches over Campbellford, the Belleville Lawn Tennis Team forged into the lead of the Bay of Quinte Tennis League yesterday.

Madoc

Madoc—The Women's Institute met for their July meeting at Mrs. J. H. Davies' cottage, Moira Lake, on Friday, 21st inst. With the president, Mrs. Thaner, presiding, the opening exercises were conducted and accounts and exercises and communications received and dealt with. This was the occasion of the visit of the District President, Mrs. Ray Rutherford of Rylestone, who was at this time introduced to the society by the president. Mrs. Rutherford spoke briefly on each department of Institute work, giving help and ideas for each. As this was the "Canadianization" meeting, her address, "Proclaim in Canada" was very instructive and well given. Mrs. Rutherford stressed the aims of the Flag and the arms of Fascism and stated that it is the duty of Canadians not to live in ignorance of this fast growing element. Reports of the District Annual were given by Mrs. A. Smith and Mrs. Tanner. Mrs. Davies reported for the Girls' Work and Achievement Day. A paper, "Message to Women's Institute" by Nellie McClung was read by Mrs. C. Whytock. In this paper Mrs. McClung used the term of King George upon his recent visit to Canada where he stressed co-operation instead of conflict. Upon motion, Mrs. A. Smith and Mrs. Hendren kindly consented to act as canvassers for prize money for the Agricultural Fair. Mrs. C. Whytock moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Rutherford for the splendid address. This motion was seconded by Mrs. Ed. Phillips and extended by the president. The roll call, "A Canadian Minister" was well responded to and showed 21 members and 4 visitors present. Interesting closed with the National Anthem and a lovely lunch was served by the hostess.

Newlyweds Honored

On Tuesday evening a very pleasant event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Taylor in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Taylor who were married recently. Progressive euchre was played, community singing and games. About 6'even o'clock the gathering was called to order and Mr. and Mrs. Taylor asked to come forward and Mr. Tom Hawthorne read an address while Miss Evelyn Moore and Miss Lillian Young presented the young couple with a silver pitcher, sugar bowl and tray, silver butter dish and knife and bon bon dish. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor thanked their friends for the lovely gifts. A dainty lunch was served and the gathering brought to a close with the singing of "God Save We Are Jolly Good Fellows."

St. Mark's W. M. S.

The July meeting of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc, W. M. S. was held at the lovely cottage of Mrs. E. C. A. Crawford at Moira Lake on Thursday afternoon, with an attendance of 26. The president was in the chair. The hymns used and the Bible reading were from memory. Mrs. Johnson took the Bible reading and also read the first half of each verse, the members gave the latter part. Mrs. Jenkins led in prayer. The secretary read the minutes of the June meeting and also the roll call. The treasurer reported the June collection and also the proceeds from the splendid social evening held at Mrs. Miller's on July 7th. The expense treasurer handed over to the treasurer for a life membership to be given later on. Eight visits were reported. A hymn was sung and the president read a very fine report of the summer meeting of the eastern section of the Presbyterial held in Sunday July 16th which was wonderfully successful. She called on Miss Helen Mackintosh, editor of the "Presbyterial Messenger," who gave a very comprehensive review of her work in connection with this paper and all the labor involved in connection with it. She also gave interesting items from letters, etc., that could not be put in the paper for lack of space. Everyone was delighted with the description of her work. A vote of thanks was proposed to her for her address. The collection which amounted to $2.15 was taken. The hymn "Whosoever Heareth" was sung and Mrs. Hunter closed a very delightful meeting with prayer. The hostess was also thanked for her kindness and hospitality. She was assisted by several ladies in serving a very bountiful lunch.

Miss Falconer of Belleville is visiting her friend, Miss W. Ferguson, Madoc.

Mr. Grant Lewis who has been a patient in Belleville General Hospital for the past few days returned to his home on Sunday.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the cause or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be sought at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Remrod and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Remrod is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

'Meteorites Worth Dollar or Two Per Pound'

'Smaller Relatively More Valuable' Says Astronomer

By Arthur Merkel
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Vancouver, July 27.—(CP)—The Pacific Coast Meteor market, its senses quickened by the fact that an unusual number of shooting stars have flashed through the skies this month, reports no sales for lack of certified specimens.

But Dr. Frederick C. Leonard of the Department of Astronomy, University of California at Los Angeles, a past president of the Society for Research on Meteorites, has expressed anxiety to get his hands on any genuine samples found.

He is giving lectures at the university of British Columbia Summer School, and between classes tracks down reports of excited novices that meteor fell in their back yards. His inquiries to date have proved fruitless.

From a monetary standpoint, Dr. Leonard says a good general rule to follow in determining the value of a meteorite is that it is worth "a dollar or two a pound". But this varies according to size. "The smaller they are the more valuable they are—relatively speaking," he says.

ONTARIO FEARS H EAVY CROP DAMAGE UNLESS RAIN COMES

Ontario farmers and fruit growers are casting anxious eyes toward the sky as relentless sun continues to burn their crops and dry up their water supplies. Serious economic damages is expected throughout the parched countryside unless rain falls within a few days. If the dry spell continues damage such as suffered by this farmer of Long Island, shown examining his burnt crops with his two children, is expected.

REJOICES OVER HUSBAND'S RELEASE

Mrs. Ruth Ada Goldner rejoices with her 9-months-old son, after hearing of the release of her husband Rev. Gerould Goldner, by a band of Arabs who seized him in Palestine and held him for $5,000 ransom. Rev. Goldner reached Jerusalem after his release suffering from the results of eating native food but otherwise in good shape. It is reported that the Arabs were paid $2,500 for his release.

Dogs Credited With Saving Life

Toronto, July 27— (CP)— Two police dogs are credited with saving a woman from drowning off Palminghrook Beach in Lake Ontario today. The dogs barked and howled and awakened their owner, Bob Clements, a veteran lifeguard.

Clements rushed out in his night clothes and followed the dogs to the water. Then he swam out and rescued Mrs. N. S. Green, formerly Etta Coles, widely known amateur

Butter and Egg Prices Firm--Quiet Market

Trading was quiet on the Toronto produce market with eggs showing a firmer tendency. Butter remaining steady and cheese easing slightly, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Although eggs continued to be scarce, diminishing receipts appeared to be sufficient for the demand on yesterday's market. Only grade A large and grade B extra large were in the upgraded section and 15c in the ungraded section and 14c in the graded group. Retailers' prices were firm at 19c for grade A medium, 20c for B-grades and 17c for C.

Butter opened on an easy note, but was firmer in undertone during the afternoon. Dealers reported no trouble in clearing the offerings, which were light, at 21 1-2c for No. 1 creamery solids and at from 20c to 20 3-4c for lower grades. An improved demand was evident in the late afternoon.

The cheese market was quiet also. Demand was light and trading slow here, large paraffined current make eased to 11 1-2c. Average prices paid for shippers f.o.b. country points were 10 1-2c to 10 3-4c for new, large paraffined, and 10 3-4c to 11c for triplets.

Retailers' prices on butter and new, large cheese were down a fraction of a cent, while country truck prices of No. 1 grade churning cream eased to 25c.

Montreal Butter Firmer

Montreal, July 27 (CP)—Butter prices ruled slightly firmer on open produce markets. Quebec new crop creamery solids were 21c; Ontario, Maine and P.E.I. potatoes held steady. Cheese remained quiet and dull with an easier undertone. Eggs were firm. Lard was steady and unchanged, but A-medium fell 1-2 of a cent and B-large added a similar amount.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 21 1-2 cents and 22 cents a pound and solids for 22c to 22 1-2c. No. 1 creamery solids sold in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale job lots sold at 21c to 21 1-2c. Ontario 1,391 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11 1-2c. Quebec fancy white sold at 11c to 11 1-4c and colored at 11c. Receipts: 8,156 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in new free cases sold at 21c to 21 1-2c for A-large, 20c to 20 1-2c for A-medium, 19c to 19 1-2c for B-large, 15c for C. Receipts: 945 cases.

Potatoes: N.B. and Maine No. 1 Mix. 75's, $1.25 to $1.30; P.E.I. No. 1 Mix. 75's, $1.15 to $1.25; Quebec new crop, 75's, 60c to 75c.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, July 27.— (CP)— Hogs were generally lower on the Toronto Livestock Market today with liveweights about a standstill. Calves held steady. Cattle holdover from Wednesday was 700 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were —Cattle 50; sheep 100; hogs 200; sheep and lambs 30.

Only cattle sales were a few stockers at $4.50-$5.00.

Calves sold at $6-$9 according to quality.

Hogs sold at $8.75-with a few at $8.86 off trucks while bids for reft grades were $8.75.

Good ewe and wether lambs brought $8 to $8.50 with a few odd at. There were no sheep on the market.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 27—(CP)—Following a strong opening on Toronto exchange today, the list eased narrowly under light profit-taking and by noon 11 issues were off 1/8 to 3/4. Volume was only fair at 213,000 shares for the first three hours.

In the first hour Noranda advanced to a new high at 44 on then weakened to 82 1-2 for a net loss of 1/4. Nickel and Hudson Bay held firm. In the gold section a group of the secondary issues improved a few cents. Pamour declined about 15 cents and other soft spots were Macassa, Aunor, Dominique, Little Long Lac and Teck Hughes.

Food, liquor and senior oil shares maintained a firm front while base metals were depressed by big stocks. Abitibi Common backed off 1/8 to 3/4. Changes were slight in the western oil group. Home Oil gained a cent and Anglo-Canadian Petroleum and Brown were unchanged.

WALL STREET

New York, July 27 (CP)—Sticks generally took a step or two backward in today's market although a few individual issues managed a slight and a few favorites managed to hold their own ground.

Declines ran to a point or so in the majority of instances and speculation at the week's Mild buying support appeared near the fourth hour and reduced declines in many cases. Volume was slack after a moderately active opening.

Notwithstanding the bright international picture, boardroom discussion centred largely on the recent move of Washington in abrogating the U.S.-Japanese trade treaty of 1911. It was suggested, though, that this development was more punning than depressing from a market standpoint.

In the Canadian group small losses were chipped from Dome and Lake Shore, while most others were unchanged. Dominion 6s were under mild pressure in the bond market.

British and French Envoys Received At Kremlin Today

Moscow, July 27 (AP)—British and French envoys were received at the Kremlin late today by Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff for resumption of negotiations for an Anglo-French-Russian mutual assistance pact.

Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador, Paul Emile Naggiar, French Ambassador, and William Strang, special British envoy, took part in the conference.

In London an official said today's meeting "might well be the Farmer Warding Off Bees, Drops Cigarette, Grass Burns

Neighbors Rush to Scene and Prevent Blaze From Reaching Woods Near Hoard's

Rawdon—(Special)—On Tuesday afternoon at Stevens's farmer was busy drawing off stone from a field when he came in contact with a lively nest of bees. In his efforts to hold the team and fight off the bees, he dropped his lighted cigaret, which ignited the dry grass which soon made quick headway as a slight breeze fanned the flames.

Mrs. Stevens and children rushed to the scene of the fire and trucks of water were brought to the scene before the flames were extinguished. The flames were heading for a grove of trees and it was lucky that several folk were quickly on the scene to give assistance, otherwise the woods nearby and perhaps the island property would have been included.

Rawdon Township is terribly dry with the last rainfall of any importance on June 29th. The grass has burned to a golden brown and everyone should be careful of fire in these dry, hot, days.

U. S. ENVISIONS

Mole Seemingly Innocuous

Mr. Hull's note, on the face of it, was an innocuous one. There is no reference to China, to an embargo, to rights of citizens in China, or to the Sino-Japanese war.

The note set out that in recent years the United States government had been examining its treaties of commerce and navigation with other countries to see if any changes were needed. It then said the government had concluded the 1911 treaty contained provisions which need new consideration.

Toward preparing the way for such consideration, the note added, "and with a view to better safeguarding and promoting American interests as new developments may require the government of the United States . . . considers that the time by of its desire that this treaty be terminated."

Americans Insulted by Japanese

On Monday it was interpreted the United States' concern over the increasing number of American-Japanese incidents in China. On the same day an American naval attache, Robert Baker, was assaulted by a Japanese naval sentry at Hankow and wounded.

Yesterday two Americans at Peiping—Father Daniel Scannell and Mr. K. Hunnicutt—were assaulted by Japanese soldiers.

Hirohito Confident, Says Tokyo

Tokyo, July 27.—(AP)—The United States' decision to terminate the 28-year-old commerce and navigation treaty with Japan was regarded today in official circles and other official circles as an unfriendly act because no reasons were given.

The foreign office spokesman declared that ending of the treaty is "unthinkable."

"Nobody can ignore the political significance of the action which was not preceded by any exchange of views by the two countries," the spokesman said. "We can understand America's real intention."

Retaliation Possible

Although neither the United States Embassy nor the foreign office have yet received an official explanation of the move, it was disclosed that the Japanese government is studying possible steps to retaliate in an economic way.

The foreign office spokesman said:

"Japan certainly will take retaliatory measures if there is discrimination by America after the one-month period, but during that time relations will be maintained."

Moral Effect Felt

Throughout the day, the "incident" Japan has professed a desire for American friendship and particularly during the recent difficulties with the United Britain. Thus the moral effect of the termination was expected possibly to outweigh the economic effect.

The stock market slipped slightly but rallied to normal a few hours after the American decision was made known.

Peterborough Garbage Contractor Arrested

Peterborough, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Bert Withers, city garbage contractor, was arrested today on a charge of assaulting an officer in connection with the strike of the Constable Bruce Menzies of North Monaghan Township, adjoining the city, last night.

Constable Menzies said two men attacked him and struck him over the side of the head with a stone. He was found unconscious in a ditch. Coroner Percy Campbell and police were searching for another man today.

Withers appeared in court and was remanded on $2,000 bail until next week for trial.

'DIXIE' DAVIS GIVEN FREEDOM

'Mouthpiece' of Schultz Policy Racket Turned State's Evidence

New York, July 27 (AP)—Shielded by four detectives, J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, 34, former "big mouthpiece" of the $20,000,000-a-year Dutch Schultz policy racket, will be freed from Bronx Jail tonight—quits at last in his long conflict with the law.

District Attorney Thomas Dewey ordered elaborate precautions to safeguard against any possible gangland vengeance as he steps into a new life of fear-shadowed freedom. Prison officials said he would be taken to a secret destination.

Davis will have to return to the city temporarily on Monday, however, to answer Federal Grand Jury subpoenas. Subpoenaed in the case against former Judge Martin Manton, he is considering a plea of obstructing justice by accepting "loans" from litigants.

Davis was strutted from boyhood in the Catskill Mountain hamlet of Tannersville, N.Y., to the influence of $175 suits, $200 topcoats and $18.30 monogrammed shirts—not to mention $2,000 automobiles—as an office at $13,000 a year—was described by prison authorities as bent on "going straight."

"For one thing, once a man turns informer he never can believe in the underworld again," said Davis Blood-pressure Deputy Commissioner of Correction.

Bethlehem Shrine Picnic

Bethlehem Shrine Picnic was held at 12 O'Clock Point yesterday afternoon with fifty in attendance. Mrs. Ernest Black, W.M.P., welcomed each one. An interesting line of sports was conducted by Arthur Naylor and his committee.

Tug-of-War—Mason Team.

Girls' under 10—Dorothy Lasenby. Boys under 15—Donald Darrah, Stoop Race—Mrs. Rooberry's team.

Orange Race—Lillian Sprague.

Sam'l Donkey Race—Geo. Adams.

Paper Bag Race—Ladies, Mrs. Taft; men, Sam Wessel.

Hop Race—Ladies, Miss Doris Black; gent, Billie Darrah.

Shoe Kicking—Mrs. Arthur Naylor.

Shoe Kicking—Mr. A. Alexander.

A peanut scramble in which all joined concluded the sports. At the conclusion of the delicious supper served, prizes of coffee were awarded to Mrs. Arthur Naylor, holders of the lucky tickets in the draw. Lucky number 13 evidently afforded much merriment, drew to a close a highly enjoyable affair. Before leaving for home every-one was treated to soft drinks with Mrs. Cliff Sprague acting as host. Appreciation of Mr. Baragar's generous gesture was given in a lusty rendition of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

BRITISH HOUSES TO HAVE RECESS

Special Session if Change in Foreign Policy Contemplated

London, July 27—(CP)— Prime Minister Chamberlain today refused to keep parliament in session during the usual summer and early autumn months. But he promised that "if the government contemplated any change in policy or a foreign policy" he would call a special session.

The Prime Minister insisted that the House of Commons be the judge of whether justification existed for calling parliament together.

"I cannot commit myself to the precise words of a pledge," he said. "But, broadly speaking, if the government contemplate some important departure in foreign policy, they will, on such an occasion for calling the Houses together."

Adjournment Motion

Adjournment for the summer recess is scheduled for Aug. 4.

His statement was made in response to a series of questions in which opposition members sought him either to keep parliament in session during the summer months or to arrange for periodic meetings of the Commons, so as to keep in touch with the foreign situation.

Arthur Greenwood, Labor, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal, led the questioning, with Winston Churchill following with the inquiry whether the Prime Minister did not "consider that if during the early days of August, mobilization of the German army is steadily proceeding, it would appear extremely grouse to announce that parliament was adjourned over August 4."

"That is an hypothetical question," Mr. Chamberlain replied.

Edmonton Golfer Fired Par for 15 Holes To Defeat Meister

Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. Bruno, Que., July 27—(CP)— Henry Martel of Edmonton, three times past president of Canada Alberta, fired par for 15 holes in 69 strokes today to win the second 4 and 3 in the fourth round of the Canadian golf championship today. The victory gave Martel a place in this afternoon's quarter-finals.

It was another in a string of upsets which have left only five favorites began to fall in the second round, when Jack Nash of Montreal "The Man to Beat" after he eliminated C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville of Hamilton, 3 and 2 over the 36-hole yesterday.

Meanwhile the Martell-Meister match, the others were finishing as expected with Ken Black of Winnipeg, Chicago 3 and 1, Ted D. Adams of Boston 4 and 3, Jim Ferrier of Australia turning back Willis Kirby of Sherbrooke, Que., 4 and 3.

Ottawa Golfer Arrested Abroad

Still well back of the early finishers, Stanley Thompson of Westmount, the defending champion, was trailing Dr. Cyril Tweedale of Bruno one up on Marcel of Pinsonnault of Montreal. The champion was playing his first match in the tournament against Pinsonnault and hit the turn 2 up.

Jack Nash of London qualified into the semi-finals this afternoon by beating Jim Hogan of Jasper, Alta., last year's Canadian Junior Champion, 3 and 2. Further in the afternoon, Nash battled until the last green, one up for victory. Both men had been shooting some of the best golf of the tournament, eliminated Ted Fenwick of Ft. Frances, 4 and 3.

Double Drownings In Quebec

Two Double Tragedies in a Fatality List of 16 in Two Days' Time

Montreal, July 27—(CP)— Two double drownings in widely-separated parts of Quebec Province were recorded today in a fatality list that totalled 16 for two days.

The Tuesday list included an asphyxiation, a traffic fatality and a death resulting from a car falling on a man repairing it.

Trapped in their automobile when it plunged off a bridge into the Gatineau River at Farm Point, 12 miles north of Ottawa, Capt. William A. Duffey, 56-year-old Ottawa Fire Department chief, and Mrs. Frieda Cole were drowned last night.

Driving up the Gatineau Valley, Captain Duffey turned out to pass a truck and his car ripped through the guard rail on a bridge and dropped six feet into the river.

The other double drowning was in the Nord Est River at St. Lucie, near Mcmonagy far down the St. Lawrence north shore. Arthur Lavoie, 19, of St. Lucie and Sylvio Marquis of St. Louis Du Ha Ha! were the victims. Marquis drowned when he went to Lavoie's assistance.

POLICE COURT

Bernard O'Carroll, 21, Tyendinaga Township, was convicted of being found in possession of intoxicants on Dec. 10th, 1938, and fined $100 and costs or two months imprisonment. He was also fined $10.00 and costs by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the opening of the Quarter's County Police Court. The charge was preferred by Inspector Kelly, while A. E. Collins, K.C., obtained the minimum penalty for the accused as the defence counsel.

Judgment was rendered by His Worship in a case that has been in the courts for some period of time, charging Arthur Baragar, of Picton, with selling merchandise on Sunday, contrary to the Consolidated Statutes of Ontario, Chapter 256, Section 104. After hearing lengthy arguments by Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., and Charles A. Payne, K.C., representing the accused, His Worship found the accused guilty and levied a fine of $10.00 and costs.

Charged with failing to remain or return to the scene of an accident after causing damage to property, Lloyd Hall, 21, Picton, pleaded guilty. Constable Hall conducted evidence introduced before Jacob Goodman, counsel for the accused, asked for the minimum penalty as he wished to introduce additional defence testimony. The latter was enlarged for one week.

Several Highway Traffic cases for offences such as speeding, passing careless driving were heard. Fines were collected in every incident.

FINED 10 SHILLINGS FOR DISTURBANCE

London, July 27—(CP)—William Curtin, Irish Laborer, was fined 10 shillings in police court today for causing a disturbance in Hyde Park last night.

Addressing 500 hostile listeners after yesterday bombings in King's Cross and Victoria Stations, Curtin declared the Irish Republican Army was the symbol of justice while the Union Jack symbolized "blood murders, famine and atrocities".

Ottawa Oarsmen At Royal Henley First Time in 6 Yrs.

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Four Ottawa oarsmen returned to the Royal Canadian Henley regatta today after an absence of six years and made an impressive showing in the opening program of the 1939 edition of the classic.

Ottawa, Detroit Rowing Club and Argonaut crews qualified for their 160-pound crews of four for this afternoon's finals and Don Pond placed one-two in the first heat, eliminating Toronto Argonauts, and Ottawa defeated St. Catharines in the second heat.

Pond, who failed to shake up their crew just before race-time Tuesday, was Mahoney failed to make the weight. They were replaced at No. 2 and 3 positions by Don Pond and Argos.

Argos made a race of it for the first half-mile but altered an erractic course after that when Detroit and Ottawa took over the leadership. The Michigan crew finished two lengths ahead of Dons and 10 lengths ahead of Argos.

Detroit's time was 8:04 and this was considered fast for the course. Ottawa's powerful four that had qualified for the semi-finals at St. Catharines. Time of the second heat was 7:57 and Dons won by more than three lengths.

Trapped in their automobile when it plunged off a bridge into the Gatineau River at Farm Point, 12 miles north of Ottawa, Capt. William A. Duffey, 56-year-old Ottawa Fire Department chief, and Mrs. Frieda Cole were drowned last night.

Driving up the Gatineau Valley, Captain Duffey turned out to pass a truck and his car ripped through the guard rail on a bridge and dropped six feet into the river.

The other double drowning was in the Nord Est River at St. Lucie, near Mcmonagy far down the St. Lawrence north shore. Arthur Lavoie, 19, of St. Lucie and Sylvio Marquis of St. Louis Du Ha Ha! were the victims. Marquis drowned when he went to Lavoie's assistance.

FASCIST GOV'T SEEN AS THREAT

Herridge Called Leader by Aberhart Warns Canada of Fascist Tendencies

Armena, Alta., July 27.—(CP)—A warning that Canada is threatened with Pascist government and a prediction the Dominion Government will be swept from power at the polls on about 10 cents to 60 cents were split—slight changes today by Hon. W. D. Herridge.

The Founder of the New Democracy addressed a meeting at the stated centres before a crowd of 1,500 at a Red Deer picnic yesterday and in this village 45 miles southeast of Edmonton. It was the first time Mr. Herridge has been in Alberta and the first platform appearance together of the leaders of the new democracy and Social Credit.

Social Credit leader, Premier Aberhart, referred to Mr. Herridge as "our leader". Mr. Aberhart said the New Democracy "must be bound to assert itself behind Mr. Herridge in the great movement right across Canada."

Warns of Fascist Tendency

Mr. Herridge asserted Canadians are threatened with Fascist Government and a Fascist Dictatorship especially if religion and race unless they oust the present Government at the next Dominion election.

The former Canadian Minister to Washington predicted the Dominion Government would cut the present wheat price of 60 cents a bushel for No 1 Northern basis Fort William to 10 cents "when they get over their fright" caused by the strong resentment of western farmers.

When the Dominion Government was overthrown, he said, it would be to set the price at 60 cents a bushel, "the righteous indignation of the whole Canada will have them out of their funkholes," the New Democracy Chieftain asserted.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Feptona Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you may have it and not know it. Never get a cold—never have a headache—you can feel as if you had iced in your legs, fingers, head and body.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. Then you get that "dragged out" feeling, appetite fades away and you're thrown to coddle stomachs in fear and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of blood to supply the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding to the stairs as if you were climbing an Alp. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was reading Paul Peppy in Submareen Y-87 and ma was starting to do the bridge problem and pop was smoking and blinking in his private chair, saying, I'm a sap. I'm soft headed, I ought to hire myself out to the World's Fair as the most colossal bonehead on earth.

Now Willyum dont exaggerate, what's a matter? ma said, and pop said, I did something this afternoon that entitles me to the honors prominent nitch in the Hall of Dopes, I ought to have my head examined, I ought to be put away for safe keeping.

You ought to nothing of the kind, we all make mistakes, that's why we're human for land sakes, what did you do? ma said, and pop said, I loaned 10 dollers to a dead beat named Jim Tindleman, he already owed me $ and I'd sworn up and down and through and across that I'd never let him have another cent if his life depended on it. In fact especially if his life depended on it, and then I was dum and cowardly-enough to loan him another 10-spots. I'm a- moron, if I'd gone to a school for backward children I'd still be there and I'd proberly be better off, only a congenial dumbell makes the same mistake twice in the same place.

Now Willyum he'll proberly pay you back when you least expect it, ma said, and pop said, That's any time from now on, and I said, sure pop, O, he cant owe it to you forever, because I was reading in the paper about the sun losing scent of its heat every day on account of wasteing so much by throwing it off, and after it loses enough the world will get so cold it will come to a end, and he cant owe you any money after that, can, pop?

No, my beemish boy, you fill my declining days with hope at the rate of a drop every 5 months, reas your book, pop said,

Wich I did.

MANION

Reduce Cost is Aim

"Our most important job in the realm of internal policy," said Col. Drew, "is to reduce the cost and confusion of governments, the expenditures of Dominion, Provincial and Municipal governments can and must be substantially reduced if we are to have lasting prosperity.

"The two leaders spoke at a picnic arranged by the National Conservative Association of Western Ontario on the heights overlooking Lake Erie. At night both attended a reception and dance of the junior organization, the Canada First Conservative Clubs.

In his address Dr. Manion dealt at length with the proposal for a national government which he said was appearing in some newspapers and in letters to the press.

Gov't. Record Not Good Claim

The natural leader for such a government, he said, would seem to be Prime Minister Mackenzie King with his 180 followers in the House of Commons. But, he asked, how could Mr. King form any "new government than he has given with the added support of the 40 Conservatives in the House?

Dr. Manion suggested that the government's record was not such as to lead anyone to think that a national government under Mr. King's leadership would accomplish much. The King government had done little with the problems of unemployment, youth, taxation and the railways other than play political with them.

"I suggest the advocates of a national government haven't thought the matter through," he said; "it would eventually lead to socialism."

Ward War Wages

Dr. Manion declared the Conservative creed of democracy and capitalism must be backed up by sincere efforts to correct defects in the system. The party's aim should be work, wages and security for all.

He urged the party to get its candidates in the field as soon as possible in readiness for a general election, which he predicted "in all probability" would come in October. Every Canadian government that had taken a full five-year term had been defeated and he did not believe Mr. King would choose to go five years.

On Ottawa last night Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he had reached no decision on the date of a general election. He said conditions in Europe would not permit a dissolution of parliament at the present time.)

UNCERTAINTY

Nothing Early—Election

Many consider the general elections will be definitely put off until next year, however, because of Mr. Mackenzie King's announcement last night that a by-election would be held in Calgary West on Sept. 25 to fill the seat left vacant by the resignation of Hon. R. J. Manion. Present former Conservative Prime Minister has retired to Montreal last winter. It is believed unlikely there will be general elections in October or November right on the heels of a single seat contest.

In regard to the European situation, the Prime Minister said there had been improvement and he hoped it would continue. "I don't think we should anticipate anything in any case," he said, "and if we decide what we may do in one instance in the event of war we may be asked to decide what we should do in other things. In any case, no imagine parliament would have to authorize it, particularly if it involved expenditures."

Receiving Consideration

Parliament itself can be summoned as fully as possible on all questions relating to peace and war and the government should not commit parliament in advance to any important course of action, said the Prime Minister. In this connection Mr. King said the suggestion that British children be brought to Canada in the event of war is receiving consideration.

Mr. King announced that Dr. Joseph Hirsh, chairman of the Royal Commission inquiring into Dominion-Provincial relations, had informed him the report of the commission, which held sessions across Canada from November, 1937, until last winter, would not be ready for distribution until after the new Prime Minister declared it was the intention that the report of the voluminous report, in French and English, should be made available simultaneously to all the provincial governments and the Dominion government.

Lapointe as Secretary

Justice Minister Lapointe, it also was announced, will take the additional portfolio of Secretary of State until the return of a permanent successor to the late Hon. Fernand Rinfret should he resign. Mr. Rinfret died in Los Angeles July 12, and, as Secretary of State, Mr. Lapointe will handle the accumulated routine in that department immediately.

The Canadian Wheat Board will not act as a central selling agency for the western wheat pools this year, said Trade Minister Euler, chairman of the cabinet wheat committee. The committee met yesterday.

The decision means simply that the Wheat Board will not handle wheat delivered to it and the co-operative organizations must make their own arrangements for selling wheat delivered to them. The pools had asked that the Board market the wheat delivered to the pools.

Under the decision made, farmers who harvest more than 5,000 bushels will be able to sell 5,000 bushels to the Wheat Board on the basis of a 70-cent price under the Wheat Board Act and may sell the remainder of their crop through their cooperatives on the basis of 66 cents a bushel.

DRAW SEARCHERS TO SIDE BY FIRE

F. G. Lambert of Chicago Lost in Bush Uses Fire to Inform Searchers

Fort Frances, Ont., July 27—(CP)—F. G. Lambert, 53-year-old Chicagoan, while lost in the bush country 55 miles northwest of here Sunday, calmly lit a fire which drew searchers to his side.

Lambert had flown with D. K. McMillan, Chicago, when he was crossing a portage in the wild lake and mountain country on a fishing trip. He was lost for more than 12 hours.

Two squads of forest rangers, in addition to two pilots, Jim Taylor, Fort Frances, and Jimmy Dalahay, Fort Frances, formed a search party for the missing man. Provincial Crown Attorney district when McMillan brought word of his disappearance here.

Pilots found Lambert beside his tent in good shape, except for some fly bites and a slight hunger. They dropped food and plasma in a lake in the vicinity and brought him here.

Lambert said he was not panicky, but he had badly blistered his feet, and his legs were scratched and one toe bruised. He had no idea anybody was worried about him.

The Ontario Forestry Branch was not notified of his disappearance until Mrs. Lambert phoned from Chicago early Monday. She apparently had been informed by McMillan's wife. With the break of dawn two planes and two groups of Rangers went out on the search.

SCOTLAND YARD

Killed on Honeymoon

The most serious bombing yesterday was at Victoria railway station, where Donald Campbell, Edinburgh University lecturer on his way home from a Paris honeymoon with his bride of a few months, lost his life. Mrs. Campbell was injured seriously. In all, 15 persons were injured there and five at Victoria Station in the earlier explosion. Both explosions occurred in cloakrooms where parcels were checked.

At Victoria, crowds raised an angry shout of "down with the Irish" when Scotland Yard announced about a man who declared the Irish might be right in their campaign for a unified Ireland with abolition of the separate government for the north. Police had to hustle him away.

No one was injured in three Liverpool bombings, but one explosion wrecked a refuse bridge over a railway, halting large traffic to Leeds. Another blew out the front of a district post office and a third blasted a mailbox.

Bread Powers Given

The new anti-I.R.A. bill gives police broad search powers and provides for deportation of undesirables. In asking for its passage, Sir Samuel Hoare said the measure apparently was inspired by foreign organizations timed to coincide with international crises.

Scotland Yard men and military intelligence services are planning a lightning drive against the I.R.A. Passage by the House of Lords is yet to be completed.

Police officials said some 5,000 suspected I.R.A. members or sympathizers are under watch.

Chief Inspector Wensley, author of the Daily Mail, saying: "Tempers are rising again in Ireland. The new outrages are no longer to be dismissed with a tolerant shrug of the shoulders."

CANADA'S CROPS

In Quebec Province yesterday temperatures soared above the 90 mark. Humidities were high and a near-record water-consumption was reported in Montreal. Three Rivers wilted at the 93 mark and Quebec City registered 90. Beaches and swimming pools throughout the province swarmed with adults and children, escaping the torrid oppression of urban areas.

No Serious Bush Fires

No serious bush fires are burning in Eastern Canada, but there was general agreement among forestry men that only extreme vigilance could prevent repetition of small outbreaks in Quebec and Ontario, kindling into major conflagrations.

In the Maritime Provinces the weather was "warm and sticky". Thunderstorms with colder lags and the area generally escaped much of the suffering suffered by inland provinces.

The weatherman forsaw thundershowers for many parts of the country. Western Ontario was the only region to get fleeting respite in this form yesterday. At most points the rainfall was "scarcely enough to lay the dust" and the heat wave continued unabated.

Under Control

Scores of small forest fires in Northern, Western and Central Ontario gave forestry officials a 24-hour task. All were believed under control but fire-fighters and airplanes stayed geared for an emergency as an all-forest-beat made each minor outbreak a potential danger-spot.

Ontario farmers and fruit growers watched their prospects of a good harvest dwindle with every sunny, rainless hour. In eight Southern Ontario counties a great tobacco crop wilted steadily as experts said only immediate rain could restore their full value.

Sirens Warn

The middle and east side of the city bore the brunt of the "damage" last night, it was said. The first sirens sounded at 6:50 p.m. and the streets emptied as if before a hurricane. Thousands were held upon their way home, for buses and street cars stopped and conductors herded their fares into air raid cellars.

Thousands of volunteer auxiliary men or others unfit for military service were allotted as apportioned places to drill in caring for the "wounded" and "gashed," "repairing" water mains, removing "dead" and other tasks common in war time.

The middle of the city presented a curious sight at the height of the attack. Buildings poured forth specially manufactured smoke while red flares added to the simulation of bullfights, sex afire by bombs. Delmations like exploding bombs could be heard.

And from the shelters below stirring wail came the call:

"Have all the gassed and wounded been brought in?"

Paper Suggests Abrogation of 9-Power Treaty

Reckless Act of Hostility by U. S. Against Japan Arouses Sharp Resentment Says Army Newspaper

FEAR ARMS EMBARGO

Observers Feel U. S. Stand Serves as "Go Slow" Signal and Will Strengthen Britain's Hand in Europe

Tokyo, July 28—(AP)—Abrogation of the nine-power treaty "without further ado" was suggested today by the newspaper Okumin, considered the organ of the army and ultra-nationalistic elements, in an editorial on United States denunciation of the Japanese trade treaty.

"Such a reckless act of hostility toward Japan by the United States has aroused deep resentment," said Kokumin. "Opinion is rising in favor of abrogation of the nine-power treaty without further ado. In that case the United States would be prepared to face a situation in which her rights and interests in China can no longer be looked after."

Signed in Washington Feb. 6, 1922 by Japan, China, Great Britain, the United States, Canada and other powers, the nine-power treaty pledges the signatories to respect China's integrity and to "promote intercourse between China and the other powers upon the basis of equality and opportunity."

Forecasting for aviation! Two forecasts a day seem to answer the requirements of ordinary business but they will not do for air navigation. To protect 40,000 miles of airways in the United States, forecasts are now made every 6 hours for a period of 8 hours in advance. These forecasts include ceiling heights, visibility, character of fog, if any, hail, icing, thunderstorms and squalls when expected. In addition special forecasts are made when conditions are changing rapidly, and if necessary forecasts for a longer period than 8 hours are made. To do all this forecasters must have frequent intervals maps and charts of the weather over the United States, Canada and the adjacent oceans.

$50 Millions Gold Treasure Now in Mexico?

Boxes Reported Landed—Gold to be Used for Spanish Refugees Rumored

Mexico City, July 28.— (AP)— Spanish Republican refugees starting a fresh life in Mexico may have a hidden $50,000,000 gold treasure to dip into in getting on their economic feet.

The hoard was brought to Mexico on the secret cargo of a pleasure yacht, informed persons say, and will be used to start a bank. The bank will make loans to Spaniards who fled into France from General Francisco Franco's nationalist armies and finally reached a Mexican haven.

The gold was taken out of Spain by the former Spanish Republican government. Accounts from Paris say there was a quarrel between former Premier Juan Negrin and Dr. Augusto Barcia Trelles over the first clue to the cargo of the yacht Vita, which arrived at Vera Cruz, March 30.

Hidden in Mexico City

Huge boxes were unloaded secretly under the guard of government officials and brought to an unknown destination in Mexico City. It was said today the boxes contained gold.

The Government, which has not recognized Franco's regime, is silent regarding the find, while Paris reports say were placed in temporary custody of President Lazaro Cardenas.

Reports are that the reason Negrin was "deposed" as Republican Junta in Paris yesterday was to be opposed establishment of the Bank, wanting to use the money to launch a campaign against the Franco Regime at an opportune time.

Nearly 8,000 refugees have arrived from concentration camps in France, some 3,000 came yesterday in the French liner Mexique.

AIRPLANE FACTORY TO EMPLOY 200

Heiculode Aircraft of Canada to Produce Within 6 Months

Victoria, July 28—(CP)—M. E. Heizer of London, England, and Walter Heizer of Heizer Aircraft of Canada will construct a factory near Victoria airport to produce their new production of airplanes.

Mr. Heizer said yesterday the plant would be producing within six months 20 planes a day under a production plan similar to that used in the United States, Great Britain and Canada.

A training school will be operated in connection with the factory, he said, where men in engineering, draftsmanship, drawing and all phases of airplane and engine construction.

Mr. Heizer said the principles, design and production of the machines to be produced will be such that they can be used for training purposes with light engines or as fighting planes with powerful engines that are capable of travelling at 400 miles an hour.

Occidentals Living Beyond British and French Concessions Receive Notes

Tientsin, July 28—(AP)—Britons residing outside the British and French concessions received letters today warning them to leave Tientsin or die.

Signed by the "Anti-British National Salvation League," the letters read:

"British friends, you white people will have no foothold in this Oriental paradise. . . . If you value your life you should choose the earliest opportunity to evacuate Tientsin. Should you waver, hesitate, for your career will end your life."

Peiping, July 28—(AP)—Two hundred Chinese guerrillas penetrated during the night to the gates of Peiping, historic walled city site of Peiping and abducted 28 Chinese, including a newspaper man, the Japanese-sponsored administration. The captives included several wealthy Chinese.

Ninety Japanese soldiers were killed Monday in a battle with guerrillas at Wenchuan, 30 miles from Peiping.

16,000 POLICE READY FOR DRIVE

Countrywide Round - Up of Suspected I. R. A. Terrorists Started

London, July 28—(CP)— Sixteen thousand police were ready today for a swift, countrywide round-up of suspected Irish Republican Army terrorists.

Those arrested will be deported under Britain's new anti-violence act or questioned in connection with recent bombings. Twenty-one persons were wounded and one killed as the result of seven bomb explosions in London Wednesday. There were three blasts in Manchester and one in Liverpool.

Additional powers for expulsion of suspected terrorists were voted Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare introduced the royal assent to the emergency bill is expected this afternoon. Authorities indicated the royal assent would put into action a relentless campaign against the I. R. A. extremists and sympathizers whose hope it is to force the establishment of a united Irish republic.

A preliminary list of more than 40 men and women may be expelled from the country at once was studied by officials. Government sources said about 2,000 suspects have been under surveillance pending completion of the round-up. In fact.

A close watch was kept on ports of embarkation for Ireland. Officials said some undesirables already have started for Ireland.

In Dublin officials of the Department of Justice said they did not all the deporters from England might be permitted re-entry. The I. R. A. is outlawed in Eire.

Canadian Girl Heads Bill at Concert Attended by the Kents

News Story Mailed in London Wednesday Delivered by Trans-Atlantic Plane This Morning to New York—Canadians Presented to Duke and Duchess of Kent

The following news story was mailed in London Wednesday and delivered in New York this morning after being transported by trans-Atlantic clipper.

By FRED BACKHOUSE

London, July 26 (CP) by Trans-Atlantic Mail).—A tall and dazzling young Canadian actress has crowned a short but shining career in London by being chosen to top the bill at a concert attended by the Duke and Duchess of Kent and a host of distinguished guests from many parts of the empire.

Inga Anderssen Sings.

From the galaxy of talent available here, Inga Anderssen, 25-year-old Prince George, B.C., girl was picked for the honor accumulated songs before their Royal Highnesses, the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress of London and the delegates attending the fifteenth congress of Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire.

Miss Anderssen, now charming Londoners in 'The Women', dared sing numbers like 'Oh, Dem! What Can the Matter Be, Nobody Makes a Pass at Me' and 'Put It Down to Glands!' and, in the words of one critic, managed to warm up the chilly night and thunderous twentieth-century Merchant Taylors' Hall before her reception was held.

Overseas delegates to the congress will be the most distinguished many Canadians, were presented to the Duke and Duchess at the end of the concert.

Nearly 300 leading business men from many parts of the Commonwealth were received by the president of the federation, the Earl of Dudley. Then followed a scene reminiscent of glittering pageants that have taken place in the ancient "Old Tallbourhalls" since before the great fire.

EXPECT COOLING WINDS TO BRING NEEDED RAIN

Quebec Province Hard Hit by Severe Electric Storm and Rain

PASTURES BURNED

By The Canadian Press

Some sections of the Dominion already suffering from lack of Western Canada and Ontario today hoped cooling winds from the Arctic regions would bring much-needed rain.

Cooler weather brought comfort to residents of Quebec Province yesterday but with it came severe destruction. A violent electrical storm struck at La Tuque, 150 miles north west of Quebec City.

Crops were severely damaged in the La Tuque area with market gardeners feared their vegetables were ruined. The storm accompanied by hail, lifted roofs from buildings, uprooted trees and smashed windows.

DEEP SHELTERS 30 FEET DOWN "ARE THE SECRET'

Canadian Tells of Making Concrete Air Raid Shelters Safe

SPAIN'S EXPERIENCE

London, July 26 (CP by Trans-Atlantic Airmail) — London's new concrete air raid shelters which look pretty impressive to the layman, but they are not the last word in shelters for Palma, Spain's chief naval base, does not think much of them.

Harry Firbank, Yorkshire-born Canadian engineer who has been on roads, tunnels and bridges in this country, Canada and the United States, said some of the "so-called shelters I've seen since I returned to England would be death traps."

Firbank said that in'twelve months he and his helpers made Palma the safest town in the world". In the last raid 2,000 bombs fell without a stop one of his deep shelters, wiping out whole blocks of buildings, but no one was hurt.

"Deep shelters are the secret," Firbank declared. "We built 30 feet down with a 'bursting' layer of concrete above with entrances at every street corner."

FOREIGN TRADE OF GERMANY FACES SERIOUS TASK

Berlin, July 26 (AP)—Germany's foreign trade is facing a serious task because of increasing foreign competition and boycott measures, the German Institute for Business Research said today in its quarterly review.

Nevertheless, the report said an opinion voiced a year ago that Germany had created a new production limit has not been verified. On the contrary, the report said, her economic activity has increased enormously.

GREAT BRITAIN MAY FOLLOW LEAD OF UNITED STATES

Government May Denounce Treaty With Japan Unless Amicable Settlement of Tientsin Dispute Made

WARNING TO TOKYO

U. S. Gives New Expression to Growing Concern Caused by Acts of Violence

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, July 28 (CP)—A Great Britain may follow the lead of the United States and denounce its commercial treaty with Japan unless an amicable settlement can be reached in Tokyo over the Tientsin incident, authoritative opinion freely expressed in official circles here today.

The action of the United States government in denouncing their treaty (with Japan) has naturally caused concern here, and the British own ideas toward consideration of the situation but this method is attempting to protect their rights and interests in the Far East" one government official declared.

"It may be recalled in this connection that Great Britain's treaty also has a commercial treaty with Japan, dating from 1911.

"While negotiations for settlement of the Tientsin issue are proceeding in Tokyo, there naturally can be no conclusion to favor a course which might prejudice the success of the negotiations. But if examination revealed that similar action to that taken by the United States were necessary, the view is fully canvassed that such action should be excluded here."

Year's Notice Required.

The Anglo-Japanese commercial treaty contains a clause necessitating one year's notice by either country before denouncing it.

If, however, one country has sufficient ground to believe the other is violating the treaty it can be denounced forthwith.

The United States-Japanese conquires six months' notice to denounce the treaty, which is to announce, and that notice was given by Washington Wednesday night.)

The official said that although the United States' action had the appearance of being unilateral, "it would be incorrect to assume that it was taken without regard to the surprise well informed circles here.

"As reports from Washington indicated, there had been prior consultation with other governments before taking the step of making the announcement, but the action taken is regarded in official circles here as that British and American policies in the Far East have been working on closer parallel lines."

Warning To Tokyo.

The Times (independent) said Wednesday's denunciation is a warning to Tokyo that Japanese purchases of munitions supplies in the United States may be cut off.

The United States has "given new expression to the growing concern caused by recurring acts of violence perfected by American citizens and property in China at the hands of the Japanese Army," the Times' chief of events in the Far East," the Times' said.

The denunciation has given a timely encouragement to China which, Washington considers, is fighting Japan, the News Chronicle (liberal) said. "Whether it was so intended or not, he has given the British government an object lesson in Far-Eastern policy."

The Manchester Guardian (Liberal) said:

"It seems a pity that the decision now taken by the United States could not have been anticipated here and in Paris. Before long, perhaps, a more resolute policy might have been possible at Tientsin and Tokyo."

Dictatorships 'Deliver the Goods' But History Says They Don't Last

Rev. M. E. Aubrey of London told the Baptist World Alliance today that "totalitarianism is delivering the goods" but he predicted its decease within a generation. The simple fact of history is that tyrannies do not last".

Democracy, he said, prove ability to solve its problems in order to triumph in the "world conflict with totalitarianism", he asserted. "We must make democracy worth saving."

Amplifying his forecast of defeat for "authoritarianism", the minister declared "In spite of the terrible efficiency of modern systems which brandish liberty, we have no doubt that the inalienable rights of the human soul will sooner or later assert themselves and man's will to be free must win."

Dr. Aubrey, former moderator of the National Council of Free churches of England, addressed delegates from seventeen countries on the opening day of the sixth General Congress of the Baptist World Alliance.

Rev. Carl McIntire of Iowa, Secretary of the German Baptist Conference "will participate in the life of their nation, no matter whether this life is determined by liberal or collective principles and declare and bear the gospel."

Unless the church keep in mind the "extraordinary position it held, constituted, it "not ever out, it will become a party, and then necessarily share the destiny of everything earthly."

ONTARIO POLICE CONFRONTED WITH ANOTHER MYSTERY

Dairy Bookkeeper at Meaford Disappears and Not Seen Since Tuesday

FIFTH IN MONTH

Toronto, July 28—(CP)—Ontario police today were confronted with another missing-man mystery — the fifth within a month and a half—with the disappearance of Roy Treit of Meaford, 120 miles northwest of here. No trace of the 30-year-old bookkeeper has been found since he left his home last Tuesday.

By a coincidence two of the other disappearances concerned dairy employees, both drivers. George Wilson, Bracebridge, vanished June 19 and Edward Stewart, Gravenhurst, July 10. First of the series, Morris Gershon, 56-year-old Toronto poultry dealer and his helper, Murray Cohen, have been missing since June 19.

Police also were unable to / explain the absence of her husband, Wilbur Treit, in his automobile, apparently for the dairy.

Stewart drove his truck into the garage at Gravenhurst, 115 miles north of here saying he would return in 20 minutes. Police think of his absence and the truck was found in a little shanty with its load of milk storage with its full load of milk.

In the cases of Finde and Gershon the trucks carrying sums amounting to $100 or more when he vanished, Finde's wife became alarmed when her husband failed to return from his regular duty of collecting accounts. His empty truck with a deflated tire was later found on a Toronto suburban street.

Gershon's truck was almost out of gas when discovered west of Toronto, where he had gone on a poultry buying expedition.

Red Mars Fails to Respond To Earth Code Message and Music

BED MARS ETC/ Jiwi nf

New York, July 28—(AP)— Mars turned a deaf ear tonight to the swing music last night and just as rigidly ignored a radio broadcast of code sent out into space at a 186,000-mile-a-second clip in an effort to establish a little chat with the 200 million.

Engineers and scientists tried to code message to Mars first—a morse signal, dash-dot, dash-dot, dash-dot—meaning NNN—and when no "answer" came, they tried to warm Mars up with a broadcast of the big red planet of swing music. That didn't produce results either.

So the engineers turned off their 100,000-watt beam shortwave and called it a night. They had hoped the signal might bounce back to Earth and that it would be picked up by a receiver at Hicksville, N. Y.

With the planet closest to earth in 15 years, the New York World's Fair Authority announced it would stage a "defense" against a mythical attack of Martians. The Fountain Lake area was to have been "blacked out" while anti-aircraft guns blazed away at planes overhead.

That didn't work, either. The amusement concessionaires refused to douse their lights, claiming they hadn't been notified of the stunt.

INTRUDER DASHES OUT

Children Revive Injured Boy and Warn Police of Town and County Who Hunt All Night—Wanted Man May be Treated—He is Believed to be Still in Environs of Picton

Picton, Ont., July 28 (Special)— Town and county police threw a cordon around this district Friday and Edward County town last night in an intensive search for a shabbily-dressed transient who launched an unprovoked attack upon eight year old Ralph Hiscock, Toronto, when the youngster distressed him while burglarizing the home of Edward Hawkins, South Street, late yesterday afternoon.

No trace of the afternoon marauder had been discovered at a late hour today.

Young Hiscock who is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins, left with the family shortly after noon. Returning three hours later with a son and daughter of Hawkins, approximately ten and twelve years of age, the lad entered the Hawkins home.

IMPUDENT 'VAGS' GIVEN WARNING

Magistrate LeBel of London Deals With Case of James Kelso, 30

London, Ont., July 28 (CP) — James Kelso, 30-year-old farm worker, was convicted in police court here today of begging. He was fined $25 but took the option of a month in jail.

Magistrate A. M. LeBel said in pronouncing sentence that all "impudent" vagrants could expect little sympathy in the courts. His sentiment came after testimony that Kelso had begged in the business section and had $22 in his possession when arrested. Kelso said he was saving his money to go back to his home in Scotland.

Kelso was arrested a week ago after he had frightened Mrs. Helena Yull, Castlewright street grocer, when he entered her home late last night and had prepared for him.

Mrs. Yull was in the door and asked for a handout," related Mrs. Yull. " I was alone in the store at the time and I was a little nervous. And as I didn't like his looks I went to the front of the store while I prepared a lunch for him.

"Been Both Longer"?

"As I was finishing sandwiches for him, he stuck his head in the door and shouted, 'How much longer? If you're making all those sandwiches you're going needn't bother, because I'm sick of sandwiches." I told him he was rather impudent, and he answered, "You're pretty impudent yourself, remember, I used to have a lot of money one time."

Mrs. Yull said that when she placed half a dozen sandwiches, tomatoes and cucumbers and a bottle of milk before Kelso, he demanded, 'How do I know you're not trying to poison me?'

SCHOOLS OF BASS SEEN IN LAKE

Said to be the largest influx in years, hordes of fighting small-mouthed bass are frequenting the shoals off the southern shores of Prince Edward County in schools so thick, according to a prominent government official.

Fishing with two companions yesterday, the official said that the full quota of eighteen beauties that ranged between two and three pounds apiece, fell to their lures in approximately twenty minutes. At times, he added, the fish-fisherman had a fighting beauty on his hook at the same time.

For the love of the sport, they stayed in the vicinity, hooking upwards of a dozen in an hour and throwing them back.

"I have never seen so many bass at one time in the lake," he commented. "Why, you could see them chasing the live minnows some unfortunate one struck."

BRIEF CASES GIVEN TWO CONSTABLES

Members of the Ontario Provincial Police and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police of the Belleville detachments were presented with Constable Gerrard's Constables D. Carruthers and A. A. Starks with suitably engraved brief cases upon the eve of their departure for Toronto headquarters this evening. Inspector Frank Gardner and Sergeant Harry Thompson, O.P.P., made the presentations for the Provincial Police officers. Constable Carruthers is being transferred to Campbellford while Constable Starks has been moved to the Leaside detachment. The recipients made the customary replies and expressed regret in leaving been removed from the pleasant surroundings of the Belleville detachment.

LITTLE WORK IN WEST WRITES LOCAL MAN

Horace Greeley's famed advice, "Go West, young man", would not be so applicable at present, Mr. Wrayford youth, according to the reports of one local resident who left here and was in receipt of a letter from a Belleville youth who has for some time been journeying through the western provinces in an almost fruitless search for work in the harvest fields.

"The west is swarming with transients, and in spite of the heavy crop, wages are very low. I would not advise any of the boys to come out west looking for work," stated the local man. Wages paid on western farms ranged from $14 to $15.50 per day for help and stooking and $3 per day for threshing, it was stated.

FIELD CROP JUDGING IN STIRLING AREA

Busy for some days past, Gordon Hancock, Peterboro, has completed judging the Field Crop competitions in barley and oats through Stirling section, a competition promoted by the Stirling Agricultural Society. Twenty-one entries were judged by Mr. Hancock, who reported some excellent stands of grain in certain locations in spite of unfavorable conditions.

BROOD SOW SUCCUMBS TO INTENSE HEAT

The first casualty of the current heat-wave occurred yesterday on the farm of Lewis Hughes, Black Creek Road, when a fine pure-bred sow succumbed to the intense heat and dropped dead in the pasture field.

Hughes noticing strange behaviour on the part of the animal, crossed the field to investigate. Watching its heavy breathing from side to side, the sow approached Hughes as he neared it, then turned and away from its owner, its suddenly slumped to the ground where Hughes found it dead, apparently from heart failure caused by the heat.

PART OF HIGHWAY NOW UNDER REPAIR

Construction operations on No. 2 Highway starting at the eastern city limits and which will be continually in take in that part of the highway from Belleville to Marysville, is presently outside of bituminous gravel and rolling operations, it was stated today.

Ten trucks at present are busy hauling gravel from pits at Point Anne. Nothing definite regarding the employment of labor from Belleville or any other district has been arrived at yet, Employment Superintendent W. B. Ross said today.

The work is being done by the Law Construction Company of Toronto, who so far have engaged a few local trucks only.

REAR PARKING LOTS GET DUST TREATMENT

Calcium chloride sprinkled generously by public works department employees in gangways and on the parking lots of the rear of downtown stores yesterday ended the dust nuisance complained of by some of the merchants lately. An estimated 200 pounds of the waterabsorbent chemical was used by the department to end the dryness.

CIVIC BATHING BEACH HOLDS LARGEST CROWD

Belleville's civic bathing beach at the east city limits has attained its height of summer popularity this week while city heat continues and last evening the beach held its largest crowd, an estimated attendance of over 300 residents of all ages who splashed, and swam in the waters of the bay. Scores of cars parked along the beach gave the scene a lively air until well toward midnight.

ESCAPE FROM HEAT TO VICTORIA PARK

Heat-harried residents of the city and district turned to the city's parks last evening to escape yet another evening and night of the sustained heat wave which has resulted in stifling misery and perspiring discomfort to the general citizenry.

Last evening Victoria Park held its largest crowd of grass sitters and strollers who wandered countless and hailess, with sleeves rolled up and shirt necks open to the breeze. Earlier in the evening several families had deserted family dining rooms and enjoyed their evening meal on the picnic tables of the park. As dusk descended blankets were unrolled on the grass and many remained to the small hours, others, calmly settled for a night's repose, slumber which was limited in the open by the drone of boat motors on the bay.

DROUGHT REACHES TO CITY GARDEN PLOTS

Farmers of the district may be watching crops burn in the fields and berries harden on the bushes due to the excessive drought, but in the city smaller acreage gardeners, dependent, most of them on hand pails and quarter sections of land for winter potatoes and vegetables are experiencing the same disheartening conditions met with in many a decade, according to reports this week of older residents.

The potato; the bean and cucumber and root crop will be about the only crops to survive the heat, it has been if we had been given rain a week or more ago, stated Mr. Thirlland, Dundas Street, who this morning exhibited a fine acreage of potatoes whose early promise has now disappeared in burned stalks and leaves. "They'll be smaller than marbles when they are dug," it was stated.

"As much as you want to water the crops in the back yard with the domestic hose, we need rain. There is nothing like rain to make things grow," declared Mr. Stanley Greener, who reports considerable damage to crops from watering and care of his small crop.

Cheesemakers Complain Against Deductions for Short Weight by Exporters

District cheesemakers registered strenuous complaint at the regular boarding of the Belleville Cheese Board last evening against the deductions by Montreal exporters for short weight of cheese shipped from this section.

Deductions as high as one pound per cheese have been reported by makers, who declared these deductions made in spite of the fact allowances from one half to one and one half pounds per cheese were being made by the shippers.

"Some of the makers are losing as much as 100 pounds of cheese in a single shipment through these deductions, and they can't keep this up," declared one spokesman for the Stirling group of makers, which group urged action of the Belleville Board on the matter.

"We understand the Belleville Board has appointed official Board member and we would like to have all our cheese shipments certified by him," requested the spokesman.

"If dirty boards are found in a bit of good," declared W. H. McCreary, local buyer, "Montreal buyers believe the Montreal exporters would accept his certificates if they believed the cheese was short-weight.

"Anyhow, I don't think makers have been making enough allowance for evaporation. This is unavoidable, when cheese is shipped by iced cars, and I don't believe that the three quarter pound allowance made by the factories is enough to make up for this shrinkage."

"There hasn't been a bit of short-weight trouble locally, so the Montreal men must be right on their weights," added Mr. McCreary.

Belleville's tourist camp has received high commendation of those who stop, "Many of them are repeaters," who annually return to Belleville, glad of the stopover and the renewal of friendships formed in previous trips. All, or nearly all, voice their intention of returning to the city next year as they pull out after a refreshing night's sleep, headed either east or west.

Magistrate Butler Dismisses Charge Under City By-law

Holding the City Council had imposed a licence fee not within their powers, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today dismissed a charge of peddling and selling meat in the city of Belleville preferred against J. D. White, Smithfield cattle dealer by the city police court, when the evidence in the matter had been produced last week, when White was charged with delivering coal to a Hillcrest Ave., address.

In giving his judgment in the matter today Magistrate Butler said that the only event in the prosecution under this bylaw; the bylaw is ineffective as it presumes to impose a penalty not within the powers of the city council and I therefore dismiss the case against Mr. White."

Immediately Charles A. Payne, K.C., representing the defendant, rose in the matter of costs of the proceedings. "Under the Summary Convictions Act the costs in such proceedings must be affixed the complainant when such cases are dismissed, I believe", suggested Mr. Payne as he asked, who had signed the information against his client.

"I did", replied Chief Kidd as clerk of the court.

"I though maybe some of our city officials might have been responsible, but don't bother with the costs", concluded Mr. Payne in a rather sarcastic tone.

A. B. Colling, K.C., City Solicitor, who conducted the prosecution in the first instance, was not present when the charge was dismissed today.

Picton Motorist Narrowly Escapes Serious Injury

TWEED, (Special)—A Picton motorist, William Kleinsteuber, narrowly escaped serious injuries on Tuesday night, when his motor car went out of control and crashed into a rock-cut. Only the guard rails prevented the motor car from going over a steep embankment. The car was almost a complete wreck but the driver suffered only minor injuries. Traffic Officer Hatch of Marmora, conducted an investigation.

Last of Most Famous Trio of Medical World Passes Away

Rochester, Minn., July 28 (AP)—Dr. William J. Mayo, son of a country doctor who trained him to become a great surgeon, died today from an ailment upon the treatment of which he gained much of his fame. He was 79.

Stricken with sub-acute perforating gastric ulcer, "Dr. Will" was operated on April 23 at the Mayo Clinic here, founded by his father and his late brother "Dr. Charlie" and himself more than half a century ago.

His death removed within a short space of a few months the last of a famous a trio as the medical world has known. Already, Dr. Charles H. Joseph, who stood across an operating table from "Dr. Will" on a quarter of a century ago, was called by him "easily the first" of all his "splendid assistants" and Dr. Henry S. "Dr. Charlie" died in Chicago from pneumonia.

Felt Poorly Last Spring.

"Dr. Will" began feeling poorly last spring and cut short a vacation with his family in Tucson, Ariz., to return here. He was on a similar trip last spring when he first began to feel poorly, but returned to the Arizona metropolis.

An operation, such as "Dr. Will" had performed hundreds of times was decided upon, with Dr. Waltman Walters, Rochester physician, and the wife of Dr. Donald Balfour, also of Rochester.

Camp Meeting Opens In Self-Contained Camp Near Cobourg

The Lakeshore Camp Meeting began its fourth annual season yesterday and will continue with three main services every day over the 12th of August, when the camp grounds is located one half mile south of Highway No. 2, two miles east of Cobourg. The camp is a veritable self-contained town with a large auditorium in which the services are held, several dormitories, a large restaurant, tea room, lunch room and dining room, and a large tent for recreational purposes. Many camp in their own tents and trailers.

Situated on Lake Ontario, cool breezes give physical refreshment on the hottest days. The speakers in charge have secured speakers, who it is said, rank with the best of British Gospel preachers on the continent. Pastor J. O. Savell is the camp president, and he is also pastor of a large church in Columbus, Georgia, and is said to have an unusual gift for "deep south" ministry. Pastor D. P. Hotoway is the evening speaker, and is also speaker. Though also a native of the deep south, coming from Kentucky, he has lived many years been pastor of an outstanding church in Cleveland, Ohio, and is known as a leader of the working class, it is said to be a forceful speaker, though in North America. It supports in full fifteen missionaries, its ministers and workers alone move than $20,000 annually.

The above guest speakers will be assisted by Miss L. Warne of Petersboro, who will conduct meetings daily for children with the "Sing-turegraph", and more than 90 ministers, including Rev. Dr. Scherer, Rev. E. P. O. Kulbeck of the Evangel Temple of this city is in charge of the Book Room of the Camp.

Wanders into Woods Child is Found Munching Berries

Posse's Four Hour Hunt Locates Lois Kerr of Elmbrook

Picton, Ont., July 28 (Special) — A four hour search for the missing Lois Kerr, toddling daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nesbitt Kerr, Elmbrook farmers, ended successfully this afternoon when the child was found enjoying herself picking berries in the woods of an adjacent farm, owned by her grandfather.

The child wandered away from her home in the early afternoon and her failure to return alarmed her parents. Neighbors were telephoned but none had seen the missing child.

A posse of neighbors and friends was formed and scoured the surrounding countryside for two hours. Finally the little girl was found in the farthest corner of the woods, happily munching berries and entirely indifferent to the fact that she had created a mild furore when she decided to go berry-picking. She was lunhurt and showed no ill effects of her four-hour "sojourn in the woods.

DOG OWNERS FACE MAGISTRATE

Only Costs and Licence, Total of $2.75, Assessed Against Each Tardy Dog-Tax-Payer

Eleven citizens were summoned into city police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today, charged with unlawfully harboring dogs without first having obtained a dog license, contrary to city ordinances. Convictions were registered in ten of the eleven cases, one failing to respond to his name when called.

"As these are the first cases of this type to be presented this year the court will only assess the costs of the Justice of the Peace, who signed the information, providing, however, each of you procure your dog licenses forthwith," ordered the magistrate. The fine and license amounted to $2.75 in all.

One citizen's name was called for the violation of the dog tax bylaw as the accused was walking in the door.

"I just got here in time, I guess," retorted the man as he pleaded guilty. Later in the body of the court the man was ordered to leave for disturbing the proceedings by talking too loudly.

Car Driving Charge

Garnet Richmond appeared on a charge of careless driving. "We have a witness coming in Montreal and could not advise him of today's proceedings, therefore I would like to have an enlargement for one week," requested Charles A. Payne, K.C., representing the accused.

"That's a fine suggestion, it's too hot a day for a prolonged court proceedings," added Crown Attorney Donnan, as the magistrate also agreed.

A local citizen appeared on a charge of keeping a vicious dog which was alleged to have attacked a man named Hagerman on Dundonald Street. The complainant failed to have bitten him recently. "According to the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1937, the owner of a dog biting a person must show cause why the said dog should not be destroyed," revealed Mr. Donnan.

Ormonde Butler, appearing for the defendant, held that Mr. Hagerman had no right on the accused's property in the first place. Mr. Hagerman was endeavouring to sell wood, by soliciting from door to door, when attacked. His worship reserved judgment until Monday.

LITERATURE

Special emphasis has been laid on a knowledge and appreciation of literature in the new course for study for grades IX, X and XI, beginning with the opening of schools in Ontario in the month of September.

Teachers are advised as follows by the Minister of Education:

"The teacher of English should be well aware of the power literature has to shape the thought and taste of its readers. It is a subtle and powerful force in building a nation.

"For literature is the record of a people's experience of life. It preserves the best expression of what men and women have enjoyed or borne, have done or have dreamed of doing. Whoever comes to know English literature will have his thoughts and feelings cast in the mould of that great tradition. He will become in spirit a member of the English-speaking race.

"It is important then, that as rich and varied a selection be made for the pupils' reading as their age and knowledge will permit. More attention, too, should be paid to developing an appreciation of what is read, for not only the tastes but the emotions of growing boys and girls are strongly influenced by what they read and enjoy. To the end of art is understanding and enjoyment."

Ottawa Journal praises this as an admirable development in education, calling the habit of reading well learned in as pertain the greatest asset that can be carried to maturity from schooldays. "The legacy of our literature is the tie that binds the generations and preserves the continuity of thought and experience. Those to whom its glories are revealed possess inexhaustible resources for the leisure hours of a lifetime and if nothing else remains of school years education will bring rich dividends."

Like other subjects literature study has its disciplinary value.

BRITISH ARMY YOUTHS

Windsor Star points out that British boys of twenty are serving in the armies of peacetime and defence conscription, to which they were called a week ago, like the life of the camp and drill. Food is good and discipline has less rigor than in wartime or in days gone by in the regular army. "Then again, the young men find that the uniforms, badges and buttons help them make a hit with the girls, not a factor to be dismissed lightly by healthy youth of 20 years."

The Star points out that this type of life has its compensations over civilian life—there is no need to worry about holding a job, no fear about not getting up in time to go to work for the buglers will look after that.

The paper goes on to show that there is a vast difference between being in the army in peacetime and in time of war. In the one there is comparative comfort and in safety. It is something else again to live in vermin-infested dug-outs awaiting the landing of a shell or orders to go over the top.

Everyone hopes these young soldiers of the King will never be called upon to engage in actual warfare, that somehow out of the morass of international politics and of armament gluts, armament, a way may be found to assure peace and security with justice. But if war should come not only these youths but the entire population would experience such a radical change in the manners of life that no one would relish it but would endure it only for the sake of their country and until she had crushed an enemy who had broken the peace.

While all men and women know of war from the experiences and records of the Great War, they do not know what a new war, if it were possible, would be like. Even the Spanish war cannot lead one very far in guessing what life would be like. So man and woman and boy may well pray that they be spared the outbreak of such a quarrel as would upset civilization.

A TWO-YEAR-OLD STORY

Japan has been fighting for two years in China and the end is nowhere to be seen on the horizon.

One writer thinks Japan can stand another two-year period of war, because the people lead frugal lives and Japan is deriving a revenue from occupied China.

On the other hand the Chinese who have a history going back far beyond that of Japan, placidly look on the scene and are prepared for a war of attrition if it lasts for many years.

While Japan holds a good share of China's territory, she has to hang on in dead earnest, fearful of letting go. Japan has to fight on, and make the Chinese fight, but they will fight as they will.

"PITCHFORK" SMITH IS DEAD, and another interesting character in the newspaper world drifts out of life to take up the greatest assignment of all, what lies beyond the grave! Of this assignment he has always been eagerly curious and has written considerable copy on the subject. Wilford R. Smith, editor and publisher of the once-famous "Pitchfork" and a mighty man in North Texas.

"Pitchfork" Smith was an old-time newspaper editor, who dressed to fit his conception of the part. He stood six feet four and always wore a black suit, ten gallon black hat, flowing black Windsor tie, and a flowing old-fashioned black coat which flapped below his knees. "Pitchfork" Smith was sufficient unto himself, and only one other man did he look up to, the editor of The Iconoclast, William Cowper Brann. Brann died and was gathered to his fathers, but "Pitchfork" Smith always remembered and honored his birthday. One birthday "Pitchfork" Smith drank deeply and visited the graveyard at Waco, Texas, where Brann is buried. All night the mourner sat there, ever and anon taking a drink from a large bottle. For every drink he took he poured one on the grave of his friend, and a good time was had by all present and accounted for.

"Pitchfork" Smith was the son of a preaching farmer, when he wasn't farming he was preaching. The son took a course at a barber's college and returned to the farm to cut hair and hay as occasion demanded. Next he became a country school teacher that vantage point where the whole world beckons its favorite sons to high, or otherwise, office, mostly as newspaper men. Wilford Smith taught school for three years, saved his money and with a total capital of $90 started a weekly newspaper. The newspaper did not seem to fill a long felt want and folded, then he became a book agent for three years, and studied law. He quit the law, because, he said, all the lawyers he saw were drunk, and a newspaperman told him if he wrote he would starve to death, but, meantime, would always have a lot of fun. He founded a magazine called "Plain Talk," which was suppressed for talking too plain and inciting race riots. Then he changed the name to "The Pitchfork", because the pitchfork is the poor man's implement; you can fight with it or work with it."

Missouri became too hot for "The Pitchfork" so it was moved to Dallas, Texas. Editor Smith's most quoted editorial was entitled "When You Die You Will Live Again," which won him a life-time advertising contract from a patent medicine company besides an order for thousands of copies which were distributed to every barbershop in the United States. Excerpts:

"Is death a door or a wall?

"I hear the pagan maiden sing her wild love song until its wailing notes sweep the stars into one tear of pity for her breaking heart.

"But no answer comes . . . . . .

If this natural impulse to live after physical death cannot be relied upon, then life itself is a myth and the starry blazonry of the midnight sky is a flaunting lie . . . . . .

"Nature is not a cheat and Life is not a Flirtation. Our hope for immortality cannot be a collosal joke!"

Among the many odd actions which brought "Pitchfork" Smith notoriety was his appearance during a church service at Fort Worth to accuse the minister of murder. The congregation became threatening but he challenged them en masse, saying he could lick them all. Arrested, charged with disturbing public religious worship, he conducted his own defence and was acquitted on the ground that the service "did not constitute religious worship."

As "Pitchfork" Smith became older he became poorer and his friends fewer, while the demand for the old-time crusading and slambanging newspaper faded. He made friends with stray dogs, bought them tags and fed them, but his oldest friend was liquor and this friend did him in. His funeral was conducted by The Elks ("my church") and the Bill of Rights read over his grave.

"Yes, herrings."

Then I must begin all over again: I have been reckoning in haddocks.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

JULY 28TH., 1919.

Judge McKeown of Renfrew is paying a short visit to his mother, Mrs. Nell McLean, in this city.

Mr. Lewis Clement, formerly of Belleville, now of Rochester, N.Y., accompanied by his wife and son, John, are visiting friends here.

Mr. Angus Buchanan, physical director of the local Y.M.C.A., and Mr. Albert E. Dunsberry, will leave tomorrow to attend the Y.M.C.A. Summer School at Lake Couchiching.

Miss Charlotte Edwards of Pilsburg, Pa., a former resident of Belleville, is the guest of Mrs. Cronk, Albert Street.

30 YEARS AGO

JULY 28TH., 1909.

Mr. O. Dolan is spending today in Gananoque.

Dr. O. A. Marshall has returned from Scranton, Pa.

Mr. Walter T. Taylor left yesterday for Calgary, Alberta, where he will reside.

Mr. C. J. Peppin of this city is attending a meeting of stationary engineers in London, Ont.

Mr. J. E. Walsh and family, left today to spend three days down the bay.

Messrs. Thompson & Company of this city have received the order for the reseating of Emmanuel Church here.

The steamer Belleville was in port here this morning enroute to Montreal. She had many passengers on board.

ROYAL MEAL IN 1539

Since the King and Queen began their tour of Canada, it has been the habit to print in the press the menus at the various state dinners and luncheons in their honor. The simplicity of these may be compared with the bill of fare at a banquet given by the Earl of Atholl in honor of Mary, Queen of Scots, on the occasion of a hunt in the Forest of Atholl, 1529. A copy of the same was secured by James Mason, of St. Thomas, from Blair Castle, where it is posted when he visited Scotland last summer. It is as follows:

Drinks—Ale, beer, wine, white claret, malvasy, muskatel, hippocras, aqua vitae.

Meats—White bread, main bread, ginger bread.

Flesher—Beef, mutton, lamb, veal, venison, goose, grice, capon, coney, crab, heron, pyeet, plover, duck, drake, brissel cock (turkey), pawnies (peacock), black cock, mutton fat, capercailles.

Fishes—Salmons, trouts, perches, pike, eels and all other kinds of delicate fishes.

Syne there were proper stewards, canning baxters, excellent cooks and potingars with confections and drugs for their deserts.

Those were the days when banquets were banquets.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE RIDEAU KING

The black bass is king along the Rideau Lake. His fair presence there means thousands upon thousands of dollars each year for the people who operate hotels or provide other accommodation, to the proprietors of garage and filling-stations, to the guides, the grocers, the butchers, the purveyors of bait, the vendors of tackle—to entire communities which are vitally dependent upon tourist revenue. Take away the would suffer drastically if they were cut off.

Those revenues will be retained only in the measure that the black bass, fighting sons of gun that they are, continue to rise to the lure and to fly their flag in the air after they have been hooked, and that fact ought to be more widely appreciated than it is.

If everybody who lives near those lakes and who profits from the trade that the black bass brings will constitute himself a deputy game warden, the illegal practices which are capable of doing such great harm to this leading tourist attraction will soon vanish.—Brockville Recorder.

40 YEARS AGO

JULY 28TH., 1899.

When the liner sails at this port on Thursday evenings and the passengers see the park well lighted and the band playing, many people on the park and others in canoes and skiffs in the harbor, they must think that Belleville is a pretty "warm" little city.

Mr. William Cochrane, who has been assistant Bursar at the Kingston Asylum for ten years, has been appointed Bursar at the D. & B. T. here in place of Mr. Alex Mathieson, who has resigned owing to ill health.

Master Roy Chown is visiting friends in Picton.

Mr. George Pearce of the Pittchie Store is spending his vacation in Montreal.

Mr. Tom Nash left yesterday on business trip west.

50 YEARS AGO

Mr. F. L. Pellows is assisting in the work of locating a site for the bay bridge.

Mr. Pepler of the local branch of the Dominion Bank and Mrs. Pepler are spending some time at the Sandbanks.

Mrs. John Philpott, Mrs. W. H. Graham, Miss Sarah Jones, Tompkins, Miss B. Taylor and Mr. George Mitchell are guests at the hotel at the Sandbanks.

Many citizens are daily visiting Massassaga Park, which is a pleasant place to spend a holiday.

THE BRASS CUSPIDOR

When Dickens visited these shores nearly a century ago, he was very much struck—literally so, he said—by the American habit of chewing tobacco and spitting the juice here and there in public and private.

In those days no home, saloon, hotel or legislative hall was completely equipped unless it contained among it had its quota of brass cuspidors. Chewing tobacco and even the taking of snuff still go on at a prodigious rate in the United States, as the manufacture and sale of plug tobacco and tinned snuffs is a profitable business—show still in the habit are not universally considered almost chic, as in the early days of the republic. The cuspidor business does, in fact, seem to languish, at least as an emblem of early democracy.

Recently, however, a spitting tobacco juice was a harmless enough habit, though, compared with the imbecile and perilous one of tossing away lighted cigarette butts indiscriminately, in public and private.—N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

TOWN OF BEAUTY

As you drive through the country in your car this Summer, some time during the day you are going to exclaim, "what a beautiful town!" That town is the town in which you will want to stop for the night. And that town is the town in which you would like to spend your vacation. And that town is the kind of a town you would like to retire to when the retiring time of life comes.

If you are of an analytical turn of mind you will realize that most of the things which make a town beautiful are growing things. They are trees, shrubs, flowers, lawns, parks.

Such paint and attractive fences are added attractions, of course, but it is rarely indeed that you see a dilapidated, unsightly home in the same yard with a beautiful lawn. The one impedes from the shackle fence around a well-kept lawn.

It is also true that this beauty rarely just happens. Some one has made the town beauty conscious, tree conscious, flower conscious, lawn conscious. In many cases investigation will show that these beautiful towns have thriving garden clubs, and the garden clubs have been a moving factor in all this creation of beauty.—Kiwanis Magazine.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Colitis Does Not Kill Patients

For years the patient with colitis —slight inflammation and irritability of the large bowel—was considered to have diarrhoea due to certain foods and to eating. Accordingly, "soft" foods were prescribed together with an enema of oil or water daily or every other day.

Recently it has been learned that these patients are of the nervous and emotional type and, in addition to soft foods, they have been advised to try to acquire calmness of spirit by facing their problems bravely and analysing and working out the problem instead of being worried, or afraid of it.

In some ways it is unfortunate that the name was first called "mucous colitis." Actually the cause—emotional disturbances—have been so freely discussed as to be common knowledge, and there are not severe and yet they are afraid that they will waste away and die because of their persistent diarrhoea.

Some very good advice for physicians, patients and others is given by Walter C. Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Dr. Alvarez has done research work on the intestinal tract for many years. He has been able to show that while some healthy individuals have two and even three bowel movements daily, there are others who have only one movement just two or three times a week and appear to be just as healthy. In regard to colitis or spastic colon, Dr. Alvarez says:

"The more I see of persons with this school number of I present TB. I want to treat the bowel and the more I want to treat the patient, and Mr. Albert E. Dunsberry, will is quite unless the bowel is ulcerated because of the irritation. I find these patients with sensitive colons that they will probably always have a trouble. For this is the work of the bowel, to digest food and to get rid of the things that make it more irritable".

Dr. Alvares suggests a "balanced" diet with a light dinner party to prevent the bloating and desire to go to bed.

I believe that once the patient realizes that colitis will not injure him, that she will lose her fear of it and losing the fear of colitis should go a long way in curing the ailment because more calmness of spirit will have been obtained.

BILLETING PASSES

Times are changing. The United Church Conference has no invitations for next year's gathering because congregations are no longer billeting guests as they did formerly. In the old days the meetings of the old-fashioned Conferences in particular were an event in the community. The fatted calf was killed. The spare bedroom was filled and the parlor aired out. What an honor it was to have bible students and particularly some prominent clergyman!

The whole family were placed on their best behaviour and the huge dinners and suppers were a great convenience. The table groaned with provisions. One Western Ontario paper, when the Conference was coming, once published a cartoon of two farmers' wives in the act of rising from under a barn and repeating the familiar lines of an old Methodist hymn, which was the conference opening: "And are we still alive to sing each other's faces."

It was equally an event for the delegates. Long, tiring, difficult automobiles, travel was difficult and expensive. Ministers could not afford to travel much. Accordingly, a visit to the city, billeted in some home, filled with an opportunity of inspiration from leaders of the church and to meet again old friends and acquaintances in the country more than it does today.

And now the old custom, like so many good old Ontario customs, will likely go into the discard with modern conditions. Homes, though are smaller; spare bedrooms are rarer. Everyone is in a hurry and the worry of strange delegates to entertain. The passing of the billeting system marks a change in social and religious life of more significance perhaps than it seems.—London Free Press.

SPANKLESS SISTERS

Dr. Dafoe reveals that the little Dionnes have never been spanked. Instead, if one of them is naughty, she is put in a chair by herself, while her sisters point their fingers and say, "Ah, ah!" In each room contains a chair, a table and a book. Dr. Dafoe does not tell us what the book is, but we guess it is a reference one, for the room is never occupied for more than a few minutes at a time.

Isolation of misbehavior has many children, even today, who have been spanked. But the tendency is against physical chastisement. The advocates of withholding spanking are still debated. Some of the best authorities believe that what might have been the better for a little laying on of hands. But the method works with others.

It would be pleasant if the obstreperous adult members of society could simply be isolated in a quiet room to think it over with a book. The idea has international possibilities too. But it is a bad thing for a country to be put in a corner with "Mein Kampf."—N. Y. Times.

A School for Geisha Girls

The gotaha, or public entertainer—meaning literally "means of accomplishment—who nightly, with their charming personality, humour, the sip and color peculiar to Japanese parties, did not come by their artistry through mere apprentice ship but by constant and arduous training fitting them to give good service at all times for all types of people. Lessons such as dancing both Japanese and ballroom, calligraphy, music and English, lectures on current topics on the Shinbashi Geigi Gakko are given with their guests and other intellectual pursuits are enthusiastically studied to make them truly women of accomplishment, or geisha.

All girls who take up this profession of entertaining receive their schooling at various institutions run by the geisha associations, and Shinbashi Geigi Gakko or Shinbashi Geisha School is one of them.

The Shinbashi Geigi Gakko was founded ten years ago and is operated in conjunction, with the Shinbashi Geisha Association.

This school is located on the street immediately behind the Ginza. One goes through a narrow door, up a wide flight of stairs and into a large tatami room measuring about 40 by 30 feet, where the geisha, or geisha to be, receive their lessons and lectures. At one side of the room is a platform and a blackboard.

Although this is a school, there is no particular course and no graduation ceremony. The students of the school number at present 750. Although this large number of students are members of the school, the classes are attended by about fifty girls daily on an average. The reason for this is that the work of the girls does not stop with just these lessons. All of them have other lessons in dancing, the samisen (three-stringed musical instrument) or some other subject outside the Geisha School. Also many of them are busy entertaining guests on some afternoons.

The subjects taught in the school are Japanese brush writing, ballroom dancing, English and the Japanese drum music. The subject on which the students prides their most is brush writing. Three girls from Geisha Hall exhibited their work every year at the annual exhibition of the Education Ministry held at Ueno.

Once a week, on Wednesday, the period from 12.30 to 2.30 is devoted to lectures given by different well-known persons who are invited for the occasion. These lectures are on various current topics to enable the girls to have some understanding of more serious subjects so as to be able to speak intelligently with their guests.

Once every year the school holds a Gaku Gei Kai, when the students of the school demonstrate what they have learned during the year. Some play different instruments, others dance, and there is also an exhibition of brush writing. The meeting is held July 29.

The classes and lectures are given from 9 a.m. to 4.30 p.m., the members of the school attending every day or evening with other lessons or entertainments. Each girl pays a fee of one yen a month for the instruction she gets at the school. However, the girls who are to become geisha are tested by the Shinbashi Geisha Association before they can actually become a full-fledged geisha.—Japan Times Weekly.

REGATTA RUMBLINGS

Meet Chauncey Hamblin, and his "Q" boat, mystery-ship, water-hop-per on skis "Voodoo, Ilnd."

Chauncey, a likeable cuss, is a pal and sidekick of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Forman, owner of Buffs's Jo. . . . They are the closest of friends on shore, but when the 225 cubic inch beasts start their stunning sym-phonies out where the wild waves hold sway, they are as far apart as Peggy Hopkins Joyce and her first mesl-ticket. . . . . .

Hamlin works in Buffalo in an industry similar to that of his pal, Dave, and like the blonde young Bison, spends the most of his spare time tinkering around his earliest loves, the water and boats. Last winter he took sufficient time out to build himself a 225 cubic-inch beauty that, while a trifle un-orthodox to the eye of the layman, can rip through the sunlit waters like an inebriated Jack Tar through the twice-monthly stipend. . . . .

But don't let appearances mis-guide you, when you get your first glimpse of this zanny cutter-upper of the water-speedways . . . . .She boasts a sort of a supercharged mast slicked into the second third, and stick, seemingly high in the air . . . . . Rowing down the water-ways she looks something like a submerged elephant, complete with foretrunk, sticking high from its back . . . . . But can that baby travel.

Up in Stratford this year, the "Voodoo" (according to Mister Webster, meaning mysterious blood rites practiced by Caribs and African negroes) bobbed up and down the course like an inverted pollywog, shook her tail once or twice, straightened away and raced across the line ahead of her nearest com-petitor at an estimated speed of seventy-five miles per hour. . . .

"Which is practically nothing at all; a mere concession of pardon at a-fair of every-day exhibition, accord-ing to the valiant Chauncey. . . .

"Why that baby will travel a lot faster than that" he opined—and evidently hurled a challenge at Jackie "Pops" Cooper, holder of the world's record over a mile straight-away course, in a battle to the death for the title . . . . He is sure that she highly-nimble of the Hamlin waterways, "Pops" and "Pops" will be floundering along in his wake when the checkered flag sweeps suddenly downward. Nothing wins a finish of the race. . . . Mebbe, "Pops" will have something to say about that. . . . . .

However, the "Voodoo" and all her imitators, is entered in the 225 cubic inch class here on August 7th and if she does not finish one-two three, someone will have a hazy idea they have been in some kind of a boat-race. . . . . .

Hamlin, built his hot hull himself within the confines of a shed rear-ing in Buffalo . . . . He designed it and knows every whim and cap-rice of his water-child . . . . He drives it himself and it answers the slightest flick of the wheel. . . . We are not unlimited with the identity of its power-plant, but any skiff that can kick up a seventy-five mile-an-hour clip on any sort of a pond, has got something be-neath its engine hood, besides bilge-water. . . . . .

Sore Feet?
"You can quickly soothe away the pain from sore, tired, aching feet or swollen ankles with soothing, heal-ing, Zam-Buk.
The precious herbal oils in Zam-Buk penetrate deep into the sore, inflamed tissues bringing instant relief. Germs, poisons and callosses are softened and the sufferer finds ease and made comfortable.

EXPECT

Ontario farmers hoped the storm would lose its destructive force if it crossed their lands. In several areas, due to drought and heat, pas-tures have been burned to a crisp, grain which fell in isolated areas yesterday was short of require-ments.

The mercury took another fling at aiming for new heat marks in the west, and followed close be-hind in Ontario. The Maritime Provinces worried little about the temperature, as thunderstorms broke in some parts and crops appeared unaffected by drought.

Milk Shortage Worry

Increased danger of milk short-age was added to the worries of Ontario farmers. In some areas stock was returned to barns and fed special rations to prevent more ser-ious shortages from flow.

The heat has weakened pasture growth and owners of large herds reported they had been forced to feed cheaper grain and hay to supply necessary nourishment. The water supply on many farms has failed and breeders are hauling sup-plies.

Agriculturists considered the drought one of the worst experience-ed in Ontario in many years. It has hit practically all crops. Countless fields of witting fruit, grain and roots remain to be harvested.

"In Western Ontario some sections received sufficient rain Wednesday to tide crops over for a few days but generally reports of damage con-tinued to mount. Deterioration of the tobacco crop is one of the most serious losses.

JAPAN

Mr. Hepburn lauded Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, for "saying what needed to be said" about the Japanese mas-sace "with the colorful language he uses to such effect."

The Premier said he had changed his attitude since his days in the Federal House when he voted against measures designed to strengthen Canada's national de-fence. He had become an admirer of Col. Drew for "speaking out the way he has about the Japanese menace."

Should Not be Forced

Turning to the federal govern-ment's establishment of minimum wheat prices, Mr. Hepburn declar-ed the central provinces should not be "forced to pay for the folly of the western farmer."

He claimed that if the govern-ment were to buy this year's esti-mated 400,000,000-bushel crop at Fort William for 78 cents a bushel and had to sell it in Liverpool at 50 cents, a "direct loss to the Canad-ian people of $80,000,000" would be involved.

In an interview after the meeting Mr. Hepburn criticized Labor Min-ister Norman Rogers for "admitting frankly" that the Federal Govern-ment's offer to aid municipalities in relief works projects is a "political gesture."

"If the Dominion government is sincere, let them put up the money for it," he said. "We will not let the municipalities be led up a blind alley. Look at the examples. For instance—the Dominion housing scheme that left the municipalities floundering in debt, and the voca-tional school grants, that were stop-ped without warning."

INTRUDER

Chokes And Hurls Boy to Wall

Suddenly a tall form emerged from the living room. Grasping the now terrified Hiscock around the neck, the intruder choked him for approximately a minute then hur-led his inert form against the wall of the room. The man dashed out of the house and disappeared in a nearby field.

The Hawkins children revived the stunned Hiscock youngster and im-mediately notified the police. Thir-teen officers that the man looked to be about twenty-one years of age, and wore black trousers and a coat that appeared to be several sizes too large for him. He picked up a buddle as he dashed through the bush to freedom. Hiscocks told police officers this morning that the only thing missing was a package of fifty cigarettes.

Glared Savagely

Recalling his experiences, one of the Hawkins youngsters told police that the man "glared savagely at them for the space of a minute, then attacked young Hiscock, who was the nearest to him."

The children stated they did not recognize the man and had never seen him before.

Police were of the opinion that the wanted man is still in the vicinity and resumed the search of outlying districts this morning.

The Hawkins children, they stat-ed, are of sufficient age to give an accurate description of the man, whom they believe is a wandering transient.

DEEP SHELTERS

Fitback had no modern excava-tion equipment and all the earth re-moved from shelters was carried out on the backs of peasant women.

The engineer had little experience with surface shelters, experiment-ally. This is what happened:

"We tried out a test with a mas-sive surface shelter built for the chief of the naval base. It had con-crete walls a yard thick and a stag-gered passage entrance to minimize concussion. We put a few sheep in it and exploded a 200-pound bomb-not a heavy one—a few yards away. All the sheep were killed by the con-cussion."

London's Shelters Shallow.

London's trench defences are about eight feet deep, have a two-foot-thick concrete roofing with earth atop that, concrete walls, and concrete floors with entrance ramps down which citizens could run in an emergency.

Some boroughs, notably Finchley, were dissatisfied with the trenches, detailed authorization from Sir John Anderson's A.R.P. Department to construct deep shelters something like those used in Spain, but had to raise the money themselves, through loans.

JAS. C. ELLIOTT DIES AT TWEED

Was Born in Ireland 77 Years Ago and Came to Canada at Age of 5 Years With Parents

Tweed, July 28—James C. Elliott, highly esteemed resident of this place died one last evening at the age of seventy-seven years. He is mourned by a wide circle of friends in Tweed and in the Lodgerooms district, where he spent most of his life.

Born in Ireland he came to Can-ada when five years of age with his parents, who settled in the Lodge-room district near Tweed and he has lived in this district ever since. He was a very successful farmer until he retired and moved into Tweed some years ago.

Mr. Elliott was a member of the Orange Association for sixty years and was a prominent member of the Masonic Order.

He was married in the year 1888 to Elizabeth Finley, who prede-ceased him eighteen months ago. There survive one son, Gordon, Mrs. S. McCrea and Mrs. Ida Douglas of Tweed and R. H. Elliott of Toronto, and three sisp-children, Mrs. John Sager and Mrs. W. E. Tummon of Tweed and Mr. W. H. Finley of Trenton.

The late James C. Elliott was a member of the United Church.

The funeral will take place from his residence Tweed on Saturday, July 29th, at 2.30 p.m. (Standard Time) and interment will be made in Victoria cemetery, Tweed.

TOURIST BURNED ABOUT ARMS, LEGS

J. A. Skalla, Cleveland, Admitted to Belleville Hospital Thursday

His clothing catching fire when leaking gasoline in his motor boat suddenly ignited, J. A. Skalla, of Cleveland, Ohio, was taken to the Belleville General Hospital last ev-ening suffering from severe burns of the right arm and legs.

Skalla, in an attempt to extin-guish the flames that rapidly en-veloped his body, jumped overboard into the Trent River and was res-cued by companions.

The accident that occurred three or four days ago, was thought to be slight by Skalla, but when his burns gradually growing more pain-ful forced him to seek the services of Dr. G. H. Stobie.

His condition today was reported as fair.

The fire is though to have been started by a carelessly dropped cig-arette.

NETS DESTROYED BY GRASS FIRE

Other Fires Give Depart-ment Another Busy 24 Hours

Worst of a series of five fires that kept city firemen "on the jump" yesterday occurred at the Government Fish Hatchery, east of the city when fire starting in a large grassy field west of the plant destroyed nets valued at $300.00.

Hastily-formed bucket brigade fought the flames that swept rap-idly through the under-like grass and succeeded in extinguishing them before buildings ignited.

The nets, hung out to dry, were freshly tarred, and fell an easy prey to the fire that licked through the grass before volunteer firemen could prevent it.

The Belleville Fire Department, answering a belated alarm, raced to the scene but the fire was under control on their arrival.

Other blazes broke out in dry grass near the Swift Canadian plant, Station Street, while two chimney fires at houses on Albert and Jones Streets, and another grass fire at the foot of James St. gave firemen a busy day.

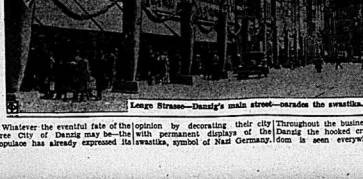
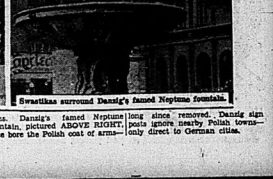
SWASTIKA OVER DANZIG — Nazi Banner Flies Throughout Free City



Danzig signpost directs only to German cities.



Swastikas surround Danzig's famed Neptune fountain.

Whatever the eventful fate of the Free City of Danzig may be—the populace has already expressed its opinion by decorating their city with permanent displays of the swastika, symbol of Nazi Germany.

Weddings

FRASER—STAPLEY

A very pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. W. J. Scott at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday, July 26th., at 12 o'clock when June Pearl Stapley, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stapley, was united in marriage to Albert Edward, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Fraser of Brantford. The ceremony was performed on the lawn under an arch of green foliages and white bells.

The bride given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white silk net over satin, with a line of bolero jacket, and a finger tip veil held with lily of the valley and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bride's only attendant, Miss Helen Fraser, sister of the groom, wore a green and white silk net with lace jacket. She wore a shoulder veil held with lily of the valley and a bouquet of Sweetheart roses. Mr. Roy Chapman of Frankford, attended the groom.

Miss Lenora Stapley, cousin of the bride, played the pink silk net and lace and corsage of sweet peas and baby's breath played the wedding music. Mr. Kenneth Tompkins, sister of the bride, gowned in sky blue lace with shoulder veil with silver and wearing a similar corsage sang, very sweetly "I Love You Truly".

The bride's mother wore a dress of turquoise blue lace and corsage of sweet peas and baby's breath. The groom's mother wore a navy lace dress with a similar corsage.

Following congratulations dinner was served to about forty guests at the dining room which was decorated with pink bells, pink gladioli, ers and baskets of delphinium, roses and baby's breath. Many gifts of friends of the bride. Misses Lois Hower, Dorothy Ulman and Annie Cooke served the wedding guests.

The bridal couple left for North Bay, the sheer over flowered satin with white accessories. On their return they will reside in Stirling.

The groom's gift to the maid of honor was a bracelet watch clip and to the groomsman a tie clip. The pianist's and soloist's gifts were also pin and clip sets.

Brand New Waves On Beauty's Beach

NAN OREY . . . . . shows you her newest coiffure

BY HELEN POLLETT

THERE'S a new word in beauty-town. It is flour and it applies to a midsummer coiffure that is ideal. It makes the pretty young thing look like a cherub. Flour means that the hairdress must have softness and the light touch.

Tresses are cut fairly short, just long enough so that the permanent wave operator won't write his hands in despair because the strands won't wind conveniently over the rods. Hair is the same length all over the head.

Arrangement is so simple that it will make you laugh. You run the comb over your brain foliage, let it fluffy where it will and drop into curly rows. Reminds you of the pompadour that flourished some years back. It's prettiest without a parting, but if you can't give it up there's no beauty law to make you do it. The idea is to carry a childlike halo. What's nicer for the mermaid who has her daily swim, or the young person who scampers over the tennis court?

High coiffures are not easy to arrange nor will they stay placed unless one wears a hairnet or uses tuck pins. Some of the matronly persons who sport towering effect look queerly. The average woman knows that the upped idea adds unnecessary years.

Victims of blackheads can wash out dust laden pores by exercising the vigorously that every flows freely. Steaming is a successful treatment, because it softens the waxlike plugs, removes the black tips; and, if pimples are forming, it brings them quickly to a head.

Steaming is all right for young faces, but for old ones should be used; depletes tissues that have already lost tone and firmness.

It is believed that diet has something to do with a skin fabric that picks up atmosphere dust. Raw green salads, fruit juices, vegetables less fat food and no pastries will often bring a change for the better.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Beware Week-End Lonelierne

A marriage broker, now entangled in the law, was interviewed the other day about his calling, particularly unsavory in his case as he specialized in getting the service of foreign girls working as domestics.

His method of approach was to write them letters after discovering what amounts they had in savings and building associations, and tell them that a splendid gentleman had put them on the street in the movies, at church, at a picnic, or somewhere else, and had fallen madly in love.

Eight girls out of ten, who would object to being picked up, and would have nothing to do with matrimonial bureaus, was a pretty easy victim. He would first discover the nationality of the girl and claim to have met her at some dolcetory celebration, which she attended. He would then describe the man, a wealthy bachelor, pining away until he could meet her.

If the girl consented to meet the man of mystery, fleecing her of her savings was comparatively easy. The wealthy gentleman would invariably be embarrassed for funds—only for the moment, of course. But if he could lay his hands on five hundred or a thousand dollars, or whatever the victim happened to have, the matter of claiming an estate, a gold mine, a diamond block would be easy. And in no time at all, the young lady would be "riding in her own limousine."

The line about the limousine often proved to be a clincher. The master of ceremonies, when interviewed in jail, said that his rush day was Monday, and that he always had to put on an extra corps of sashimi-dancing fellows for week-end. Sundays and holidays reaped his biggest harvest. Girls "all dressed up and nowhere to go", single and in couples would wander up and down the streets, or go to amusement parks, and never see a familiar face.

So out would come the old letter and the lure. Then the girl would be handsome man, pining away to make her his bride. And the word limousine was very taking. Sunday night would probably see them wed. Monday, the law stepped in.

Nor were the gigs all simple country creatures, who had not been in the lonely long enough to come out. Some had been.

Marriage brokerage is no new form of swindle. In England it flourished in the days of the past hundred years. But the head of the bureau here mentioned had a new wrinkle in describing the stunning admirer so deeply in love, so overflowing with respect, that he would not dream of approaching the girl with whom he had fallen in love at first sight until he knew his suit would be welcome.

As this column has frequently pointed out, churches could do a tremendous work if they would turn their attention to the lonely stranger, sophysical aspirations are touched with commendable compassion.

A child born on this day may be highly complicated, sophistical, fanciful and probably radical, with romantic and creative urges of indescribable insistence. These may bring a public career of spectacular expectations.

Fashion Flashes

TREAT YOURSELF to a dramatic sunning frock. A beauty is white chiffon, very full skirt, with moldsed bodice of black taffeta drawn into a huge bow in back with wide full length panel streamers falling to the hem of the dress.

A good bet for a day in town would be a smart frock of black silk jersey with deep V collarless neckline and front fullness in the skirt. With it a mess jacket of white linen, with four flap pockets.

Touch up a severe evening dress with ruffly detailing. A soft little bag is fashioned entirely of black taffeta ruffles, as a zipper of brilliants and a brilliant tassel.

Keep cool and climb into frothy housecoat. A pretty model is dotted Swiss, its fullness drawn back and gathered under a big buttle bow.

You will like a color promised for autumn but already appearing in the form of costume jewelry. It is nasturtium yellow with a hint of red and tawny brown.

-Be off wearing a smart travelling suit. A sunglassed model is diagonal tweed with huge black check pattern, its fullness concentrated in back, from a yoke. It has a big platinum fox collar.

Gifts For Your Hostess' Children

Remember how it was when you were a child? You were thrilled when a visitor arrived with a present that delighted your heart, intrigued your interest. You didn't know and you didn't care whether or not it was expensive. But you did know, by instinct, if the gift had been chosen by someone who knew and loved children, someone who had chosen the gift with thoughtful care.

Knowing children, we probably don't realize that it's more fun for them to call for us to take the gifts with us, rather than to send them to the children after the visit, as we may decide to do with our gift to the hostess. This gives children a more personal participation in the gift.

If there are several children in the family, we may either take a gift for each one, or a gift chosen to amuse them all.

If you bring the children candy, you may run the risk of being unwelcome before you're inside. If you have children, you'll know why; if you haven't, you can easily figure out the reason.

Children are usually enchanted with gifts that have their names on them. A little girl (or a big one, too) will treasure a small white linen handkerchief with her first name embroidered on it in a lovely green scallop. Either a boy or a girl will welcome a pen or pencil with his or her full name displayed on it. A box of letter-paper or cards, of a type appropriate to the age of the child, may be stamped with the first name of the child.

A scrap book is an excellent idea too . . . children are usually "collectors". If you know the child is enthusiastic about collecting stamps or coins or butterflies or whatever, an addition to these will be accepted with special glee.

Never have we kind such beautiful books for children . . . books of adventure, books about children of other lands, engaging stories, books about hobbies, instructive books with the intention delightful as well.

Congratulations.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—A school friend of mine was married several days ago. I have not seen her for a number of years, but I would like to send her a card or letter conveying my wishes for her happiness. I have never seen nor met the young man she married. What is the correct way to address the card—Mr. and Mrs. John Brown?

Helena

1—Your note of good wishes should be written directly to your friend and addressed to her, but in the note, you would ask your friend to give your congratulations to her husband.

Don't send a "ready-made" card of good wishes . . . you should write a note, even though a brief one.

2—Conventionally and traditionally, the engagement ring is worn with the wedding ring.

Courtesy Tip

Do not mutilate your fingers when you are turning the pages of a book. This in an unpleasant and unnecessary habit. It is especially objectionable to see a person do this when turning the pages of a hymn, al or prayerbook in church.

At the Theatres

AT THE McCARTHY

"Law Comes to Texas"
"Let Us Live"

Bill Elliott, Columbia's new outdoor action star, will cheerfully take any risk called for by his script. He'll fall from a stumbling bronco, leap over a canyon's edge, engage in down hand-to-hand battles with the villain and otherwise compete himself with all the daredevilish courage expected of a cowboy star. Bill will cheerfully do these things, he will just as cheerfully admit, "sure, but I don't guarantee to like it."

A shining instance of what he means occurred during the screening of "The Law Comes to Texas", in which he is currently starred at the McCarthy Theatre with Veda Ann Borg. Elliott, chasing bandits who plan to waylay a stagecoach on a high mountain pass, was required to show both surprise and fear as unseen snipers outline his head with rifle shots.

The singing began, the cameras started to hum, and Bill's face took on a mingled expression of bravado, fear, surprise and grim determination. It became obvious that he didn't like what was happening, but that he would "stick it out all summer if need be."

The latest feature performance by director Joseph Levering. Elliott grinned a wry, weak grin. "I wasn't acting," he said. "I was scared. Those snipers of yours were getting too close. One of them actually clipped my hat brim. If you want more realism in this one, you'd better take them now while I'm still alive."

He was decided not to have any re-takes.

"Let Us Live"

Featuring Maureen O'Sullivan, Henry Fonda and Ralph Bellamy, the outstanding dramatic production "Let Us Live" is also now playing at the Belle Theatre for a brief run. It is a picture that is tense . . . with the tenseness of life itself! Big . . . with the bigness of the human heart! Warm . . . with the warmth of love and friendship! Dramatic . . . with the drama of lives in peril!

That is the story of 'Let Us Live' a story of a humble taxi driver and his wife, whose true life and love fling a flaming challenge to the age-old theme "Crime Does Not Pay". The story of two people who fight with their backs to the wall . . . and win.

Be sure to see 'Let Us Live' you will surely be grateful for the experience, because 'Let Us Live' might have been your story but for The Grace of God.

"Poopye" the sailor in "Watts Nitemare" a new comedy offering is also presented with the above two feature attractions now at the McCarthy.

AT THE BELLE

"Susannah of the Mounties"

A thousand savage redmen sweep down on the Mounties' camp in pony! A terrific battle ensues against overwhelming odds! A lone redman tries some awful peril on a primitive frontier!

Believe it or not—this is what happens in Shirley Temple's latest picture "Susannah of the Mounties" tale of the Mounties"! The famous child star, in a role especially suited to the thrilling vehicle for the Number One star and it was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck as a counterpoint to the fantasy of "The Little Princess" and "Heidi".

Garbed in calico and buckskin, Shirley Temple is a real pioneer lass different from anything she has done previously on the screen. Randolph Scott, tall, handsome cowboy, the lovely star of "The Lady Vanishes", are featured in the film's leads, while others in the large cast are Martin Good Hunter, 13-year-old Blackfoot Indian who makes his debut in the film, J. Farrell MacDonald, Moroni Olsen, Victor Jory and Lester Matthews.

William A. Seiter directed "Susannah of the Mounties", which opens next at the Belle. Thrilled at Shirley, the sole survivor of an Indian massacre, is adopted by Randolph Scott of the Mounties. The famous police are trying to protect the Indians from the greedy white men who would rob them of their birthright.

Scott teaches the child a wonderful lesson in courage which does her bravery in the face of terrible danger.

"Gizmo Boxer" is the title of a funny multiple reel Leon Errol comedy to be presented on the same program with a clever Terry-toon Cartoon 'House Wife Herman', and the latest Pathe News Event. This week-end a new and thrilling chapter of 'The Lone Ranger Rides Again' will be exhibited.

THE MECHANIC'S JOB

IF I were 21 I would be a mechanic. There is nothing "humble" about the position of a mechanic. Even with all our mechanization, the top rank skilled mechanic is still the most sought after and independent man you can find. The replace of America today, the American standard of living, depends more on the skill of our mechanics than any other single factor. The genius of America is production, and a large percentage of our productive enterprises are headed by men who have come up from the worker's bench.

Why is it, then, that so many of our youngsters today want to start their careers sitting at a desk with no more manual and practical skill than is necessary to operate a telephone?

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Eliminate Flies to get Rid of "Summer Complaint", Says Doctor

Intestinal feeding is not the only method by which fluids can be injected into the systems of small babies whose continued diarrhoea threatens to dehydrate them to the point of death.

We discussed yesterday how, in such cases, hospitals inject these fluids into the tissue beneath the skin. This as was explained, is a necessary measure, for, you give these babies fluids by the mouth, they cannot keep them down.

The second method by which hospitals give fluids artificially is by intravenous injection. This is done by using one of the tiny veins in the scalp and injecting the fluid with a syringe or by placing the needle in one of the veins of the leg. This latter method is quite complicated. In fact, I regard it as a minor operation and personally I never used it in my country practice.

The child is placed on the table and one leg is prepared by rubbing below the knee with alcohol and iodine. A local anaesthetic is injected into the skin in front of the ankle bone, a small incision is made in the skin and the vein is found with a metal hook. Through a little nick made in the vein a needle is fed. The needle is attached to a long rubber tube which conducts the fluid from a container.

When the needle is tied into place by the above arrangement, fluids can be slowly injected into the vein for a period of several days if necessary. -WNU

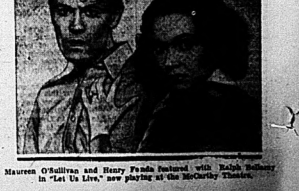
This replacing of fluid in the baby's system is the most important part of the treatment of diarrhoea. Certain drugs are now given to reduce the amount of discomfort in the child's abdomen, and they even tend to cut down on the diarrhoea. In serious cases, a third part of the treatment consists in giving blood transfusions. In doing this we attempt to give the baby blood from an adult to whom diarrhoea is not a serious disease. Thus we are attempting to supply anti-bodies which will attack the bacteria that produce the illness.

The doctor who is looking after a case of diarrhoea which has improved under treatment will be very careful about placing the child back into a normal diet. Mothers should mark this well and follow instructions closely, for if he is rushed back into a full diet too soon, there is grave danger that he will again develop diarrhoea.

I have a great fear of diarrhoea, or summer complaint, as country people call it. I have seen too many otherwise healthy babies die of it. I have seen others who, while they recovered from this disease, were weakened by it that they well an easy prey to some other infection.

And then, too, there was our experience with the Quintuplets to make me fear the disease. Their very first summer, with all our care, all five of them developed the disease. They caught the infection and for a day or two we couldn't under-stand how it was. Then we discovered the cause. Their diapers were being kept in a clothes hamper in the bath-room. The house was infected with a small but persistent infection which for several days had us worried more than we liked to admit.

This was several weeks before the new nursery was finished. We realized as long as we could, with the children getting weaker all the time, and then one day when we thought the situation was critical, we moved into the nursery even before it was finished. But there we could completely control the fly problem. Once there they soon got better.



Maureen O'Sullivan and Henry Fonda featured with Ralph Bellamy in "Let Us Live," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

MOON ON THE WATER by Ruby M. Ayres

"That his money is all tied up, and that he can't afford to take any risks." Gavin laughed. He evidently has not much opinion of me as a business man."

"Does he know—about me?" she asked.

"Yes."

"What did he say?"

"Nobody was lucky, but I gathered that he considered you had made rather a poor bargain."

"I'm the best judge of that."

She turned into a little wood and for a moment neither of them spoke, till Jane said, "If you had three thousand pounds, and I wanted it—would you give it to me?"

There was the slightest hesitation before he answered with rather forced lightness, "It depends how you proposed to spend it."

"But you would give it to me," she urged.

"I might."

"If it meant everything in the world to us both," she said softly, "If it meant getting happiness which we couldn't get without it?"

He looked away from her, and then went on eagerly:

"Then what's the difference? You give it to me, or I give it to you—Gavin, if you don't mind."

"You can't mix business with sentiment, Jane," he answered.

"Yes, you can," she insisted. "We can, anyway! After all, it's my happiness as well as yours. Oh, Gavin, don't spoil everything just because it's my money! I'll give it to you, as he did not speak, she said, "Supposing I hadn't any money, what would you do then?"

"Go back to Canada, I suppose."

"And take me with you?"

He shook his head.

"I couldn't—not unless I had a definite job to go to."

"As if I should mind!"

He said almost sharply, "It's no use talking like that; you've no idea what it would mean—living from hand to mouth—roughing it—"

"We should be roughing it together."

He looked at her with a sorry little expression in his dark eyes. "That wouldn't help—after the first little while, my dear."

She stood still turning to him and looking up into his sombre face.

"You can't be going to let me help you—to help us both?" she pleaded.

Gavin answered, "You know what your people will say—you know what every one will say—that it's just your money—"

She broke in scornfully: "And do you care what they say? Our happiness doesn't depend on other people, but on ourselves. Besides, you knew how happy it will make me to know that I've helped you to be a success—"

"And if I'm a failure?"

"You won't be."

"You're very sure."

"I am sure—and I love you; and if you want me to be happy—if you want us to be happy—" She broke off as he gently put her from him.

"It's like—cheating," he said.

"Cheating!" she echoed.

The eager happiness died from her eyes, and her hands fell as he had been clasping his coat fell limply.

"What do you mean—cheating?" she asked painfully.

She saw the color die slowly in his face, and there was a sort of defiant humiliation in his eyes when again he turned them to her.

"I want to marry you," he said roughly. "I think we should be happy together, But you're so young and it would be intolerable if some day you were disappointed in me—if you realized that I'm not the—not the figure of—of romance all girls dream about. I'm not made that way; it's not my nature to—to care very much for any one or anything, and so—"

She broke in quickly, "You mean that perhaps you don't love me at all—as much as you think you ought to, is that it? Well, I don't mind even that, because if you don't now some day you will." There was a quiet womanly confidence in her voice. "And I'm quite willing to take the risk—if there is any risk."

There was a tragic little silence before he said brokenly, "You make me ashamed, Jane."

And Jane answered with the tears in her eyes, "You will make me ashamed if you won't let me help." She took his hand in a tight little grip. "Darling, it's so foolish," she pleaded.

He snatched his hand away.

"Why don't you send me about my business?" he said hoarsely. "I'm no good to you or to myself—a rolling stone—a man who's a failure. Even my precious uncle hinted that at my age it was time I could do better than—edge off other people in order to get a living. I ought never to have asked you to marry me—when I knew I never had—"

He broke off, and there was a dreadful little silence till Jane said in a whisper, "You break my heart! And I was so happy—so really happy never been happy before."

Her voice broke on a sob and she turned away.

"I think I'll go home," she said unsteadily.

She moved a few steps from him down the narrow wood path before as if a cruel hand had blotted out the sunlight and had left her in darkness.

She had been so happily confident—and now—— She stopped suddenly she heard his steps behind her.

"Jane!"

She stood still but she did not turn and then she felt his hands on her shoulders.

"All right," he said recklessly. "You're the best thing in my life—you'll sink or swim—we'll take a chance, we?"

"Swim!" she said, and then suddenly she turned and put her arms round his neck. "I'll show you what a fine swimmer I am," she said with tears and laughter.

He looked down at her, his face a little tense, then suddenly he stooped and kissed her lips.

"Sink or swim!" he said again, and Jane answered with her old gaiety:

"And either way it will be all right for me."

But during the next few weeks her courage was sorely tried by Pamela and her father.

Mr. Brookes did not say a good deal—it was not his way—but somehow in his silence Jane seemed to feel disapproval and doubt.

"The money is yours, and you are of age," was all he said.

Pamela was much more downright.

"I call it madness!" she declared. "What does Gavin Montford know about business? You might as well throw three thousand pounds down the sink. Supposing the whole thing fails! How are you going to live? You'll have to go back to Canada with him and work like a slave; it's utter madness. You'd far better give the money to Sidney and let him make it for you—it would be safe anyway."

"I hate safety—it's so dull," Jane answered lightly, though her heart was beating fast with angry resentment. "I like to take a chance in life—it's so much more exciting."

"You're taking chances all right," Pamela said meaningly, and then as she turned to go she added, "There's a letter from Dulcie—you can read it if you like. She's coming home at last, goodness knows why; she has it far better there than she's away."

"She's got to come sometime," Jane answered.

INSTALMENT 7.

Jane wondered what Dulcie would think of Gavin! Dulcie was always so critical of men.

"She can't disapprove of him, anyway," Jane thought proudly. "She doesn't know any one so good-looking—or such a darling."

And once again the sun shone in her world and she was perfectly happy. She had already written to the lawyers about her legacy, and had been to see them, smiling quietly when they advised her to invest the money at three per cent instead of risking it all in a business concern of which she knew nothing.

"My fiance knows," she answered proudly.

She already thought of herself as Gavin's wife, and she had no doubts of the future. The criticism of other people seemed far and she left her unlouched except with a contemptuous scorn and anger. She knew Gavin, and they did not, and that made all the difference.

Mrs. Bingham had congratulated her on her engagement in rather a forlorn way.

"Gavin is not a man to settle down," she warned her. "He is his father all over again. His father never did any good, poor man! You will need to be very tactful, Jane; marriage at the best of times needs all the tact and patience one can find and you have been so free of responsibility." She frowned when Jane laughed. "I speak from experience," she added rather sharply.

x x x

"When will you be married?" Pamela inquired that evening as the two girls lingered over supper.

"As soon as Gavin has settled with Mr. Brookes," answered, "But it won't be a grand wedding—no fuss. I shall be married in a coat and skirt—no bridesmaids; it's such a waste of money."

"And you'll want all the money you can get," Pamela said in a deadly voice.

Jane took care never to repeat any of these remarks to Gavin, though more than once he had asked her what the family had said after they had entertained.

"I don't ask them," she said, "And it's no concern of theirs. I'm twenty-one now."

It was a wonderful feeling, she thought, to be twenty-one and free—to be in the glass rather hoping to find a grey hair or two, perhaps, but she could not see any difference. She was still the same; her hair was as bright, her eyes as clear, as deep and immature, her misty blue eyes as untroubled and filled with hope.

"Dulcie is coming back next week," she told Gavin that evening.

He looked at her rather vaguely.

"Dulcie? Oh, your sister! My reverend uncle was talking about her this morning."

"Was she? What did she say?"

"Nothing much, very pretty and shockingly selfish."

"Those people always are, aren't they?"

He looked at her. "You're not spoilt," he said.

"But I'm not pretty," she answered.

His eyes seemed to search her face.

"Sometimes—when you're very happy—you're better than pretty," he said. "Pretty may describe many only neat features, a pink complexion, general daintiness, but those sort of ladies—oh me, at least, like a face with plenty of expression. Your mood changes so that you can never be sure how it will look—your face is like that."

Jane looked puzzled. She said with a sigh, "When I was a schoolgirl I was always in trouble because I was so untidy, but it seemed such a waste of time to me to keep on brushing my hair when I knew that the next minute it would be all out and ugly."

"It wouldn't suit you to be tidy." Gavin said, but he spoke a little absently, and presently he said, "I've got that business fixed up."

"Oh, I am glad." She looked up at him. "Aren't you glad, too?"

"Supposing I fail?"

"You won't, she said once more. "I haven't any doubt about it at all and she longed to ask: "Then shall we be married—soon?" but she checked the words, for surely it was for him to be the first to speak of it.

"I thought," she said presently, "that perhaps we might go and meet Dulcie? Will you? I want her to see you."

He made a little grimace. "I can't imagine that she will be very thrilled at the idea of seeing me."

"Oh, yes, she will," Jane declared. "She loves me—she doesn't care much for women, but she loves men and they like her, too. When we were at school she had all the sweethearts."

"Is she engaged?"

Jane shook her head. "Not yet; she could have been lots of times but I suppose she's too particular."

"She's probably waiting for a millionaire," he said drily.

"I shouldn't be surprised," Jane answered. "She loves money." And then she asked again, "Will you come with me to meet her?"

"If you wish it."

And so the following afternoon they drove together to the station, Jane had taken unusual pains with her toilet, remembering that Dulcie's was always beyond reproach.

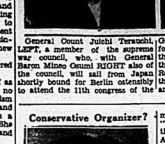
German Nazi party. There are well founded reports that while in Berlin the Japanese statesmen will put the finishing touches to the Tokyo-Rome-Berlin axis and to expand the axis part into a mutual defense and aid pact.

Conservative Organizer?



J. H. Harris, M.P., will be organizer for the Conservative party in Ontario in the next federal election, it was reported in Toronto. The appointment has not been officially confirmed.

but it was not of herself she thought as she and Gavin paced up and down the platform, but of the man for whom she wanted Dulcie's approval.

"She'll be sure to like him," she told herself proudly as she looked at him. He was so tall and good-looking! Just the type of man Dulcie admired.

She glanced down at her engagement ring—Jane seldom wore gloves and in consequence her hands were a little brown and boyish.

Dulcie would no doubt be a little scornful of that ring! But Jane loved it, chiefly perhaps because Gavin had worn it for so long. It had been with him in the bad days as well as the good, and it seemed to do be almost a part of him. Jane had never taken it off since the afternoon he gave it to her.

Rawdon

Rawdon—On Wednesday afternoon Mount Pleasant Woman's Missionary Society held their regular July meeting at the church and entertained the mothers and babies of the community, the Mission Band leader, and the members of the Mission Band with about seventy in attendance.

A beautiful bouquet of sweet peas and the lighted candles decorated the head table. The program was presided over by Miss Gladys Summers, president of the Mission Band and the pianist was Marion Rose, was in charge of the music. Miss Anna Sharp acted as secretary, pro tem.

Mrs. Cyrus Summers conducted the worship period which opened with the rendition of "For the beauty of the earth." Miss Martin Johnson read "the story of the fisherman." The Bible lesson was read responsively interspersed with familiar hymns and as a fitting climax, Miss Gladys Summers sang "The Newfoundland National Anthem" with guitar accompaniment A large number answered the roll call and the treasurer, Miss Eileen MacMullen reported nineteen dollars remitted to Presbyterial treasurer for six months.

Misses Lois Weaver, Ruth Rose and Gwen Ketcheson sang as a trio "Tis not far to Jesus", with Mrs. Kenneth Rose as accompanist. Master Neil Hubble-sang "When he cometh" with his mother as accompanist. Master Bruce Melville read "A temperance speech." Miss Lois McMullen contributed a reading and Master Jerry Melville read "Good neighbors." Mrs. Summers reviewed the stories in the study book on the text and based her talk on "A boy named Richard in Newfoundland". The offering was gathered by Jack Rose and Robert Hoard. Previous to the programme the picnic opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Percy Hubble.

The call to worship based on "God will take care of you" was given by the president, Mrs. Percy MacMullen. Twelve members answered roll call. The guests of the afternoon were heartily welcomed and in the business period plans were made for two quiltings in August. The social hour at close of the Missionary Monthly was referred to as well as pictures of the new Dominion Board President also the new book entitled "Pioneers of Service." A letter re a world service conference to be held in Belleville was read and delegates will be appointed at a later date. At the close of the business programme the children were applauded for their splendid entertainment and then all the guests were served sandwiches, cookies and lemonade and all enjoyed a social hour on the lawn shade. Before departing homewards two band members tendered the W.M.S. a hearty vote of thanks for hospitality.

Mr. and Mrs. John Terrill, Bethel, were recent guests of his parents at Canrobert.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bailey and Evelyn enjoyed a motor trip to Bancroft.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Heath, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Heath, Harold, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Adams and John spent Sunday with Mrs. Thomas Laycock, Deloro.

Miss Edith Hagerman recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. John Hagerman and family to tea.

Dr. and Mrs. M. Wellman and Phillip, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hagerman, Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Watson are guests at Mrs. Hagerman's.

Master I. Lloyd, New York City, is spending his vacation with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Lloyd, Harold.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vance visited relatives at Portland and Consecon, Ivy Lea bridge over the weekend.

Mr. Colin. Hudgins, South Bay, has rented a recent farm of Mrs. Mowbray Sine, Mrs. Walter Hagerman and Miss Edith Hagerman.

Mrs. J. Honeycutt of Ellenswood, N. Y., and Mrs. Merle Lucinda Heath, of Harold are staying with Mrs. Thomas Laycock, Deloro.

Several farmers are busy threshing these days. Messrs Theodore Hagerman, Percy Potts and Frank Stapley are all busy threshing fall grain.

Smart Hurling by Derringer And Heavy Hitting by Team Gives Cincinnati Double Win

Reds Have Now 10½ Game Lead and Look Cinch to Win Flag

3 TEAMS CLOSE

Cards and Cubs Win but Pirates Defeated by Phillies 9-8

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

The way Cincinnati Reds are flying along in the National Baseball League the impression grows that now is a good time for other senior circuit teams to look at the Red Birds. The Reds lead by 10 1-2 games and chances are none will get much closer to them this season.

That is the consensus after yesterday's double triumph in which they had the benefit of some of Paul Derringer's best pitching in the first game and some smart hitting in the second to down Boston Bees, who have been playing almost .500 ball the last month.

The league leaders won 6-1 behind Derringer's eight-hit hurling but they had to go 11 innings in the afterpiece before Frenchy Bordagaray's timely single scored the winning run and gave them a 9-8 edge.

Trio Not Giving Up

The Reds won when three of their closest pursuers—the Pirates, Cardinals and Cubs—were all shooting hastily, "we ain't conceedin' 'em nothin'."

Those three are not giving up for very good reasons. The renaissance of Dizzy Dean has given the Cubs' pennant visions again. The work of Tom Sunkel has had a vitalizing effect on the Cards and the Pirates are in the middle of a winning streak.

The Cards kept up their winning ways at the expense of the Giants with a 9-6 victory built around every pinch batter getting a hit or homer with bases loaded. Don Padgett did it in the seventh.

The Cubs made their 46th victory of the year look easy as Big Bill Lee stopped the Dodgers with a five-hitter for his 11th of the season. That left only the Pirates or the three pretenders to the Reds' throne in yesterday's loserz' group. The Bucs took one on the chin from the Phillies, 9-8, in spite of a seven-run splurge in the sixth inning.

American League

In the American League Chicago White Sox tramped on Boston 12-7 as the veteran Clint Brown made his 20th relief appearance of the year and won his eighth victory. He pitched three ball after relieving Johnny Marcum in the sixth.

The Tigers called on Paul Trout and he called on his high hard one to make the Washington Senators call for help. The Detroiters won 8-1. The Yankee-St. Louis Browns and the Athletics-Athletics games were rained out.

Yesterday's Stars

Don Padgett, Cards: His pinch homer in the seventh with the bases loaded gave the Giants a drubbing.

Bill Lee, Cubs: Limited the Dodgers to five hits in winning his 11th.

Morris Arnovich, Phillies: "One for three," enabled him to maintain .370 average in Phillies' Pirates.

Paul Trout, Tigers: A five-hit job beat Washington 8-1 and gave Detroit the series.

BELLEVILLE INTS. SCORE EIGHT IN 8TH FRAME TO WIN

Defeat Flyers 16-10 and Are Further Assured of Playoff Spot

HEAVY HITTING

"Lefty" Weeks Does a Real Job of Relief Hurling for Three Frames

Scoring eight runs in the eighth inning, the Belleville "Ortuso" came from behind to down the Air Force 16 to 10 in their scheduled Bay of Quinte League fixture at the Fair Grounds last evening in an abbreviated eight inning affair that was terminated with two out in the eighth, on account of darkness. The win solidifies the "Ortuso" potential play-off position of third place in the league standings.

Featured on the greater part by errors, the game was one of the wildest of the current Quinte loop season as the Air Force hooked away a seven run lead, after leading by a 9-2 count in the fifth. Heavy hitting was the feature of contest as five different pitchers were paraded before a mere handful of patrons. "Lefty" Weeks, local portsider provided the most effective of the pitchette used, Belleville having three and the Air Force two hurlers injected into the pastime at one time or another. The teams combined to boot the spheriod for a total of 15 glaring errors in the game-of-the-season. Belleville's booting the ball for eight miscues, the majority of which counted materially in the game.

Keleher Pounded Out

From the fifth on Belleville showed more attack after Ellis had replaced Kelleher in the third and then later gave way to Weeks, who finished the game as the winning pitcher. Belleville drove Spidel Webb, the Air Force starting mound-man to the showers in the eighth with a three run barrage after having scored in the sixth and seventh. Gordon, the Air Force relief hurler, was welcomed by a terrific battering as he took to the box in the eighth as Belleville scored eight runs on eight hits and nine walks. Umpire Jack Weir having to call the game on account of darkness with only two nails out getting Belleville the nod 16 to 10 in a rugged but interesting eight inning set.

Empson, Weeks and Ellis with three hits each led the attack, while Smith, with a triple and single and Oleskivis with two singles are the two prolific hitters for the Air Force.

The game afforded all pitchers paraded to the hilltop was most faithful and consistent to the hard-labouring moundsmen.

RED WINGS FOUR GAMES BEHIND

Defeat Orioles 14-10 in Only Game Played in Loop

By The Associated Press)

Rochester Red Wings were within four games of the league leading Jersey City Giants today as a result of their 14-10 victory over Baltimore Orioles in the only game to escape the giant downpour which washed out the International League schedule last night.

Eight pitchers paraded in the arcklight exhibition, six of them for the Orioles, and a total of 32 hits were blasted into the night air. The victory of Wallops punctuated the new spirit with which they are pursuing the Little Giants.

Red Rowell of Baltimore, socking a homer and three singles, led the hit parade with his teammate Art Graham showing a homer, double and single for runner-up honors.

Baltimore's poor pitching staff was at its worst as Linke, Burkhart, Mehlhiff, Brame, Schenk and Kerr each took his turn on the mound to face the Wing's firing squad. Kerr gave up the safeties in the one inning he worked.

Al Johnson started for Rochester and received credit for the victory, although he was touched for 12 blows and had to relinquish the box to Roy Hitshaw in the seventh.

The triumph gave Rochester eight victories against five defeats with the Flock this season, and boosted the Wings half a game ahead of third-place Buffalo.

Helen Wills Moody May Compete at Forest Hills, N. Y.

(By Mary Plummer Associated Press Staff Writer).

New York, July 28 (AP)—The odds in this stage are about one to four that Mrs. Helen Wills Moody will this summer will put aside the mystery novel she's pecking out on a typewriter, and seek her eighth United States tennis title at Forest Hills, N.Y.

After 18 years at the game, in which she had won eight Wimbledon, seven American and four French titles, she is a little amused and perplexed at the drawing power of competitive sport, that makes her today 25 per cent in favor of a quest for another title.

"I'm never going to retire," said the "little poker-face" of the courts. "From time to time I feel I'm not going to play, but you never can tell when it will pull you back. You might want to go waddling around and if you still have a little spring in your knees!"

Lithe and slim at 33, Mrs. Moody is out nearly every afternoon on a mid-town court, playing an occasional game after a morning's work on her second mystery novel.

Her first, "Death Serves an Ace," which she wrote in collaboration with Robert C. Murphy, will be published Aug. 1. It's a tennis mystery, about hair-raising high-jinks in connection with a big match. Mrs. Moody, an artist of considerable ability, was so interested in working out the plot she stopped painting for nearly a year.

The story she's now writing will be her fourth book.

Well launched on an author's career, Mrs. Moody summed up her plans, after denying any matrimonial plans at present: "Simply keep on working."

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

All-too-frequent the cry "blocked ball, goes up during softball games at the Flats, when, if the managers actually knew the definition of a "block ball," they'd refrain from such ridiculous statements. Only really appealing "blocked balls" would be eliminated. First and foremost the players' bench on the east side of the diamond should be repaired and the players required to remain on the bench while not directly engaged in play. By keeping the players on their respective benches and not permitting the public to line inside of the fence, the players would have a clear playing space from first to third inside the fences in foul territory and around rules could be more easily regulated and plays determined without so much squabbling.

Getting back to the question of what constitutes a blocked ball, however. According to the softball rules a block ball is defined as follows:

1. "A block is a batted or thrown ball touched, stopped or handled by a person not engaged in the game.

2. "Whenever a block occurs the umpire shall declare it and the base runners may advance one base without liability of being put out until the ball has been returned and held by the pitcher in his position."

The rule is quite plain, but as long as players and spectators are permitted inside the erected barriers at the Flats, trouble will continue to brew. Moving back the inside barriers free and agreeing fully with the ground rules outside the barriers, there should be no more wrangling. Incidentally and while on the subject it might be a good idea to start the games at 6.30 and not at the fixture. There would be a good time to clean up the diamond for the evening's real high class mudball for a change.

The patrons at last night's Quinte League fixture, between the locals "Ortuna" and the Flyers were treated to an exhibition of everything except baseball. Both clubs booted the pellet around in a most pitiful manner and some of the throwing would have put to shame a team of sixteen-aged kids. The crowning Belleville staged a Merriwell finish by gladden the hearts of a handful of faithful fans to score eight big runs in the eighth inning and win 16 to 10, but neither team deserved to be lauded or honors with such a poor display of baseball. Had Manager Foster of the visiting nine left his starting pitcher Ellis where is little doubt but victory would have been won on the other side of the score sheet which may prove a costly mistake on the part of the Flyers' skipper. However, the home team won and in victory Belleville moved closer to an entry into the playoffs.

About the only features of the game were the continued errors, being of the "boot" variety—and nature, the heavy hitting of both squads and the pitching of everything that got beaned. There was one redeeming feature of the game, however, that being the fine relief hurling of "Lefty" Weeks, who allowed three hits and one unearned run during his session on the Belleville hilltop. The support given all pitchers was shaky and exceptionally poor in view of the fact that the league's potential pennant threats Skipper Wilkins wants to unearth a shortstop and catcher pronto, not that we do not appreciate the efforts of Freddie Churchill but we don't appreciate efforts all season. In fairness to the locals, after the battle we must admit the game through in a splendid manner with the eighth inning rally and all concerned really pounded the old apple to the clutch. May they continue their efforts.

	Won.	Lost.	Pts.
Picton	12	5	24
Trenton	9	8	18
Belleville	8	10	16
R.C.A.F.	5	10	10

Games next week: Monday, Belleville at Picton, Tuesday, Napanee at R.C.A.F. Wednesday, R.C.A.F. at Picton.

When Ernie Young, winner of the Belleville Kinsmen Club "Soap Box Derby" time up to race for the International races at Akron, Ohio, next month, one of the contestants Ernie should have to compete against is 14-year-old Bobby Lane of Brooklyn, N.Y., winner of the New York City Soap Box Derby, sponsored by the New York Post. In winning the Gotham race young Lane was clocked at 43 seconds flat. He covered the course in 22.19 seconds to establish a new record. How did Young during the Belleville race.

Freddie Walsh, Toronto umpire and referee, who is off duty (all days) of the O.O.B.L. and is now umpiring in the Toronto Intermediate League, was forced out of his occupation for a time at Ottawa yesterday. Freddie, who was one of the better class umpires in the league, had to retire from the scene on account of a stomach ailment.

Louis Lecompte, star Air Force centre ice hockeyist and soft ball player, is confined to the military hospital in Kingston with a severe attack of appendicitis they say it is not considered serious. However, with his fine sporting temperament, is worrying to no end his many friends. Clever netminder, two members of the Flyers' hockey team were with the Airmen last night, at first and second respectively.

Sport Mash—They do say the Belleville Baseball Association Pill (Babe) Mashilton of the Leafs is being sought by the New York Yankees, which proves our suggestion of two months ago. Baseball of great work for a willing youngster, and you can't beat the hours. Let's all get behind Freddie Churchill, Jimmie Braddock's comeback effort of late, which might be a good thing after all and for all concerned. Speaking of Braddock and The Reds won two from the Rees yesterday and are now 19 1-2 games in front of the second place Cincinnatis, a substantial lead indeed.... Jack Hayes has been real fine for the Shell "Oilers" to Journey out to Madoc and vicinity and whitewash the gang 22 to 4 last evening, but such practice will in no way help the morale of the club later.

"Kit" Kiser, right fielder of the Corbys A.C. will be an absentee in front of the Barnett lineup tonight. Kiser sustaining a torn ligament of the leg as the result of sliding into one of the many "gopher holes" in the Odessa Flats diamond. The loss of the quiet, but effective Kiser will be keenly felt by Corbys.

WEEKLIES MEET IN NIAGARA FALLS

250 Editors and Owners Will Attend and Visit World's Fair

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 28— (CP)—Representatives of Canada's weekly press will attend the 20th annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association here Aug. 3 to 5. About 250 will attend business sessions and later visit the world's fair at New York.

Mayor Carl D. Hannivell will welcome delegates at an opening day luncheon. Dan. M. Lyle Spencer, editor of the New York Syracuse University, will speak on the future of the weekly press and Andrew O. Hebb of Newmarket, Ont., will lead a forum on circulation standards for weekly newspapers.

S. J. Dornan of the Alameda (Sask.) Dispatch, who was among those who covered the royal visit in Canada and the United States, will tell his experiences during the second day's program. Glen Barnerman of Toronto, president of the Association of Canadian Advertisers, will address delegates on "A National Advertiser Looks at the Weeklies."

Circulation problems will be discussed in group sessions with discussions led by T. A. Love of Grand Forks, B.C.; R. A. Giles, Lachute, P.Q. and Rene Pearce of Simcoe, Ont.

The final day's forum will consist of a general forum on simplified cost systems for weeklies.

Winners of contests conducted by the Association to determine the best edited and best printed Canadian weeklies will be announced at the convention banquet Friday night. More than 100 newspapers are entered.

CHINESE FRAUDS U.S. AUTHOR

Chungking, China, July 28.— (AP)—Foreign Minister Wang Chunghui of the Chinese Central government said today the United States demonstrating or her trade treaty with Japan made clear that Washington's policy was "to be judged by deeds rather than words".

There was gratification among Chinese officials and a hope the action would stiffen British policy toward Japan.

DUTCH PREMIER RESIGNS

The HAGUE, The Netherlands, July 28.— (CP-Havas)— Premier Hendryk Colijn, who formed his fifth Cabinet Tuesday and was defeated 55-20 on a no-confidence vote in the Lower House yesterday, presented his resignation to Queen Wilhelmina today.

The Sovereign requested him to carry on pending the selection of a new government.

Balkan Rulers May Form Bloc In New Entente

London, July 28 (CP)—The Daily Herald (Labor) reported today in a dispatch from Istanbul, Turkey, that three Balkin kings and the Turkish president may meet to form a solid bloc with Bulgaria as a new member of the Balkan Entente.

"A new epoch in Balkan history may result, certain circles here believe, from the visit to Istanbul which King Carol of Rumania began today," the dispatch said.

(Other Istanbul reports said King Carol sat at dawn for the Aegean Sea. He is expected to stop at Smyrna, but the remainder of his itinerary is unknown.)

"They predict," the dispatch continued, "that the King's arrival may be followed by a 'peace conference' of the four Balkan rulers—Carol, Boris of Bulgaria, George of Greece and Turkey's president, General Ismet Inonu, and that the conference will make a final and supreme effort to consolidate the 'Balkan Peninsula by roping Bulgaria into the Balkan Entente.'"

MARMORA

Street Dance and Vaudeville Frolic Held in Marmora

Marmora, July 28 (Special)—The eighth annual Street Dance and Vaudeville Frolic sponsored by Marmora Agricultural Society was held on Wednesday evening with a large attendance. Among the attractions was Jimmy Barber and his Musical Men who furnished modern and old-time dance music and their entertainment was well received with their novelty and comedy numbers. The Two Arons and man and lady, were a clever and neat acrobatic and fast tumbling team. Carley Billiphant, a cowboy entertainer, and his dog, pos on a good show, with singing, music and roping. His dog proved a very clever comedian.

Roy Thomas and Company put on a good floor show comedy feature, and was loudly applauded.

Billy Palmer and his Swingettes, composed of five people, mostly girls, gave some fine singing and dancing numbers in fast tap, ballet, strut and Hawaiian.

The Dolores Sisters making a fine appearance gave a splendid exhibition of fast tap dancing.

Ruth Everett, the mechanical doll, gave a sensational contortion act. Billy Palmer made a genial master of ceremonies and his sing numbers an dancing drew loud applause. Sound amplifiers were used which added much to the entertainment.

The refreshment booths, games and bingo were well patronized. John Warren was the holder of the lucky ticket on the canoe which was raffled during the evening. The directors and members of Marmora Agricultural Society are well pleased with the financial results of the entertain.....

SCOTTS SCRAP BOOK — by R. J. SCOTT

Option Renewed

By THAYER WALDO

It wasn't just a matter of interest on the part of the management of the director for Penny Serenade, new starring vehicle for Cary Grant and Irene Dunne, that caused a flurry of excitement around the Columbia lot this afternoon.

Everyone knew that Hollywood's only woman director had been signed by the studio a month before, but nobody thought it meant much.

Certainly even those close to Producer Joseph Pevney didn't expect this assignment.

Leona Parrell was Zenith's topsalaried player; the best of everything was considered hers by divine right. Yet here was this Dorothy Adams—a near-unknown, a sort of freak, it was about to be turned loose on the latest and greatest of La Parrell's super specials.

It didn't seem reasonable, but no one had the nerve to ask Pevney direct questions.

The woman director was unmarried, about 30, and an attractive redhead. There Hollywood's definite knowledge of her ended.

She'd come from New York half a year ago, and since then had been studying film technique at one of the other studios. Her private life had simply remained private.

No scandals, no rumors, not even a notable public appearance had she far marked her stay in the film capital.

At first it was generally believed that Leona Parrell would protest the selection.

But nothing of the sort occurred; on the day the rehearsals were scheduled, the star appeared on stage 5 and exchanged cordial greetings with her new director.

Then for several hours Dorothy Adams watched and heard Leona Parrell smile a dozen or more important scenes were run through.

Surprising deftness was evident in the director's handling; her comments and suggestions brought added life to the dialogue.

Those who worked with her found their admiration growing. Surely this woman was no tyro and her understanding of the Parrell temperament seemed thorough.

At last but one main sequence remained unrehearsed.

It was a major piece of footage that came early in the script, establishing the first love of the character played by Miss Parrell.

When Dorothy Adams called for it, a fresh hum of interest arose.

Ralph Ormand, a new contract player recently signed in New York, had been named for this role opposite the star.

He had arrived in Hollywood only the day before; this was to be his first studio appearance.

A page went to call Ormand from his dressing room, and in a moment the actor came.

He was young—younger than most of the observers had expected; probably not over 28. Yet his manner was poised, urbane, and the handsome, smooth-shaven face held no hint of immaturity.

Dorothy Adams was turned away, consulting with her assistant, when he entered the set.

As the sound of her voice reached him, he paused and a shade of puzzlement came into his eyes.

Then she faced him, and no one on that set could possibly have missed the startled tension that appeared in both their faces.

For just an instant a breathless silence prevailed, to be broken as Ormand stepped forward with his queer little smile.

"I believe," he said in a slightly different tone, "that you were ready for me?"

Before the words were ended, all trace of emotion had left Dorothy Adams. Matter-of-factly she nodded and told him:

"Yes, Mr. Ormand; there's a bit I'd like you to rehearse with Miss Farrell. It's sequence A, scene 13."

He murmured assent.

The director turned her back again and faced Grey.

From the small crowd of studio workers there came a hum of whispered, and significant glances were freely exchanged.

On the outskirts stood Louis Garrison, studio publicity director. He had seen the moment of by-play in that meeting and, with everyone else, had realized at once that Dorothy Adams and the actor were not strangers. But, unlike the others, his interest ran deeper than a mere thrill of curiosity.

Shrewd appraisal of the situation told him there was a faint chance of trouble ahead.

In the woman's face he had caught a glint of bitter hurt, as if at sudden memory of an old wound.

Chances were, Garrison reflected, there had been romance between the pair—a romance that Ormond, not she, had ended. If so—well, hell had no fury—

And Dorothy Adams was in a position to make or break the young actor, so far as pictures were concerned.

Garrison frowned. The thing would certainly bear watching.

Rehearsal began again.

The scene involved only Ormand and Leona Parrell. In the story's early portion, the character she played was an artist's model, and he a successful young illustrator.

During the sequence, in his studio this woman's was no tyro and her understanding of the Parrell temperament seemed thorough.

Through the full scene the observers a perfect performance of superb smoothness and realism, particularly in the lovemaking dominating.

Yet at its finish Dorothy Adams rose abruptly, eyes snapping and voice almost harsh.

"It's absolutely no good," she said, looking directly at Ormand; "you won't even trouble to try again ... That'll be all today. We start on sequence B at nine sharp tomorrow."

There was only a stunned silence as she walked off the set.

Ormand, crimson-faced, stared after her.

Louis Garrison made a clucking noise and shook his head. It didn't be told himself, look so good, quite apparently the woman was determined on revenge.

Nine next morning came, but no Dorothy Adams and no Ormand. Garrison, hearing the news, was frantic.

The double absence, he felt, could have but one meaning; they had both walked out.

Of course, the newspapers would get it and there'd be a lot of unfavorable publicity.

He started at once for Pilberg's office to confer on the problem.

Crossing the lot, Garrison suddenly saw the studio gate swing open. A small coupe rolled through, the red-haired woman director at the wheel. He watched her park and then, as she got out, went forward.

Dorothy Adams greeted him pleasantly.

"Well, good morning," Garrison said; "we are beginning to be afraid you'd—that something had happened, I mean."

Coloring a little, she smiled and answered:

"Yes, I know I'm late—and it's too bad, because I didn't need all those people who've been waiting. I'm going to do scene 13 of sequence A again, instead—as soon as Mr. Ormand arrives."

She began to walk toward the stages and Garrison fell into step beside her.

"But—oh—how did you know he wasn't here?"

"Oh," she replied evasively, "Mr. Ormand and I are old friends."

A momentary silence, then:

"I'm not trying to be rude," he said, "but—well, it didn't seem yesterday as if you were very friendly toward him and now—that is, I sort of wondered—"

Dorothy Adams stopped, facing him.

"Sometimes," she stated, "you sound positively stupid. Didn't you ever hear of a jealous woman?"

Then she moved swiftly on and Garrison, feeling vaguely adrift, went toward his office with slow steps. As he entered she phone rang. Smith of the "Examiner" was calling.

"Say, Louie," the man barked, "what do you know about this Dorothy Adams-Ralph Ormand thing. They filed notice of intention at the marriage bureau this morning and told the clerk they'd been engaged before and—"

"Brother," Garrison cut in wearily, starting the receiver toward its hook, "I don't know anything—not a cockeyed thing in the world."

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being stake under onions, and ma said, if this stake is tender you can give the credit all to me rather than to the butcher, I assure you.

How about a few words of praise to the trusting young steer from whom it was cut? pop said, and ma said, You wouldn't believe anybody would have the indignity to eat an old cooked cow for a stake as that butcher sent around, believe me William I called him up and told him one or 2 things that must of seemed simple, and it didn't take him long to send his boy around with a respectable piece of meat, that is, William?

It's more than respectable, it's genteel, pop said, and ma said, I was so angry I could of slapped his red face for him if it hadn't been over the telephone.

I know just how you felt, confounded little cuss made me so mad this afternoon that if thera had been any kind of an appropriate weapon handy I wouldn't of answered for the consequences, pop said. I flatter myself that I'm a pretty tolerant man and can make allowances for others weaknesses, but this fellow was so absolutely inconsiderate, so utterly devoid of the slightest respect for the sensibility of others that he made me see red.

Now that's a few words of praise to the trusting young steer from whom it was cut? pop said, and ma said, You wouldn't believe anybody would have the indignity to eat an old cooked cow for a stake as that butcher sent around, believe me William I called him up and told him one or 2 things that must of seemed simple, and it didn't take him long to send his boy around with a respectable piece of meat, that is, William?

Near Record is Reached for Low Rainfall at Tweed

Tweed—Rainfall in Tweed and district for the first twenty-six days in July totalled only .85 inches, as against an average precipitation of 3 inches for the month of July over a twelve year period, according to the Forestry Branch weather report. The precipitation is but twenty per cent of the normal rainfall and unless there is rain within the remaining few days of the month they will come close to establishing a scanty rainfall record. Rainfall during May and June was considerably below the average for these two months but crop prospects up until three weeks ago were for above the average. Today they present a sorry picture with much grain ripening with short straw and unfilled heads. Pastures are drying up fast and the milk flow is cut almost in half according to local factories and creameries.

WALL STREET

New York, July 28 (AP) — The stock market tried to extend its recovery yesterday but met with much buying indifference.

While there was special weakness notieable, and small advances were sketched, numerous issues were unchanged to down a shade near the fourth hour.

Occasionally at one time or another were General Motors, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Glenn Martin, American Telephone, Public Service and Pacific Gas, Safeway Stores, Celanese and American Can.

Inclined to hang back were Chrysler, Du Pont, Case Rockwell, Douglas Aircraft, International Harvester, Westinghouse, Great Northern, General Electric, Goodyear, Consolidated Edison, Loft and Standard Oil of N. J.

Clipped small fractions in the Canadian group were C.P.R., Power and Distillers. Dominion 4's were under moderate pressure in the bond market.

Fashion Foundation For Fine Friendship With Mayor Houde

Montreal, July 28.— (CP)— A Canadian playground experience in the city hall brat bagged away at a battered piano in the Mayor's office, and fashioned the foundation for what may be a beautiful friendship with Mayor Camillien Houde.

The pair, particularly popular with Mr. Houde, were dining when in walked the city's colorful Mayor and they were invited to sit down with them.

"Let's sit down with you fellows, you'll make me talk and what I'll say will come out all cock-eyed in the English papers," Houde said jesting. The Mayor went to another table.

One reporter sighted the piano and they took turns playing. Eventually the Mayor, thawing out, "Have a beer".

After the usual selections—the "Merry Widow Waltz", excerpts from the "Chocolate Soldier" and the like—the pair struck the Mayor's favorites. All reserve was broken when the pair mentioned golf, striking a party some day for the city hall reporters.

GOATS PROVIDE RAW MATERIALS

Large Number of Animals Brought to Prescott from Quebec

Prescott, Ont., July 28—(CP) — First consignment of goats for Prescott's newest industry arrived here yesterday by truck from Quebec. Processing plant is to follow.

The goats will provide the raw materials for the kid glove manufacturing plant established here recently by Louis Fischl, Czechoslovakian manufacturer.

Checks soon to arrive from Europe will tend the goats on small farms in the Prescott district. Meanwhile the goals were placed in a field opposite the new plant.

NEW PRINCIPAL WILL BE CANADIAN

Successor to Lewis W. Douglas at McGill University Will be Chosen Shortly

Montreal, July 28 (CP)—A successor to Lewis M. Douglas as principal of McGill University will be chosen before the end of the summer and the University will not go outside Canada for the individual, Sir Edward Beatty, Chancellor of the University, said Thursday.

Sir Edward, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who returned yesterday from a brief visit to England, said the choice of a Canadian is definite and "we will not go to England or the United States."

Resignation of Mr. Douglas, former United States director of the Budget was announced June 15. He accepted a position in New York. The new principal will be the first Canadian to hold the office since the death of Sir Arthur Currie.

TOURIST KILLED, THREE INJURED

Car Leaves Road and Crashes Into Tree Near Cornwall

Riviere Beaudet, Que., July 28 — (CP)— A United States woman tourist was killed and three other persons were injured yesterday when their automobile inexplicably left the road and crashed into a tree on the Cornwall-Valleyfield highway at this village 50 miles west of Montreal.

The dead woman was tentatively identified as Mrs. Joseph Juiffre, 50, of Detroit, who died instantaneously of a fractured skull. The most seriously injured of the other occupants of the car was Mrs. Jennie Cazza, aged about 50, also of Detroit.

Mrs. Cazza was taken to hospital with a fractured arm, fractured fractured ribs, a broken collar-bone and internal injuries. Her husband, the driver, and Josephine Juiffre, 24, escape with minor bruises. The driver apparently fell asleep at the time but exact cause of accident was not established.

Mrs. Juiffre's body was taken to Montreal.

One Year Ago Today

There may not be any rain in sight but officials of the city fire station plan to keep the Ontario Intelligencer today that one year ago this day a torrential rain fell, deluging the district under one and one-tenth inches of rain.

The storm lasted approximately seven hours and twenty minutes, causing considerable destruction to a parched city and countryside.

Farley One Up, Adams All Square In Golf Matches

Mount Bruno Golf Course, St. Bruno, Que., July 28 (CP) — Phil Farley of Montreal all but halfway mark today of a 36-hole semi-final match in the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship one hole up on Ken Black of Vancouver. Farley drove a 1-under-par 69 over the Mount Bruno layout.

In the other semi-final, Ted Adams of Chillicothe, Mo. who won the title last year at London, Ont., was all square after 18 holes with Henry Martell of Edmonton.

TRAFFIC OFFICER SERIOUSLY HURT

Patrolman Hunter of Gananoque Found Lying on Highway

Motorcycle Patrolman Hunter, of the Provincial Highway Patrol out of Gananoque, was rushed to the Kingston General early today after being found lying on Highway No. 2, immediately west of Gananoque.

Later Provincial Police authorities advised that Constable Hunter had sustained two broken legs, a fractured arm and fractured skull and was in very serious condition. Little hope was held out for his recovery this afternoon. Provincial Officer Hunter had recently purchased a new four cylinder motorcycle which he was riding at the time of the accident. It is believed the machine skidded on the curve and threw the rider off. The officer was found lying in the centre of the highway some fifty feet west of the machine, that had crashed into a pole along the road shoulder. . . .

40 FAMILIES ON VERGE STARVING

Ottawa Citizen Tells of Stoppage of All Relief Near Fort Frances

Ottawa, July 28 (CP)—Without any form of relief of an official nature during the past six weeks, about 40 families in Mountain Park District of South Hull, on the outskirts of this city, are on the verge of starvation, The Ottawa Citizen states in a newspaper feature.

Direct relief in the township was stopped seven years ago, it was pointed out, but relief projects had enabled residents in the district to carry on. Within six weeks ago and now relief by charitable organizations has practically ceased, creating an extreme situation.

Most of the families in difficulties eke out their meagre food supply from small garden patches of vegetables, berry-picking expeditions and what fish they can catch in nearby rivers and lakes.

Immediate prospects of financial help or relief works from the township are not very bright, it is officially said. South Hull, a rural township, adjoins the city proper on the north, the Ottawa River behind the limits of Wrightville, Aylmer and Hull, Que.

STRIKES KEEP 2,000 IDLE

Incidents Involving Individual Miners Cause Tie-Ups in Ontario

New Waterford, N.S., July 28 (CP) —Strikes kept more than 2,000 workers in two Nova Scotia colliery districts idle today. Incidents involving individual miners caused tie-ups in both.

Almost 1,200 miners were out at Stellarton in the Pictou County area of Nova Scotia. They tied up four Acadia Coal Company pits when company officials refused to reinstate a fire-boss runner whose work officials said was unsatisfactory.

More than 1,100 men were idle in the strike at New Waterford, Dominion Coal Company's big producer in the New Waterford district. Douglas Gadd, Lingan Mine Workers' Union Sub-district Board member here said the trouble began after a clash last week between a miner, George McLean, and an official, Thomas Todd.

The miner's lamp was stopped later preventing him from going to work. Gadd declared the stoppage which he had suggested Gadd also be kept out of the mine until an investigation is made of the clash.

Arresting of No. 12 of the U.M.W. rejected a request to resume work in the big producer today.

The New Waterford strike was the second tie-up yesterday in the Cape Breton bituminous coal belt. Dominion Coal Company's small No. 10 mine at near-by Reserve was tied up when 100 men refused to go underground because of trouble in the slope. In the other area, 1,000 men were idle in other mines.

SIX KILLED IN CLASH

Bombay, July 28.— (AP)— Six persons were killed and 30 injured in a clash last night between Moslems and followers of the State of Hyderabad. The fight followed demonstrations by Moslems in protest against a new constitution which Moslems contended gave Hindus a preponderant influence.

The fight against red-tape waged by Edmund Rusnaki, Detroit, for the past four years culminated in this happy scene aboard the S. S. Champlain as it docked at New York, permitting Rusnaki with his Russian-born wife whom he had not seen for four years, Rusnaki, an American engineer working in Russia met Tamara. Berlin in 1933 and married her. A year later Rusnaki was given eight days in which to leave the country but was refused permission for his wife to accompany him. Now she has been allowed to renounce her Soviet citizenship and join her husband in America.

PRESENTATION

A delicious lunch was served and the guests departed, expressing their appreciation of the festivities to the young couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McKinney were the recipients of many lovely gifts at the reception held for them recently at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Embury. Among those present from distant points were a number from Belleville where the bride has been a very successful and popular teacher for the past year.

The early hours of the evening were spent in social intercourse. Rev. Mr. Craig, then invited the guests to assemble on the lawn where the bride and groom were given a shower of confetti and Mrs. Douglas Clarke read the following address:

Dear Bruce and Helen: We are gathered here tonight, your friends and neighbors, to wish you bon voyage as you embark on this unfrienaly venture. We have had the pleasure of knowing you both through childhood and youth. We are indeed glad that you are remaining with us and laying the foundation of your new home at Melrose.

Home is not made of wood and stone

But of rare seeds that love has sown.

Banish every trace of gloom

And love, we will help you make it home.

You have both already learned that life cannot be all sunshine, "into each life some rain must fall. Some days be dark and dreary."

But mutual co-operation, sympathy and understanding can make of your wedded life, a wonderful and beautiful voyage, with God hand guiding you through stormy and calm as to the still deep waters, even to the gates of Heaven, the end and aim of all His people.

Edgar Guest gives encouragement and cheer in his poesm:

Let me live in a house by the side

Yowing by God's book and psalm,

To be faithful find and true

Unto him, who stands by you.

Think not that romance has ended

That youth's curtain has descended.

And love's pretty play is done

For it's only just begun.

Rather now at some day find

You

Closer, closer they will bind you,

If together you will bear them.

Cares grow sweet when lovers share them

Love units two happy mortals,

Brings them hope of a world's portals

And then blithely bids them go

Arm in arm, through weal and woe

Little lady at the altar

Never let your courage falter

Never cease to be worthwhile

Even when your heart is grieving,

Keep a smile in spite of stormy weather

In disaster, stand together

Through life's fearful hours of night

Love shall bring you to the light.

And now we ask you to accept these gifts as a token of our affection and esteem. We all join in wishing you many years of wedded bliss.

God grant you strength for the trials He'll send you

God grant you wisdom for moments of doubt.

Lock, from disaster, can never defend you

There will be days when your faith must be stout

Never to selfishness weakly surrender

Pleasure will come if the burdens you share

Keep to your purpose br brave and be true

And love will outlive every hour of disaster

The sorrows are many twixt May and December

But the years are the memories once they are flown

Love will bestow countless joys to remember

But the best of luck can not do it alone.

Signed Ernie Pearce, Donald McLean, Murrile Whiteman, Jack English, Sherman Lazier.

The happy couple graciously acknowledged their appreciation of the kindness shown them and opened their gratitude for the gifts. All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

LEWIS' ATTACK STIRS UP TEMPEST

Denunciation of Garner May Lead to Revision of Wage-Hour Law

Washington, July 28 (AP)—John L. Lewis' denunciation of Vice President John Garner stirred up such a Congressional tempest today that senior leaders said it has improved chances for revision of the wage-hour law at this session.

Lewis, head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, was demanding that Congress make no change in the law when he told the House of Representatives Labor Committee yesterday that the Vice President is a "shirt-sleeving, poker-playing, whisky-drinking rural old man."

Ignoring the C.I.O. leader's opposition to any wage-hour alterations at stand in which the American Federation of Labor joined—the Labor Committee agreed after a tempestuous closed meeting to try to bring so-called "non-controversial" amendments to the House floor next Monday.

Bimbly Accuses Garner

Lewis bluntly accused Garner of "contemptible" conduct and said the "campaign against labor" in the House, and said: "I am against him in 1939 and I will be against him in 1940 when he seeks the Presidency of the United States."

Friends of the Texan rallied to his support in the Senate and House. Several of them predicted that Lewis' remark would help Garner politically.

"It will be worth millions of votes to the Vice President if he is a candidate for office in 1940," asserted Representative Bimbly (D., Tenn.-Nebraska.) "It should assure his election."

Garner declined to comment on Lewis' attack.

Legislators seeking a reason for Lewis' sensational utterances pointed widely circulated reports that Garner had attempted to induce President Roosevelt to compromise against the sitdown strikes in 1937 which C.I.O. unions were prominent.

Proposes to Give 80 Millions More Yearly to Aged

Plan Before U. S. Senate Causes Some to Fear Taxation and Plan

Washington, July 28—(AP)—A Senate proposal to give an additional $80,000,000 a year to the states for old age assistance, instead of far-reaching changes in the Social Security Act, appeared likely Saturday because some legislators believe it would be the first step toward the Townsend Pension Program.

Amendments to the Social Security Act have been approved by both the Senate and House of Representatives, but a joint conference committee has been trying unsuccessfully for two weeks to adjust differences between the two measures.

Members said today the committee has made no progress on the most controversial proposal before it—an amendment by Senator Tom Connally (D., Texas-Penal) requiring the government to match state old age assistance outlays $2 to $1. The two-to-one matching provision would be effective up to a maximum monthly payment of $10 from the government and $5 from the states to needy persons 65 and over.

Connally estimated his plan would cost the government an extra $80,000,000 a year.

Butter Moves Upward—Eggs Remain Firm

Eggs remained firm, while butter advanced a fraction of a cent on the Toronto open produce market of the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Cheese was quiet and unchanged.

The current scarcity of eggs, now a week old, appeared to be rapidly nearing an end yesterday afternoon as shipments began to increase in number. And as receipts grew heavier, tendency tended to weaken. Receipts were kept moving, however, and there was no scramble for prices. In the graded section, A-medium eggs firmed to a range of 26c to 26c while A-large ranged slightly higher at 16c to 15c. Prices for straights were 26c to 26c for A-large, 27c to 28c for A-medium, 19c to 20c for Grade B, and 17c to 18c for Grade C.

No. 1 creamery solids advanced from 21½c on the butter market in the afternoon after selling at 21½c during the morning. Brokers report no trouble in moving their offerings at either price, most of them being completely sold up by late afternoon with no butter to offer. Western butter sold at 21¼c in the morning and 20c during the afternoon.

The cheese market remained dull with no change occurred in prices. Buyers showed a complete lack of interest in new, large quantities of cheese make continued to hold a selling price of 13c.

Export Firmer

Montreal, July 28.—(CP)—Rye and barley prices were unchanged in the domestic markets. Steady for the second successive day, Chicago offerings held mainly unchanged except for a loss of ½ cent in barley while cheese.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 27c-28c, a dozen for A-large, 25½c-26c for A-medium, 19c-20c for B-large, 15c for C. Receipts: Case eggs 1,000; cartons 415 cases.

Potatoes: N.B. and Maine No. 1 Mis 75's $1.25-$1.30; P.E.I. No. 1 Mis 75's $1.25-$1.35; Quebec new crop 75's No. 1 $1.00-$1.10. Quebec new crop 75's No. 2 85c-70c.

PRESENTS A PROBLEM FOR THE SERGEANT

Quite a problem was faced by James R. Sadler, one of the newly-conscripted militiamen to arrive at Barriefield barracks recently. Being but four feet, six inches tall, Sadler found the rifle with fixed bayonet he soon will be using, was taller than himself. The sergeant, however, is explaining that Sadler would soon become accustomed to use of the weapon.

"I saved a dollar today"

It's a great satisfaction to look over the day's accounts and find you've been able to save money by careful buying.

Knowing WHERE to buy is part of the trick. But knowing HOW to buy is a bigger part. The wise "business manager" of the home plans her shopping as skilfully as a business man plans to spend a thousand dollars.

Advertisements help greatly, of course. On daily necessities like meats, fruits, vegetables, they show you how to save 2c here, 3c there, adding up to much. But advertisements are just as helpful on larger purchases—furniture, draperies, motor cars, clothing. Followed carefully, advertising saves you money all down the line . . . helps you run the household more economically . . . gives the budget a chance to breathe.

PAPER SUGGESTS

Reliable sources said Japan would refuse to take the initiative in drafting a new treaty to supplant the 1911 pact denounced by Washington. The government, it was stated ,would await American action notification period before expiration of the pact Jan. 26.

During that time officials hope the military situation in China may be improved sufficiently to permit relaxation of some restrictions on American business in the Orient and consequently improvement of relations.

Concern apparent in official quarters over termination of the accord caused observers to believe Tokyo fears the action may lead to something more serious—possibly an arms embargo.

Whether the United States action would drive Japan closer to the Rome-Berlin Axis still was a matter of speculation, but anything isolating Japan from other powers tends to push her closer toward Germany and Italy.

Far-Reaching Effect

By DeWitt Mackenzie
Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer

New York, July 28—(AP)—Sharp foreign reaction to Washington's move in denouncing the 1911 American-Japanese treaty—thereby making an embargo against Japan possible after six months—indicates that this unexpected diplomatic development bids fair to have a far-reaching, if indirect, effect on both the European and the far eastern situations.

Great Britain, uncomfortably involved on both these widely separated fronts, has welcomed the diversion.

Some observers feel that if the United States stand serves as a "go slow" signal to Japan in regard to her policies in China, regard to trespass on United States prerogatives, a corollary will be easement of the pressure of Britain. That in turn is calculated to strengthen Britain's hand in Europe.

Reaction Significant

The reaction in Tokyo and Berlin has been significant. Japanese officials, having in mind the possibility of an embargo against them in due course, declared the American act unfriendly.

Germany attributed a "highly political motive" to the treaty denunciation. There was immediate speculation over the possible economic and military consequences.

Should an embargo by chance eventuate it would cut Japan off from her main source of vital military supplies.

An analysis of the present status of the two cities shows quite clearly why Britain chooses to regard Washington's action in a favorable light.

First, both European and Oriental developments have been pivoting at the same time on Russia. For long weeks Britain and France have been trying to draw the Soviet Union, with its vast resources, into a military alliance for mutual defence in Europe. This was the link which Paris and London have felt was necessary to make their bloc of nations impregnable.

Europe Tense

Europe has been tense as these vital negotiations have proceeded. And Japan took natural advantage of Britain's position. The Japanese blockade of the British concession at Tientsin followed.

At the same time hard fighting developed between Russian sponsored Mongolian troops and Japanese sponsored Manchukuoan forces. Japan also flung an ultimatum at Moscow in connection with the dispute over Sakhalin Island. Most observers believe that these events represented Japanese efforts to impede the British-French-Russian negotiations and so embarrass Britain's unfriendly [illegible].

Washington, July 28—(AP)—The possibility of a new commercial treaty between the United States and Japan to replace the 1911 pact terminated by the State Department diminished today as administration officials moved to strengthen their first stand against the Tokyo government.

There were these developments:

1. Chairman Key Pittman (Dem., Nevada) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee interpreted the action as a warning to the Japanese that the United States does not intend to retreat from its policy of maintaining American rights in the Orient.

2. Pittman served notice that the Senate would be asked to act on his resolution banning shipment of war supplies to Japan as soon as congress meets in January.

Countervailing Duties

3. The treasury studied the possible application of countervailing duties against Japanese imports on the ground they are being subsidized It also looked into United States purchases of Japanese gold and silver, from which Japan gets funds to buy materials here.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, and his far eastern advisers began what may prove a long scrutiny to determine whether termination of the treaty is to bring such a change in Japan's attitude toward China and foreign interests there that an embargo might not be necessary.

Probabilities

Moderate northeast to north winds mostly cloudy and comparatively cool; probably light scattered showers Sunday, shower or northeasterly winds, fair and moderately warm.

France Speculates Why Adolf Hitler Visited Berlin

One Paper Says Fuehrer is Considering Plan of Sending Senior Representative to Britain to Settle Differences

BERLIN SILENT

Hitler Goes Back Today to Wagner Musical Festival at Bayreuth — Hitler and Ribbentrop at Berlin for One Day

Berlin, July 29—(AP)—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler left Berlin today to return to Bayreuth where he will continue to attend the Wagner music festival after a one-day visit in the capital.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, who also returned to Berlin yesterday unexpectedly, also left for his summer home near Salzburg.

Authoritative quarters would say nothing on the reasons which brought the two men to the capital for only one day.

French Speculation on Reason

Paris, July 29—(CP-Havas)—French newspapers devoted much space today to speculation as to why Chancellor Hitler returned to Berlin yesterday from Bayreuth.

The newspaper Excelsior (Independent) reported that Hitler is considering a plan of sending a senior representative to Great Britain to open negotiations for settling Anglo-German differences.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—A shallow trough of low pressure extends from Labrador southwestward across the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the lower lakes and pressure is said low to the northward of the western provinces, while the barometer is high over southern districts of Ontario and Quebec. Thundershowers have occurred in many districts of Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick, also in a few sections of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The weather has been decidedly warm over the greater part of the prairie provinces but it has become considerably cooler in the region of the Great Lakes.

Lake Superior — Moderate, variable winds; fair and moderately warm. Sunday, moderate to fresh southerly winds; mostly fair and warm; probably followed by scattered thunderstorms.

Manitoba—Fresh southerly winds; partly cloudy and decidedly warm. Sunday, scattered thunderstorms tonight. Sunday, fresh winds, shifting to northwest; partly cloudy with scattered thundershowers and becoming somewhat cooler.

Saskatchewan—Cloudy with scattered thunderstorms; cooler in the western district. Sunday, mostly fair and moderately warm.

Alberta—Partly cloudy and cooler with thunderstorms in a few districts. Sunday, fair and moderately warm.

Why the Weather!

By Major A H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Thunderstorms are most frequent this month in North America. For the earth as a whole there are 14,000,000 thunderstorms a year, resulting in 100 lightning flashes a second. The places of greatest frequency are Java, with a rate of 200 a year, and Mexico, Brazil and the Belgian Congo with over 100 per year. They are least frequent, 5 or less a year, over the Pacific and South Atlantic oceans and within in the Arctic and Antarctic circles. Over land thunderstorms occur more in late afternoons but over the oceans in early morning.

Drought Grips Millions of Acres Of Farm Lands

Conditions of Drought Are Not So Widespread As in 1934 and 1936

Washington, July 29—(AP)—A mid-summer drought gripped millions of acres of United States crop and pasture land today, threatening considerable losses to farmers.

In contrast with the severe dry weather of 1934 and 1936, which was almost nationwide, present drought conditions are confined principally to Middle Atlantic and New England States, the southwestern "Dust Bowl" and sections of the Rocky Mountains and upper Great Lakes.

While losses have been heavy, particularly in the eastern drought belt, J. B. Kincer, the weather bureau's crop specialist, explained they were not comparable in seriousness to those of 1934 and 1936.

Inasmuch as the United States has large surpluses of cotton, corn, wheat and most other agricultural products, drought losses are expected to have small effect on prices and supplies, officials said.

Sir Kingsley Wood Shaken in Landing

Barrow-in-Furness, England, July 29—(CP)—Recovered from the shaking up he received in a forced aeroplane landing here last night, Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood left today for London.

The plane in which the Air Secretary was travelling developed engine trouble and the pilot, two other passengers and a crew of four had been unexpectedly more than an hour over a storm-ridden Irish Sea before it came down here.

Sir Kingsley Campbell, private parliamentary secretary to the Air Secretary, appeared today with an arm in a sling and a bandage on his head. Air Marshal Sir Christopher Courtney also suffered contusions.

The Under Marshal W. Sholto-Douglas and M. F. H. Sandford, Sir Kingsley's private secretary, were also injured. All four members of the crew suffered slight injuries.

30 CONTRACTORS HELD IN GERMANY

Lines of Fortifications Along French Border Washed Out by Rains

London, July 29—(CP)—The Metz correspondent of the News-Chronicle (Liberal) today reported recent floods have played havoc in Germany. Lines line of fortifications along the Siegfried line are severely affected, revealed so many flaws in their construction that several contractors have been arrested and more than 30 contractors arrested.

The correspondent wrote:

"The Gestapo believe it is not a question of deliberate sabotage, but of dishonesty. Some contractors reserved for their own use cement especially set aside under the four-year plan for fortifications, or substituted inferior materials."

NEW SALUTE USED

Tidworth, England, July 29—(CP)—The army's new Royal Marshalled royal salute was given for the first time today when the Royal Standard dipped as they passed the Queen in an inspection parade here.

Each tank swung its gun muzzles toward the Queen and then lowered them as it passed the saluting base.

Hour of Departure of Royalty Secret as Precautionary Measure

London, July 29—(AP)— The hour of departure of the King and Queen for an 11-week vacation at Balmoral Castle was kept secret today as precaution against possible Irish Republican Army terrorism during their nine-hour journey to Scotland.

The King and Queen plan to leave from Euston Station. A palace spokesman said the royal special would leave "some time Monday evening."

ONTARIO BLASTED BY A SERIES OF VIOLENT STORMS

Crops Flattened, Barns Burned, Streets Flooded and Livestock Killed

BAD AT MILLBROOK

Main Street in Village Covered With Two Feet of Water

Southern Ontario today was recovering from a series of violent electrical storms that swept sections from Windsor to the Quebec boundary, leaving in their wake disrupted communications, flattened crops, burned barns, flooded streets, damaged buildings and livestock losses.

Three cold fronts affects accompanied the tempests. The weatherman forecast cloudy and cooler weather for Ontario's southern areas, dissipating the stifling heat of the past week. The heavy rains also gave relief to parched crops and aided weary firefighters who have battled forest blazes in the eastern counties.

At least five people suffered from lightning striking near them. Arthur Footit was entering his barn near Millbrook, 14 miles southwest of Peterborough, when a bolt hit it. He was dazed but unhurt. At Cedar Grove, near Chatham, Joel Pegg, wife of Windsor, a farmhand, was knocked to the floor of a barn but was only stunned. In Ottawa lightning struck three persons but failed to inflict serious injury.

VIOLENT WIND STORM IN CITY BUT NO RAIN

Trees Split by Force of Wind — Heavy Rain Immediately North in Hastings District

LANDS FLOODED

Rain drops pattered in the dry dust of Belleville and district early last evening, but the threatened downfall was light and brief, though elsewhere in the section low clouds loosed a heavy torrent of water, which filled nearly dry streams and creeks to the banks and flooded low lying sections of farm land.

Wind of almost cyclonic force, which accompanied the brief storm over the Belleville area, played havoc on district barns and wrested branches from trees on residential streets. Force of the gale, On Pirmans' Park on the west bank of the Moira within the city, one maple tree was split by the wind, though elsewhere damage was confined lightly by the city department of public works.

Barn is Burned

Lightning, which darted and streaked through the dark clouds north of the city was responsible for the loss of a barn on the farm of William Blakely, near Campbellford, which burned with the loss of a quantity of hay and farm implements. Bobby Blackwood, Blakely's grandson, visited his life to save a horse and pet calf, but lost his prized collection of farm pigeons when a blaze which had been purchased but a few hours before.

The Campbellford storm loosed at least three inches of rain in the district immediately south, and pasture and grain lands were flooded by the sudden assault. Little damage to standing crops was reported.

Vast Naval Forces Of Britain Mobilized For 'Danger Period'

London, July 29 (CP)—Great Britain swung into a huge mobilization of naval forces today to bring her vast armament up to strength for the August and September "danger period."

While regulars and reserves were summoned to duty to place the fleet at the peak of fighting power along with land and air services, sources close to the government said Prime Minister Chamberlain is expected to make a statement Monday on the British-Russian talks.

It was said plans for "immediate" and "full" conversion to a war basis for the three powers would be announced then, along with reaffirmations of a desire for a three-power mutual aid pact.

Some 12,000 reservists packed their kits to report Monday. After an inspection by the King Aug. 9, reserve vessels will join regulars in the biggest peacetime war games in Britain's history.

Reinforcement of naval power marks another step in the show of force which the government hoped will impress Chancellor Hitler of Germany with Britain's "sincerity of purpose."

In quick succession Britain has passed the first peacetime compulsory training bill since Cromwell's time, begun calling up conscripts for service in the army, air force and navy in expectation of having 1,000,000 men under arms by the end of the year, speeded the building of armaments, and promised to give her Allies £60,000,000 ($280,800,000) credits to arm themselves.

UNEMPLOYMENT CONFERENCE TO BE CONVENED SOON

Canadian Mayors Will Join Other Organizations in Talks With Gov't.

ASSIST TORONTO

Ottawa, July 29 (CP)—Such national bodies as the Canadian Chambers of Commerce, the Canadian Manufacturers Association and the Canadian Construction Association will be invited to the forthcoming conference at a National Unemployment Conference to be held here within a few weeks.

Revenue Minister Ilsley, in his capacity of acting Finance Minister, told a delegation of Mayors yesterday that the Dominion government would be glad to co-operate in such a conference by providing all data available and by taking part in the discussions. The conference was announced later by Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa as President of the Federation of Canadian Mayors and Municipalities.

George S. Mooney of Montreal, executive director of the Canadian Construction Association, said that he would issue invitations immediately to the Federation membership and to all national bodies likely to be interested, said Mayor Lewis, "and I am sure the problem so deserves the attention of the general public today," said the Mayor.

Victorious Nationalists Struggle to See Who'll Rule

Gen. Franco and Serrano Suner, Falangist Leader Are Principals in Fight

FASCISM OR MONARCHY

Italy and Germany Still Have Armaments in Spanish Peninsula

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 29—(CP)—A million men died in Spain's civil war which petered out early this year and now vague reports filter through from the tight Spanish censorship that another fight is in progress—a fight among the victorious Nationalists to see who is going to rule.

The brothers-in-law are among the principals in this fight, General Francisco Franco, who won the civil war with aid from his Italian, Moorish and German allies, and Ramon Serrano Suner, leader of the Junior, leader of the powerful blackshirted Falangist party, who wants Spain to go in for Fascism.

Two other key men are General Queipo de Llano, who led Franco's Andalusian troops and became Governor of Seville, and Juan Yague because of his broadcasts during hostilities and General Yague who led the Moors.

Kingston, July 29—(CP)—Kingston Hospital authorities reported today Traffic Officer H. E. Hunter of Gananoque, Ont., is making favorable progress toward recovery following severe injuries received in an accident 11 miles east of Kingston Thursday.

He was thrown from his machine while chasing speeders and fractured both legs, suffered a severe hand injury and concussion as well as cuts and bruises.

Japan Makes Trade Treaty With Germany

New Agreement Timed as Warning to Western Democracies

DETAILS WITHHELD

Tokyo, July 28—(AP)—Japan today made formal announcement of a new trade treaty with Germany which observers believed was timed as a warning to the western democracies.

The new agreement, although only initialled in Berlin yesterday, was announced here with fanfare just two days after denunciation by the United States of its 26-year-old trade pact with Japan.

Negotiations for the pact have been under way since 1937, the foreign office announcement said. The statement stressed heavily the significance of the pact as strengthening the anti-comintern front, in which Germany, Italy, Japan and Manchukuo are bound to combat Communism.

The new agreement "will come into force upon completion of internal procedures," the statement withheld pending formal signing.

(Early British announcement said the agreement would become effective Oct. 1).

Court Pleads for Amendment of Qubec's Civil Code on Issuance of Licencees

PLEADS WITH CLERGY

Montreal, July 29—(CP)—Judge Justice Forest, in Assizes Court, in nulling the nine-year marriage of Laurent Bergeron, Coaticook, of Gaspe, Quebec, to Wilhelmina Krikow Protestant, formerly of St. Pelix De Valois, Que., has pleaded with the counsel to be headed for decision by privy council.

Justice Forest ruled the marriage invalid yesterday in superior court because the ceremony was performed by a Protestant minister, Rev. R. W. S. Mackay, of St. Andrew's Church here, with no identification or publication of banns, as would have been performed in 1930.

The ruling was a new enunciation of previous findings of Justice Forest that a marriage between a Catholic and a Protestant, performed by a Protestant minister, is invalid under Quebec law.

CHINESE COOLIES PAID 3 CENTS, SODA WATER FOR DEMONSTRATION

Tientsin, July 29 (AP) — The anti-British campaign in North China spread today with paid demonstrators appearing in Pehtaho and Tangku.

Chinese coolies who participated in a parade in Pehtaho in Pei-Hsien also said they were paid the equivalent of three Canadian cents by a bottle of Japanese made soda water thrown in.

Benito Mussolini 56 Years Old Today

Riccione, Italy, July 29—(AP) Benito Mussolini, was 56 years old today.

At his birthplace, the hillside hamlet of Varano Di Costa in the Romagna countryside near here, 10,000 farmers gathered to pay him homage.

If Duce himself, who in recent years has come to ignore his birthdays, this year received Fascist leaders at his summer castle, Rocca Delle Caminate, before going to Varano.

Chancellor Hitler sent a birthday greeting from Berlin in which he said the Rome-Berlin Axis would "guarantee the maintenance of European peace."

Face Each Other Over Barricades

Shanghai, July 29 (AP) — British and Japanese troops faced each other across newly erected Japanese barbed wire barricades tonight as a result of an incident which caused Japanese-British friction here to flare anew.

The Japanese naval forces ran up the barrier along 1½ miles of the British defence sector after an encounter in which Japanese seized and held four British soldiers for 2½ hours.

Chinese guerrillas were reported to have blown the locomotive of a passenger-freight train off the line between Pingshan and machine-gun attack on the Shanghai-Nanking Railway.

Minister of Health Of New Brunswick Killed in Crash

Hon. P. H. Laporte Dies in Hospital After His Car Crashes Into Hole Washed Out by Rain

ELECTED IN 1935

Unidentified Woman, Believed From Western Canada Fatally Injured In Same Car, the Minister Giving Woman "a Life"

St. Basil, N.B., July 29 (CP)—Hon. P. H. Laporte, New Brunswick Minister of Health and Labor, died in hospital here early today after a highway accident.

An unidentified woman also was fatally injured when Dr. Laporte's car crashed into a washout and plunged into a highway watout early this morning.

The woman was a middle-aged, poorly dressed hitch-hiker whom Dr. Laporte had picked up in the rain on his return from a government meeting at Fredericton. Provincial coroner Dr. Anderson at Edmundston.

Before losing consciousness he told his brother, Dr. C. P. Laporte, that he had not learned the woman's name but he believed she came from somewhere in Western Canada.

Due to the road washout after torrential rain last night the only way of getting the injured persons to hospital quickly was by train. One was intercepted for this purpose.

Occupants of the second car wrecked in the deep hole were two teachers, Allan McIlreath, Saint John, and Mrs. Hendel, Sackville, N. B. They suffered shock.

Dr. Laporte was first elected to the New Brunswick legislature in 1935, when the last provincial election took place. In July, 1938, he succeeded the late Hon. W. F. Roberts as Minister of Health and Labor.

Dr. Laporte was born Sept. 1, 1873 at Verocoeur, Que., a son of Jean Baptiste Laporte and Marie le Moine Duplessis. He was educated at L'Assomption College, Laval University, Ecole Des Medicines of Paris.

In 1901 he married Miss Rose Anna Vitre of Montreal. There were three children, George, Mrs. L. A. Landry and Mrs. Bruno Colpron, all of Edmundston.

Dr. Laporte was formerly mayor of Edmundston.

The washout caused a hole 15 or more feet deep and about 30 feet wide, at a point two miles below the Dickie Intervale, and four miles below Edmundston.

Dr. Laporte was proceeding to his home at Edmundston enabled into the hole soon after McIlreath and Hendel had driven over it. Dr. Laporte car smashed against a concrete abutment at the side and the unidentified woman suffered multiple injuries.

It was believed the accident occurred about 1 a.m. The woman died en route to hospital. Dr. Laporte, conscious on arrival there, died about three hours later.

The funeral of Dr. Laporte will be held on Tuesday, Edmundston.

Terrorist Seen In London

London, July 29—(CP)—Newspapers today published photographs of Peter Kavanagh, 21, said to be a member of the Irish Republican Army, as rumors mounted that he had been seen in London.

Early in June, Russell was taken into custody in Detroit by United States authorities and held while the Irish and Queen were in the country.

Game Birds of Western Canada Show Decided Increase This Year

Winnipeg, July 29 (CP) — Game birds of Western Canada, protected in recent years by conservation methods designed by sportsmen themselves, are on the increase, promising a good season for hunters, it was said today.

Prairie chickens, ruffed grouse, Hungarian partridge and the imported Hungarian partridge all have been protected in the past.

Prairie chickens, which in earlier years could be found on the prairies by the thousands, were threatened with extinction a few years ago. The shooting season was curtailed in most provinces.

Now prairie chickens congregate in "dance grounds"—usually a bare knoll—for an elaborate courtship ritual, as the males strut around with feathers primed ostentatiously in the air. They prepare to select a mate. The same "dance grounds" are used generation after generation.

Hunting has been limited in Manitoba. In recent years and in 1938 only four days were allowed, in mid-September. In 1939 the season is three days, a second week's shooting to be allowed this week-end.

In Saskatchewan a longer season is permitted—Sept. 15 to Oct. 31 this year with a bag limit of ten birds daily and fifty for the season.

Prairie chickens are increasing rapidly in Alberta. In the northern districts an open season may be permitted for one month this year. Central and more settled districts will probably have two weeks but in the southern section of the province conservation methods will be maintained and no shooting will be allowed.

E. HUNGERFORD FIRE BURNING FOR WEEK

Burning for nearly a week, a slow fire on the farm of Phillip Johnson, East Hungerford, which has destroyed five acres of brush and pasture land so far, has almost defied efforts of the owner of the farm and neighbors to extinguish it. The blaze which has been eating its way steadily across the farm has penetrated deeply into the dry, peaty soil and has become a subterranean menace, feeding on stumps and roots.

VISITING FISHERMEN PLAN NORTHERN TRIPS

Tourists with fishing rods have about reached their peak in numbers in the district for the present season and January's record resident fishing license is taking place at the rate of twenty-five or thirty a week, it is reported by local issuer, George Pinch.

This year's Bay of Quinte has been comparatively deserted by the visiting anglers, but many of them are then preferring the lakes of North Hastings and Lake of Bays district. The greater number of visitors have apparently planned their summer jaunt to the local district with lengthy cars and are travelling on well planned routes to the north. Many of them are more conversant with local conditions than the average resident. Unofficial but careful study of the section, it was reported.

TAKEN ILL AT CAMP OPERATION IS PERFORMED

Taken ill while at girls' camp at Eagle Lake, Miss Jean Bancroft, 13, Tyrone McCaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCaw, this city, was rushed to the Red Cross Hospital at Bancroft where an emergency operation for appendicitis was performed by Dr. Lumb of Bancroft.

Diet Improvements Postpone Onset Of Old Age

Lengthening of Life Span Shown By Experiments On Rats

Berkeley, Calif., July 29 (AP) — Relatively simple diet improvements can postpone the onset of old age and lengthen the life span, Dr. H. C. Sherman and Dr. H. L. Campbell of Columbia University's chemistry department told the Pacific Science Congress today.

They reported successful successes in experiments on white rats. They made no reference to the possible effect on human life, but said the diet is "probably as good nutritionally as many or most American dietaries."

Two methods were used. In one they added extra proteins, minerals or vitamins, or all three, to the regularly prepared diet. In the other they added no outside substance but simply varied the proportion of the various staple food articles in the diet.

The changes were so arranged as to keep bodily growth and development of the animals approximately normal—that is, these two phases of life progress here kept in step. This prevented the accumulation of excess fat and kept the rate of growth down sufficiently to prevent any lessening of vitality.

Animals thus treated, they said, attained maturity somewhat earlier than normal, had a longer period of adult vitality and reached senility later.

GOOD OFFERING OF FARM PRODUCE ON MART TODAY

Prices Steady in All Varieties; Raspberries Popular but Quantity Falls Off

EGGS 25 CENTS

Although there was a considerable falling-off from the number of vendors of last Saturday on the city market today, a fairly heavy offering of farm, garden and dairy produce was offered to a smaller-than-usual number of enthusiastic buyers.

Price tones were generally firm with little or no fluctuation from the quotations of a week ago.

Raspberries in fair quantity than expected, featured the fruit offering with "blues" selling at three boxes for 25 cents and crate-lots at 7 cents per box. Reds were offered at ten cents the box although this price decreased slightly during the later hours.

Cherries were fairly plentiful with the popular "Montmorency" variety selling at from 20 cents for the quart basket, and the "Ox-heart" variety offered at from 75 cents for the same quantity.

Apples Make Debut.

Red Astrachan apples made their seasonal debut today with a bright colored variety offered at two berry boxes for 25 cents. "Yellow Harvests" were available in England with a six-quart basket. Red and white currants were offered in both the box and bucks at 20 cents. Gooseberries were offered at four boxes for 25 cents.

New sweet corn took the popular fancy today with the offering of the first quart basket, and the "Ox-heart" variety offered at from 75 cents for the same quantity.

Eggs Steady.

Egg quotations were steady with "A" selects selling at 24 and 25 cents the dozen. Mediums were offered at 22 cents, some extra large selling at 22 cents. Home cooking booths were well patronized.

Whitefish and fresh lake trout were also offered for sale today with the fish offering with the former selling at 17 and 18 cents the pound and the latter at 20. One moved slowly at 10 cents the pound.

CONFER IN U. K. OVER ARMS DATA

Ten More Canadians Leave Quebec for Old Country

Ottawa, July 29 (CP)—Reinforcing the eight Canadian industrialists representing the Canadian Manufacturers' Association who are at present in England with a view to laying before the British government the facilities of Canadian manufacturing plants for production of armaments and equipment, ten more prominent Canadians sail from Quebec today.

They will be accompanied by four Canadian government officials, among whom are Major General A. G. L. McNaughton, former Chief of the General Staff, and Colonel Noel Carr, Director of Mechanization and Artillery of the National Defence Department.

The party is proceeding to England with the approval of both the British and the Canadian governments. A statement issued last night by Prime Minister Mackenzie King said this representative group would "confer with the appropriate United Kingdom authorities with a view to securing data concerning defence requirements there and of furnishing information as to available sources of supply in Canada."

Those who are sailing are E. Holt

Martin-Townsend-McMullen Families' Reunion at Oak Lake

On Thursday, July 27, the ninth annual reunion of the Martin-Townsend-McMullen families was held at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake.

At noon a delicious picnic dinner was thoroughly enjoyed. About 80 members and visitors signed the registration book.

The president, Mr. Herbert Townsend, welcomed those present and expressed his appreciation to the committees for their work in connection with picnic arrangements. The treasurers report and minutes of last year's meeting were read. There had been eight marriages, six births and three deaths since the reunion a year ago. A minute's silence was observed in memory of those who passed away, William Cherald Shiers, Miss Mary Martin and Mr. Andy Attwood.

One step more and the race is done.

One word more, and the lesson's done.

Lots toll more, and a long rest follows

At set of sun.

Officers were then elected for next year: President, Mr. Alex Martin; vice-president, Mr. Charlie Martin; secretary-treasurer, Miss Bessie McMullen; sport committee, Mrs. Harry Preston, Mrs. Fred Martin, Mrs. J. Mumby and Mrs. Geo. O'Neil.

It was decided to meet next year at Crescent Beach the last Thursday in July.

The sports were capably managed by Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Townsend and Mr. Gordon Garrison and the results of the various races follow:

Children 6 and under—Rina O'Neill.

Girls, 6-12—Ruth McMullen.

Boys, 6-12—Gordon Preston.

Girls over 12—Beatrice O'Neil.

Men's race—Stuart Brady.

Ladies' sawing race — Mrs. John Townsend.

Men's potato-peeling race—Coleman Townsend and Samuel Kelly.

Grandfather's clothes-pin race—Herbert Townsend.

Largest car-load—Alex Martin.

Oldest person on ground — Mrs. Jake Wenger.

Grandmothers throwing ball — Mrs. Herbert Townsend and Mrs. James McMullen.

Youngest ball-boy—Garry Kelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kelly.

Shortly after this supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Peasant family reunion came to an end.

BLAMES PRESS FOR AGITATION

Farmer of Loon Lake District on Way Back to Germany

BLAMES PRESS ... wpaio... Saskatoon, July 29 (CP) — Fritz Wischerop, farmer of the Loon Lake district of Saskatchewan, arrived here yesterday with his family en route back to Germany.

"The press of Canada is to blame because of the anti-German agitation," the Canadian newspapers, he said.

The press of Canada publishes stories about Germany which are untrue, saying that people in Germany are starving. That is why I received letters from our relatives in Germany saying that it is false."

Loyal Canadians.

Germans in Canada are not Nazis" he maintained.

"We are loyal Canadian citizens. We were so easy to get settled in this district we found it a wilderness and we made it into farms.

"Practically all people of German descent in Canada are loyal citizens. We have been here for decades and are loyal Canadian citizens are suffering from this agitation. It is only natural that the people of the Loon Lake district should have been interested in developments in their homeland."

Wischerop and his family are the second group of Germans who have left the Loon Lake district to return to Germany within the past two weeks. Last Saturday Jacob Ehl sailed to their homeland from New York after giving up their farm homes in Saskatchewan.

SEEK BICYCLIST AS INCENDIARIST

Police of Victoria Say 14 Grass Fires and Shed Blaze Due to Him

Victoria, July 29 (CP)—An intensive search was launched by city police today for a bicycle-riding incendiarist blamed for 13 grass fires and a storage-shed blaze.

Every available policeman is on duty with instructions to check at once of incendiary outbreaks that bring firemen on the run for hours. A reward of $50 has been posted.

Yesterday the incendiarist had one narrow escape. police said. A fireman and a civilian chased a cyclist for an hour before losing sight of their quarry. The bicycle rider—answering the description of the wanted man—apparently started a fire to watch the blaze. When he saw a fireman watching him, he sped away.

Yesterday's outbreaks were the latest in a four-month series of incendiary fires which have done $36,000 damage. Police claim a pyromaniac has been responsible for that time, and turned in 54 false alarms.

A man who used an automobile to escape is blamed for some of the incendiary blazes, however.

Obituary

MRS. SAMUEL ORR (Stockdale)

Frankford (Special)—The funeral of Mrs. Emma Blair, widow of the late Samuel Orr, was held on Thursday afternoon. Services in the home and in Stockdale United Church were conducted by Rev. J. F. Lane, interment was made in the family plot in Stockdale cemetery. Many friends and relatives attended the funeral. Mrs. Orr passed on the passing of this well known and highly respected citizen. The pallbearers were Fred Palmer, Fred Hall, Percy Simmons, Walter Tyndoy and Ina Wall.

AMY ELIZABETH FOLLWELL

From the flower-banked rooms of her late residence at 51 Criss Street, where a large crowd of sorrowing friends gathered to pay their reverent tribute, the body of the late Mrs. Amy Elizabeth Follwell, one of this city's most highly esteemed residents, was conveyed yesterday afternoon to the last resting place in Belleville Cemetery.

The simple yet impressive funeral rites of the Mizpah Chapter, I.O.D.E. Order of Eastern Star and Lydia Lodge, I.O.O.F., of which the late Mrs. Follwell was a valued member were offered at the house and the service at the graveside. Floral tributes of both organizations taking part in the funeral procession were interparted friend and member.

The simple service in the morning immediate relatives and friends, was in charge of Rev. Canon H. Symonds, rector of Christ Church, who also officiated at the church service in the afternoon for friends of the late Mrs. Follwell.

The pallbearers composed of members of the Minerva Chapter and Lydia Lodge were drawn from the church, through which the funeral cortege passed at the opening and closing of the service. Members of the Kiwanis Club also paid a tribute to the late wife and memory of the mother of Frank Follwell one of their most popular members.

A profusion of beautiful floral tributes bore silent witness to the high regard and esteem in which the late Mrs. Follwell was held. Among the floral tributes were those of the Eastern Star, who officiated at the graveside service, Lydia Lodge, I.O.O.F., Minerva Chapter, O.E.S., Kiwanis Club, Christ Church, Mr. and Mrs. J. Morgan, Director Mrs. E. Turner, and Deputy Mistress Dr. Mary Thurston, Mr. F. E. Follwell offered a beautiful vocal solo at the graveside.

The pallbearers were Billie Follwell, grandson; Raymond Lennox, Leslie Lennox, Harry Lennox, Charlie Jeffs, nephews, and Bill Baldwin.

APPEALS AGAINST ORDER

Niagara Falls, Ont, July 29—(CP) —Appeal of J. J. Fleming of Niagara Falls, against an order for destruction of his Chinese Chow dog for biting a girl three months ago will be heard in County Court session at Welland starting Oct. 3, it was announced today.

The dog was ordered destroyed but the order was withdrawn when Fleming signified his intention to appeal the case.

Police Blotter

Belleville police today were investigating what they believed to be an abandoned automobile on George St. Residents of that district informed city police concerning that a motor car, bearing an American licence plate, had been parked on George St. for two nights and all day yesterday. Police are investigating the matter looking into the ownership of a motor car bearing New York licence plates No. 1476.

Last night's threatening storm drove hundreds to cover as it swept down seeking shelter and a night's lodging at the police station. Due to the largest number of transients to apply for sleeping quarters since the current heat wave struck this district.

No arrests were reported by city or Provincial Police during the past 24 hours.

VIOLENT

Scuttle For Safety

Small boats on the Bay of Quinte is reported for safety as ominous clouds darkened the district, and immediately following one of the heaviest squalls to occur, a boat was threshed the bay into foaming white caps and curling rollers. One small auxiliary yacht appeared to be in difficulties just west of the bay bridge, but managed to negotiate the dangerous stretch of water to the safety of the west side. Occupants of the boats hailed heavily as waves washed over the light craft.

Rain was light in the Belleville area, but north and north west of the city, a fair downfall was reported.

Lightning ripped through the roof of the kitchen of a house owned by Frederick Irons, Roslin farmer, setting fire to a sideboard and other articles of furniture. The blaze was caught under the residence of the house, with minor damage reported.

The gale-like wind, that swept the district brought down trees and branches crashing to the ground in several parts of the district, while hydro service was disrupted for a period of two hours as the wind tore down wires.

Storm In Afternoon

Marmora, July 29 (Special)—The second sudden storm to pass over the Marmora district in sig-nag fashion on Friday afternoon caused a commotion of an unusual kind to campers on Crowe Lake. With the approach, all boats safely made the shore save one. This was a sail boat with occupants were Mr. Blackford Toner and daughter Pamela, of Toronto, who with Mr. Toner have been camping at Bonters Park, Crowe Lake. The Toner boat belonged to Holders' Island and Picnic Island letting in water which threatened to sink it. Robert Mayzer, guide, who was on Parkers' Island at the time, saw the predicament with the boat was in and using his motor boat transferred the occupants to it. He said the Toner boat was lowered and it was left to drift following in the wake of the motor boat. Apparently landed with a few exceptions had not noticed Mr. Mayzer's act and while the comfort of the Toners were being looked after on Parker's Island, someone noticed the drifting boat and a quick time boats were out on the lake again, trying to sight the Toners in the water. After a half hour's search they noticed a white flag being waved on Farmer's Island as an indication that those whom they were looking for were safe on land. Eventually Mr. Toner and his daughter arrived back at their camping ground sone the worse for their adventure.

Rollins Family Assembles for Annual Picnic

On July 19, at Coe Hill, the Rollins' clan held one of their best reunions since the first one in 1926.

It had long been the wish of the former president, C. S. Rollins, of Coe Hill, that the picnic be held in his home town.

Neither time nor expense was spared by the host and hostess and everything for the convenience of their many friends was done.

The one hundred and eighty-five guests who registered received cards of special mention—a gilt folder bearing the likeness of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, also the name of the place and the year of the gathering.

As soon after 12 o'clock as possible all sat down to the well-laden dinner tables set in the Agricultural Building.

After dinner a business meeting was called. Several addresses were made and reports given. The election of officers resulted as follows:

Honorary President—Mr. Albert Rollins, Hartney, Man.; C. S. Rollins, Coe Hill.

President—George Harris.

Secretary—Mrs. Stanley Rollins.

Vice-President—Harper Rollins.

Treasurer—S. B. Rollins.

Executive—Dave Rollins, Joe Rollins, H. Rollins, St. S. Rollins, W. R. Rollins, Elmer Post.

After a discussion it was decided to hold the 1940 picnic in Tweed on July 19th.

Some hundreds of coppers were tossed up resulting in a wild scramble among the younger folk.

Boys' race, under 8—Kenneth Runnals, Glen Rollins, Robert Post.

Girls' race, under 8—Donna Rollins, Fay Rollins (Latta), Joan Rollins.

Boys, 8 to 12 — Douglas Runnals, Fred Rollins, Harold Johnston.

Girls, 8 to 12—Mary McIlmoil, Betty Weese, Margaret Harris.

Boys, 13 to 16—Malcolm McMullen, Carl Rollins, Dave Fargy.

Girls, 12 to 16— Fay Rollins, Keitha Weese, Dorothy Rollins.

Women's Race—Mrs. Don Campbell, Mrs. Dennis Chapman, Mrs. Fred Lucas.

Men's Race—Harry Rollins, Percy Rollins, Bobt. Dowdy.

Prize given to eldest person was won by Mrs. H. Rollins, Sr., aged 87.

Prize given to youngest person was won by Miss Betty Rose, five months.

Ladies' beauty prize was won by Mrs. S. B. Rollins and men's prize by Mr. S. Rollins, Madoc.

The match between the 2nd. Line and the 4th. Line teams played at Melrose on Friday evening, resulted with 4th. Line as winners.

Rain is greatly needed throughout the district.

'Empire Safeguarded Only by Sword'—Gort

Cranwell, England, July 29 (CP)—In the belief the empire "can be safeguarded only by the sword", Viscount Gort, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, told cadets at the Royal Air Force College here today.

"Never should we forget," he declared, "that the empire was won by the sword, that it has been preserved through generations by the sword and that in the last resort in the future it can be safeguarded only by the sword—in other words by the wholehearted and loyal cooperation of all three fighting services.

Burr's

Burr's — Mr. and Mrs. Jotham Moon left on Wednesday to camp on Mr. L. Ross' shore, West Lake.

Mrs. J. B. Marvin, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Allan Graham, family of Oshawa, motored to Mr. and Mrs. C. Allen's cottage, Victoria, on Sunday.

Ice Cream Social

On Wednesday evening Burr's Ladies' Aid held their ice cream and pie social in the church. It was well attended. Following was the programme:

Chairman's remarks; the McFaul brothers, guitar and violin; Misses Barbara and Shirley Wilson, song; Miss Helen Austin, piano solo; Miss Vera Plant, song; Mrs. R. Hall and Mrs. E. Wilson, duet; Miss Vera Plant, song; McFaul brothers, violin and banjo, and Misses Barbara and Shirley Wilson, song.

The president on behalf of the Ladies' Aid thanked all those who helped on the program. The proceeds were over $25.

Shannonville

Shannonville—Tuesday morning at nine o'clock service was held at Trinity church by Mr. F. Payne to commemorate St. James' day. Mr. Payne's topic was "Apostles and Martyrs."

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Marks and Mr. and Mrs. F. Payne attended the annual picnic of St. Jude's Church, Kingsford. A delicious dinner was served by the ladies. Sports were held. A good time was enjoyed.

Miss Mary Isobel Vivian is spending her vacation in Toronto, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Vivian.

Mrs. Jack Kent, Jean and Jimmy left Wednesday for Noranda, Quebec, to visit Mr. Jack Kent and Douglas Kent who are employed there.

Mr. and Mrs. William Doxtator spent Wednesday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pike, Marysville.

Mrs. Bill Coles and Mrs. George Leverton attended St. Jude's church annual picnic at Kingsford.

Mrs. Harriett Toppings attended the tea meeting and social tea meeting day evening at the brick hall.

A successful ice cream and pie social was held in the brick hall under the auspices of the Church Board of the Trinity Church. A large crowd was in attendance. Local talent provided a good program. The proceeds were $37.00.

West Huntingdon

WEST HUNTINGDON — A large field day was held at the home of and gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hannah on Thursday afternoon in honor of the recent marriage of their daughter Elsie. Mr. Thomas Hilliard was chairman for the evening's program which consisted of the following numbers: Duet by the Misses Irene and Margaret Hilliott. Speeches were given by a number present and Mr. Charles Woods and neighbors of the community presented the newlyweds with a gift of money and Miss Hilda Elliott read the following address:

Dear Elsie and Steve: We, your neighbors and friends have taken this opportunity of extending to you and invading your home this evening to offer our congratulations on the event of your marriage and also to bring you a friendly greeting of matrimony. We are glad to welcome your husband into our midst although a stranger to most of us. We regret to know you are not going to live with us, but we realize as we but may the coming years be filled with peace, happiness and love for you both. Both as a neighbor and friend, Elsie, you have ever displayed that willing and friendly spirit of the true friend. Your cheerful smile and helpful manner never failed to brighten the pathway of those with whom your pleasing personality intermingled. We ask God's blessing to rest on you both and can assure you of this as you will often do since you have made new friends and neighbors in your new home and community. We felt we could not let this event pass without showing our appreciation of you and ask you to accept this purse as a slight token of our regard.

Wishing you a long and prosperous wedded life and also health, happiness, joy and success as you both go through life hand in hand. Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors—Floyd Deline, Claude Dafoe.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong made suitable replies and lunch was eaten in our midst.

Word has been received that the settlement committee of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church has appointed Rev. Wm. Sterling to West Huntingdon Circuit instead of Rev. Harold Bell who since conference has been called to Zion Church, Kingston. Mr. Sterling has served three churches in the Bay of Quinte Conference, Colborne, Orono, and for the past five years, Pendon Park. Mr. Sterling's earlier ministry was spent in Western Ontario and he comes to West Huntingdon highly recommended as pastor and preacher. He has a great popularity for friendship and old and young will find him a deeply interested friend of their welfare. Mrs. Kenneth Stewart will, however, be in charge of services until Mr. Sterling commences his ministry on Sunday, September 17.

The Young People's Union of the United Church held a very helpful meeting on Tuesday evening. The president, Mr. Keith Bray, was chairman for the evening's program. Mr. Elmer Post conducted the singing of a number of Gospel songs. Miss Mae Thompson read a portion of Scripture and Rev. W. Sterling led the gathering in prayer. Mr. W. Pypher of Trenton, N.J., gave an excellent solo and later in the programme he and his daughter gave a duet. They were accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Pypher. Mrs. and Mrs. Pypher and daughter are friends of Rev. W. Sterling, Master of Stirling and their contribution to the program was much appreciated. Mr. Frank Palmer of Ivanhoe gave as a solo "The Stranger or Calvalier." Mr. Kenneth Stewart gave the special address basing his remarks on a verse of Scripture. Miss Irene Elliott presided over the piano for the evening. There was a good attendance present.

On Monday evening a fine number of friends met at the home of Miss Elliott's home and gave their daughter Hilda (Mrs. Steve) a miscellaneous shower. Mr. Sandy McCurdy was chairman for the evening's entertainment. Miss Hilda Moorcroft read the following address:

Dear Hilda: Having learned of your approaching marriage we, your friends and neighbors gather for a social hour in your honour. We are glad to see you embarked on the sea of matrimony and our sincere wish is that health and happiness may always attend you. Although you have not been among us in the last few years we shall ever remember your cheerful disposition and your readiness to help along every good cause in our community while you were among us. We shall always follow your endeavors with interest and trust that our friendships may ever remain constant. We extend to you the best wishes for a long and happy wedded life and ask you to accept these gifts as a token of our esteem. Signed on behalf of your many friends — Irene Elliott, Helen Wright, Georgie Pitman, Jean Thompson, Marjorie McIlmoyl.

"I saved a dollar today"

It's a great satisfaction to look over the day's accounts and find you've been able to save money by careful buying.

Knowing WHERE to buy is part of the trick. The wise "business manager" of the home plans her shopping as skilfully as a business man plans to spend a thousand dollars.

Advertisements help greatly, of course. On daily necessities like meats, fruits, vegetables, they show you how to save 2c here, 3c there, adding up to much. But advertisements are just as helpful on larger purchases—furniture, draperies, motor cars, clothing. Followed carefully, advertising saves you money all down the line . . . helps you run the household more economically . . . gives the budget a chance to breathe.

THE ECONOMIC SLAP

The United States abrogation of the 1911 trade treaty with Japan has been the highlight of world news for the latter half of this week. It took the Japanese and the Americans by surprise and the rest of the world, including Britain.

It is looked upon as one of the most progressive strokes given by democracy in its dealings with the totalitarian Powers who have been in the forefront of the world's view for some years.

What the full outcome will be cannot be guessed. Those on the inside may have a fairly close idea of the reaction to this step. It is believed at least to have strengthened the democracies and weakened the dictatorships.

Japan has been acting in a very mean manner lately. She has thrown off what sheen or veneer of western culture she had put on for a time against the Chinese and her attempt to put the Western Powers outside of what she wants to be a Japanized Asia. Her bitterness against the British has been marked on several occasions and the murder of her commanders where Americans have been concerned have been as provoking as officers of an ill-natured Power can make them. Perhaps she will now learn that he who laughs last and slaps last, laughs and slaps best, for the United States has delivered the Nipponese a slap which will make up for some of the indignities shown to citizens of the Western world.

SHAW GREATEST AT 83

One of the most amazing literary figures of the modern world is Bernard Shaw, whose dramas are the most popular on the British stage, one of whose plays was turned into a movie making one of the great successes of the screen, and whose work at 83 is still potent. Many yet have not yielded to follow Shaw in his socialist outlook on organized society but in his dramas he has incorporated his thought and yet the plays are so great, many of them at least, that when the topical questions are outworn, the Shavian drama will no doubt still appeal.

Shaw recalls one great ancient, Aristophanes, who made old Athens laugh at itself. Shaw became probably as great a gift in many ways though some persons may see him less a genius in poetry than his Greek rival, but beyond all George Bernard Shaw is worthy of the name of lover of intelligence did descend to some rather gutterlike expressions in his comedies and satirical plays, but Shaw has always remained clean.

The great joke of the people will probably be to follow Shaw in his religious outlook on life and in his religious opinions, but they recognize his greatness notwithstanding these opinions.

Bernard Shaw had a musical mother and so her he owes much. He is Irish, another advantage, which nobody will deny. He has a wit as keen as a rapier and yet is rarely if ever bitter. Those who have heard him speak in person or over the radio have been surprised at the gentle voice of the man. He is a delightfully comic figure with his style of handdress, his soft tongue, his twinkling laughter eyes, the writer of the finest dramatic criticism and musical and art reviews in the past three quarters of a century.

Shaw does speak of himself as the greatest dramatist since Shakespeare, and if so is among the supremely great playwrights of all time.

Shaw is prosperous, and makes money which points into the box offices of the theatres where his plays are presented. He is world-known, he is a great humorist whose quips and cranks will outweigh a thousand solemn affirmations of dictators.

Shaw has an empire which only a few can rival in all history—there come no Hitlers, no Mussolinis, no Napoleons, not even Julius Caesars and Alexanders. He is the king of laughter, he prods men's minds to think and he can always claim a clean bill of health. Some call him a buffoon and say it is hard to know when he means what he says, but it is difficult how one can say his spirit is not revealed in what he has written for the stage.

He has a new play ready for production on August 7th., "In Good King Charles' Golden Day." And he is eighty-three! Long may he live in the man who has written fifty plays, but he keeps young in spirit.

This writer who is immortal while he lives because of his long glorious career has offered the world much which it will remember, whether he will live for his wit and comedy, his gift of creating character, or for dramatic power. He has helped the world to a new technique in drama, largely by his wit.

The world will hope that this laughing spirit will continue to dwell on earth for many years to make his contribution to men's views on life, even if they do not agree with some of his arguments.

PAGAN TRANCE

A common meadow, mild with bees,
Dimmed by the quiver of high noon:
I've waded there up to my knees
For years, by sun and moon.
I've mowed and read in it, and squeezed
Ten years of apples underfoot
Under the arch of sole, well pleased
To feel them through my boot
I'm not a man to see a wraith.
Or let a thought subdue the mind;
I know that meadow with a faith
As simple as the blind.
I might have perished there; till death
Mowed on and read in that quiet place,
And never felt the Summer's breath
Or seen His very face.
But now there'll never be a day
When I can look at some gray stone,
And say: "Remember and not say:
"He came once and was gone."
—John Theobald, inthe New York Times.

"THE PERFECT BUTLER" IS DEAD. Alfred Winny, aged 99, died recently at Queensmead, Windsor, England, full of years and honor. He was known as "The Perfect Butler," having served for seventy-two years in one family. A few years ago he won a competition for the "perfect servant." Alfred Winny was born in a Norfolk village near Sandringham Castle, and entered the service of the Duchess of Marlborough, as footman, and on the marriage of her son, Lord Edward Churchill, went as butler to Lord and Lady Churchill. He remained in their service till his death, and was on duty until he became ill. Lady Edward gave him the best bedroom in the house and engaged trained nurses to look after him day and night. Until a few hours before his death he was giving instructions to the staff how the table should be laid for dinner and what flowers would be required. Lady Edward Spencer-Churchill said that Winny was a devoted friend of the family. "I was with him when he died," she added. "I have lost a great friend. I thought so much of him that I had a well-known painter down from London and had his portrait done in oils. It now hangs in the library."

HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL IN THE HUMAN BREAST, we are told, and as a living proof of it one has only to watch those hitch-hikers who line the Ontario highways daily, patiently extending the thumb signal as an expressed desire for free transportation. There is a technique in the game which is becoming noticeable. Hitch-hikers are better dressed and generally sport one piece of luggage, rather respectable looking at that. Hope springs eternal in the human breast, without doubt, for the hitch-hiker must see the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow, of better fortune of some kind just ahead, just round the next curve, and have the nerve to keep going in the hope of overtaking that elusive will-o'-the wisp which is going to spell fame and fortune for them now and forever.

SAFETY FIRST

They were unloading cargo, part of which turned out to be cases of whisky. The bo'sun in charge of the unloading, seeing this, shouted down the hold: "Anyone down there got a corkscrew?"

A voice answered: "Yes, bo'sun—I've got one."

"Well, come up out of it, then," yelled the bo'sun.

CLERICAL ERROR

A woman was sitting in a cafe when a clergyman and his wife entered and sat down at the next table.

After awhile the clergyman went out and bought a paper. He came back so deeply engrossed in it that he didn't notice he had taken his seat at the wrong table, where the lone woman sat.

Still not realizing his error and still enthralled in the paper, he said, "Well, my dear, what are we going to have?"

The woman was so astonished that she could not reply, and the clergyman, receiving no answer, peeped above his paper. Seeing his error, he said, "Oh, I'm sorry ... . Wrong wife!"

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

JULY 29th, 1919

Dr. E. O. Platt, mayor of Belleville, has disposed of his medical practice, also his residence and household effects, and will leave the city shortly to enter upon a special course in medicine in England and on the continent. Dr. Platt's term as mayor of the city has yet some time to run. It is likely, however that for the remaining period he will be granted leave of absence.

Mr. P. F. Brockel, secretary of the Belleville Y.M.C.A., is visiting the Y.M.C.A. at Kawartha Lake.

FIRST NEWSPAPERS

The Glens Falls Post Company in preparing to readers of Glens Falls Times and The Post-Star a Centennial Edition of 72 pages, in observance of the 100th anniversary of the incorporation of Glens Falls as a village, established another anniversary which is of great importance to every American, the 150th anniversary of the publication of the first newspaper in America. It was on April 24, 1690, that John Campbell, a Scotchman, began issuing the first newspaper in the Infant colonies. The Boston News-Letter. Not until 15 years later, in December 1718, was an American newspaper published outside of New England, that being The American Weekly Mercury of Philadelphia. The first New York newspaper was the New York Gazette, founded in 1755, fifty-one years after the birth of The Boston publication.

By 1760 eleven weekly newspapers were being published in the American colonies. They were of four small pages each. Nevertheless, The Boston News-Letter and the other great privileges of the Bill of Rights. Their news was often old when it was printed, and often it was incorrect, but the wonder is that, with the United States of transportation and communication of that day, they were able to publish a newspaper at all. They did correctly interpret the sentiment of the times and they helped to unite the people in a common cause, welding a heterogeneous collection of refugees and pioneer into the beginning of that great race which has come to be called American.—Editor, Gazette.

SPEED THE SLOTH

Physiologists S. W. Britton and R. P. Kline used to stir in their laboratory at the University of Virginia wondering why the sloth is so slothful. As good Darwinians they realized that the basic reason for the sloth's sluggishness is the fact that he is beautifully adapted to his environment. He hides from his enemies instead of fleeing; being vegetarians, he does not have to chase his food. But other animals have been known to alter their innate behaviour because of outside influences. Why not the sloth?

Physiologists Britton and Kline were known to Panama, collecting a few sloths (which are fairly tame and amenable) and got to work. First, they clocked the, animals' normal progress along the underside of a horizontal pole. Speed of a two-toed sloth: a third of a mile an hour. Speed of a three-toed sloth: two-thirths of a mile an hour.

Sloths are not only under-muscled but poorly nourished. They have an uncommonly low temperature. So Scientists Britton and Kline gave their sloths doses of the pituitary gland sunshine long enough to raise their temperatures by five or six degrees, and the change was miraculous; they moved 50 per cent. faster. Subsequent doses were also obtained by injections of adrenalin and thyroxin, an intestinal stimulant, and by scaring them. Subjected to such speeding techniques as this, the Virginia physiologists were pleased to report in Science last week that one thoroughly stimulated sloth hustled along the pole in the relatively dizzy pace of one mile an hour.—Time Magazine.

Seeing The Inside of the Stomach

When the physician can look directly into a patient's stomach and see the appearance of the lining surface and what is happening during digestion, he is certainly going to be better prepared to treat any abnormal condition he discovers. The can now be done by means of a flexible light called the gastroscope.

In our student days, there were the test meals—toast and tea—which were allowed to be digested for a certain length of time and then withdrawn with a stomach pump. The contents were examined for the degree of digestion and for the presence of hydrochloric acid. Then came the X-ray which enables the physician to see depressions and irregularities, showing ulcer and cancer to be present. And the X-ray will continue to be used

ONTARIO BLASTED

A thunderstorm raged over Toronto early today, easing the heat but yesterday caused three collapses as temperatures soared to a high of 96 degrees.

Mrs. Mary Nedelliti, 32, Toronto, and Robert McAvoy, 67, a transient, were overcome on the street and were taken to hospital. Jacqueline Hamilton, 18, another heat victim, fell from a chair on the verandah of her home and also was treated at hospital.

Storm damage in the Toronto suburban area was relatively light. At Glasgow, lightning fired the barn of Walter Davis and destroyed it along with the complete crop of hay, four head of cattle and fifteen pigs. A radial car was hit by lightning and put out of commission at Ichmond Hill but no one was hurt.

Damage At Millbrook.

Heavier damage was at Millbrook, where torrential rain late yesterday caused a small creek to overflow, covering the main street with two feet of water and flooding cellars. The accompanying wind levelled crops and felled trees and hydro poles.

Residents said the rain came from a cloud so small "you could see the blue sky all around it." A road tree toppled and crushed the car of Albert Mumford, rural mail carrier. Fred Winlaw, market gardener, lost his entire crop. The fields were washed, he said, "as if some ore turned a fire hose on them".

Dozens of roof culverts were reported swept away, but hydro and telephone interruptions were rectified in a few hours.

In Oliver bolts knocked chimneys off two houses and livestock losses were suffered in nearby villages.

Storm damage was heavy in the surrounding districts. At Kemptville three cows were killed by Russell Thompson of South Gower Township were killed by lightning and at North Gower six acres suffered a like fate. In the latter area crops and farm buildings were damaged.

W. N. Crosbery, Ontario District agricultural representative for Carleton County, said the area came through "very well". Damage to crops is not severe, he said, and fruits and vegetables escaped serious harm.

Damage Offset By Rain.

In Western Ontario damage caused by storms was more than offset by relief brought to thirsty crops.

Heatwave loss was at Cedar Springs, where Archie Thompson lost his barn with all his grain and four cattle, lightning hit it. At least three barns were burned after being hit by lightning, two homes were damaged by bolts in Essex and Kent Counties and communications were broken.

At Windsor a near cloudburst flooded basements in many streets and hydro officials had every available man repairing blown fuses and other electrical damages. Several sections around Windsor were without power for several hours. Five buildings were hit by lightning in the city.

Wind Flattens Crop.

The towns of Essex and Leamington and the southern part of Essex County reported only beneficial rains but at Harrow, between Leamington and Windsor, a strong wind flatten ed crops.

In nearby Anderdon Township the lightning struck and burned a barn on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hall, Jr., on St. George Turner's farm. In Kent County lightning destroyed a barn owned by Casmir Dillon, Harwich Township.

A good rainfall was reported in the western townships of Middlesex County but in the London area rain came in light showers. About an eighth of an inch of rain fell in the St. Thomas district.

C. GOSLEIGH.

Chief William Bain of the Trenton police force investigated the affair and placed both Wilson and Tripp under arrest on charges of vagrancy and shortly afterwards removed Wilson and Tripp to the county jail at Belleville. From a report received from the Trenton police, the men were at Manly Tripp's cottage on the bay shore drinking most of the night and at an argument ensued between Wilson and Tripp that lasted for some time. Gosleigh joined in the argument as peacemaker and soon the men shook hands all round and the incident appeared closed. Wilson, it is alleged, invited Gosleigh to the door to talk over the matter, and as he stepped outside the door, it is said that the slashing took place with a large hunting knife, sharpened to a razor edge with which Gosleigh was slashed from ear to ear.

About this time, three young men, Everett Gray, Clayton Breakman and his brother, Asa Breakman, all of Trenton and employed by the Trent Manufacturing Company were working on their boat about seventy feet from the cottage. They saw a man, afterwards identified as Gosleigh, come from a clump of bushes in the direction the cottage was situated, blood was streaming from a gaping wound in his neck. Gray attacked Gosleigh and placing him on the ground wound a towel about his neck to stop the flow of blood. Asa Breakman assisted Gray, Clayton Breakman jumped into his car and rushed to the surgery of Dr. A. McQuade who immediately notified the police and then hastened to the scene, where medical aid was given the injured man. Gosleigh was then placed in the ambulance and accompanied by Constable Loss was rushed to Belleville Hospital. Chief Bain in the meantime went to the scene of the assault and finding Wilson and Tripp in the cottage arrested the pair after thoroughly investigating the incident.

When the injured man was first brought to the hospital it was believe he would not live, with a few hours but on examination it was found a number of the arteries in the neck had been severed or "nicked" and after a transfusion had been given and his wound dressed, the patient rested and today his case is given a satisfactory. Chief William Bain today stated that no other charges had been laid in connection with the affair but would be some time today.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Fix Date

Date of the conference will be fixed upon receipt of replies to the invitations. The conference will examine the unemployment problem from every angle, it is stated here. Mayor Lewis said that a "campaign of action would be agreed upon which, if successful in principle, would provide for the calling of a larger conference to which industry throughout the Dominion by the leaders of municipalities and industrial leaders would be asked to participate, he said, so that the Federal Government will be asked for employment possibilities.

The plan was recommended in his interview yesterday by Mayor Ralph Day of Saint Mary's, Mayor Croil of Windsor, Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal and Mr. Mooney.

The three Ontario mayors who made the delegation also talked with Labor Minister Rogers on the Dominion Government's plan to aid municipal relief projects. The Minister had issued a statement declaring he had explained the government's stand on the impasse with the Ontario government to Mayors Lewis, Croil and Day.

Wants Lump Sum.

Ontario wants a lump-sum contributions to Ontario municipalities in advance of the works projects, while Ottawa maintains it cannot pay its share of 50 per cent of labor costs until the works are completed and accounts audited. Mr. Rogers said his government would not depart from the general practice as with other provinces on similar plans.

Mayor Day announced that Transport Minister Howe had assured him the government would assist with Toronto's $500,000 grade-separation project if it received approval of the Board of Transport Commissioners here. The Dominion share would be 70 per cent of the cost, Mr. Day said.

The transport department has agreed to take over operation of Windsor's previously-leased airport which the city will purchase the land, said Mayor Croil after an interview with Mr. Howe. The Windsor mayor was accompanied by Postmaster-General Gibson and Dr. A. Grayskel of Windsor. The government will contribute $250,000 for the construction of the airport and will do the actual building.

JUSTICE FOREST

Banns Not Published

The woman and her lover, Howard contested Bergeron's application for annulment, pleading that the pastor had no right to take up defence as his reputation was not compromised. His lordship ordered interventions by Rev. Mr. Howard.

The action was of the greatest importance, he said, because the Minister had intervened in the contest to only take up the fact and case of the defendant. Lutherist by birth, Wilhelmina Kirste attended an Anglican chapel in her youth at St. Felix De Valois.

The marriage was celebrated at the Anglican Church of St. Martins here and the couple left to reside in Kitchener. Banns were not published, Justice Forest said, in accordance with article 130 of the civil code which states it must be done by the Priest. Ministers' functionary in the church to which the parties belong.

Urges Amendment of Code

Even the Minister does not mean to say that a dignitary of one religion would be competent to publish banns and obtain dispensation from the Bishop and celebrate the marriage of two persons one or both of which is of a different religion than the officer performing the ceremony.

His Lordship continued with a lengthy review of the question and of court cases respecting mixed marriages. He pleaded for amendment of Quebec's civil code to put issuance of licences in the hands of a superior court. He also urged Roman Catholic and Protestant clergy to get together on the matter.

VICTORIOUS

(Buenos Aires dispatches this week said the Argentine government has accepted nomination of General Quepode de Llano as Spanish Ambassador to that country. The appointment has not been announced as yet by General Franco.)

Spanish Funds

Also reported in the Spanish jig-saw can be pieced together, the picture is as follows: De Llano and Yague have been demoted from their posts because they oppose the Falangists and a close partnership with the Rome-Berlin axis.

Suner, regarded as the No. 2 man in Spain, wants to see Spain under a Fascist system, complete with dictator and working in harmony with Rome and Berlin, particularly Rome.

Franco remains a professional soldier, much in debt to Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini, a man without political ambitions, who appears to want to step down from the seat of power as soon as order has been restored.

Major Problems

Two major problems disturb and agitate Spain—the definite break with the axis and the return of a monarchy. Neither Suner nor any yet fall over these questions.

The Falangists are the political machine which gives importance and numbers come the Monarchists, a family nobleman of importance and position.

In addition, there are several million Republicans who survived the war, with the potential ability to swing the scales in favor of either Falangists or Monarchists.

The year of defeat is still heavy on the Republicans—many are still in concentration camps, they cannot possess arms or hold public position. It is even dangerous for them to acknowledge they are Republicans. However, if it ever came to a showdown between those who want a King and those who want Fascism, the Republicans probably would settle the argument. Having tasted four months of rule under the Franco-Suner brand of so-called Fascism, they would jump at the chance of living under a Monarchy.

What of Italy, Germany

There is one other consideration standing in the way of a "Spain for the Spaniards" plan. Hitler and Mussolini, Franco's creditors, have taken most of their troops out of Spain but they left millions of dollars worth of armaments, equipment and munitions.

Mussolini, who gets along well with a King in his own country might not oppose a King for Spain. But that would mean France taking sides between the Fascists and Monarchists because to Senor Sunner's party, a Monarchist is a hated rag to a Seville bull.

De Llano and Yague are strong-willed, they dislike the axis powers and blame the Falangists for all the war difficulties.

They have made a bitter enemy in Suner who has a substantial army for Spain and himself. Above them, fight.

Farmers Pray For Rain As Blistering Sears Eastern States

Heavy showers, dousing portions of the eastern United States drought belt, brought relief after a month of blistering heat which caused crop losses amounting to millions of dollars. While intermittent showers fell in New York City, Long Island farmers knelt in their fields (UPPER) praying for rain. These two youthful farmers (UPPER RIGHT) view the ruined corn crops on their father's Long Island farm. Many farmers' crops were a total loss after the scorching heat wave. Once a rapidly-running stream with enough flow to turn the turbines of the hydro-electric plant at Wilkill, N.Y., this stream (LOWER LEFT) has dried up to a mere trickle of water. With their crops ruined, farmers in the drought area fought to save their livestock and were forced to draw their water in barrels for miles to water their cattle, standing forlornly in burnt pastures (LOWER RIGHT).

LINGERIE collars and cuffs mean that neck and wrists can be dressed prettily. If the hands do not qualify for beauty contests, that are a blessing, especially dainty ones of organdy and fine lace, appearing flutty again. One must look womanly and be fastidiously dressed if one is to keep in step with style parade.

Considered on a beauty asset, wrists are nothing to brag about. They are anatomical hinges, more useful than attractive. And unless one's even half an inch of the correct length, makes a wrong last impression.

If hands have aged, taken on yel, lery patches, the sleeves can extend below the usual length. Bracelets should not be worn for the attention to hands that might be better looking, as necklaces draw the eye to wrinkled necks.

In the shops you'll find cute little make-up cases. Keep one hanging in the bathroom cabinet; you'll find

"The Lady and the Mob"

Fast winning national acclaim as the season's most sensational comedy, "The Lady and the Mob" opens next at the McCarthy Theatre, with record Academy Award Winner Fay Bainter and Ida Lupino co-featured, and Walter Connolly hilarious in treatment. "The Lady and the Mob" revolves around one of the screen's most amusing characters, the autocratic, mildly eccentric Mrs. Leonard.

The story really starts when Mrs. Leonard learns she is paying Secretaries for having garnuela cleaned. Her jaw set, she investigates. The fee is going to Lucy Harper, protective association. Mrs. Leonard hustles to the District Attorney. When he proves powerless she goes to the Mayor. That worthy, too, admits he is powerless, whereupon the lady goes into action. She recruits a "mob," buys an armored limousine, and proceeds to fight fire with fire.

Her efforts prove too hot for the racketeers, as brought out in the film's cyclonic climax. And in between is said to be some of the merriest, maddest action ever to come out of Hollywood.

Miss Bainter scores the greatest success of her career as the extraordinary Mrs. Leonard, and Ida Lupino is the pluck daughter-in-law who alternately fights for and against the social reformer. Lee Bowman plays the leading male role and the supporting cast includes Warren Hymer, Henry Armetta, Tom Dugan, Harold Huber and Forbes Murray.

"Adventure in Sahara" a romantic adventure story of the French Foreign Legion, nightlier in its thrills than "Beau Geste" starring Paul Kelly, Lee Bowman, Linda Ca Gray and featuring an excellent supporting cast, including Andrea Lawrence, Dick Curtis and Stanley Sharpe is the second big feature which will be presented next at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to "The Lady and the Mob" on the bill. A productions that will long be remembered as a screen thriller and entertainment by all who attend the McCarthy Theatre.

There is change at "Let Us Live"

"Law Comes to Texas"

Maureen O'Sullivan, Henry Fonda and Ralph Bellamy in "Let Us Live" win the leading roles in the companion feature "The Law Comes to Texas" starring the new cowboy star, Bill (Cyclone) Boyd. (Hopalong) is the two feature programme which is now playing at the Capitol Carthy Theatre, in addition to a swell Popeye cartoon and the cartoon-ette "Wotta Nitemare" and the comedy of the Deep," an excellent screen story of shark fishing.

The Stars Say—

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds out promise of a day of progressive conditions, excepting for chicks or elderly persons, who may have setbacks or disappointments. There will be much social activity, with pleasure, festivity and entertainment adventures paramount. Jill-temper or impetuously should not hamper these.

Those whose birthday it is will have a lively and busy and eventful year, although there will be some obstacles or delays to be overcome and surmount by sound judgment, tactfulness and tact. Financially, the social, domestic and romantic activities will prove alluring and happy. It is a favorable year for those who are enterprising, forceful and progressive, although it will be inclined to wayward, impetuous, quick-tempered and careless.

For Monday, July 31

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a lively and productive day, with indications that fifty-years-married mother and father can comfortable stand such a full day of activities. Even so, it would be grand to celebrate this great occasion in this generous way.

"I do sursest, however, that little would be lost as wise and limit the number of "house . . . say from three to six o'clock, or four to five.

And another suggestion: plan to have a dinner and a dinner dance, unless you know this is what your guests of honor would wish. Don't make this but for the entertainment of the guests, if the host won't particularly enjoy it.

dress before the closing.

The reunion is to be held next year on the same date at Mr. Abida Holmes, near Queensboro.

AT THE STRAND

Susannah of The Mounties

Canada's world-famed mounted Police no longer defend their right to the peace understanding of that phrase, according to Bruce Carruthers, former Mounted and provincial advisor on "Susannah of the Mounties" with Deanna Durbin.

Today's Mounties are mostly motorcycle riders and seldom are assigned to apprehend desperadoes of the Northwest. It was in the early days of the force, when the Canadian Pacific Railroad was pushing west into Indian territory, that the Mounties earned their heroic reputation.

It is this adventurous period that is depicted in "Susannah of the Mounties" which is now at the Belle Theatre, Starring Shirley Temple, in an amazing dramatic role, the film tells the story of an Indian massacre who is adopted by a Mounted Police, the film features Randolph Scott and Margaret Lockwood. This lovely actress became as famous as "The Lady Vanishes."

Packed with thrills and action "Susannah of the Mounties" was directed by William A. Seiter. Darryl F. Zanuck was in charge of production. Included in the cast is Martin Good Rider, Tyrone Power, Blackfeet brave, who plays Shirley's first screen lover.

"Stone Boner" is the title of a humorous short reel. Leon Errol's comedy to be presented on the same program with a clever Terrytoon Cartoon "Stone Age Wife Swapping" and the popular Belle Newsreel.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Doctor Cautions Parents, Against Over-Exposing Children to Sun

Last week we discussed what is common to babies during hot weather. My correspondence now shows that parents with older children also have their summer problems.

For instance during this season children are apt to camp, either with their parents or at a camp with many children. This is the first time when city children in particular are always running up against conditions that are forcing to them.

Probably the first and most troublesome difficulty they will encounter will be sunburn, which is painful and uncomfortable; at times in the sun with as few clothes as the parents think wise.

I don't need to press home my arguments about sun with any personal experiences, because most of you have seen cases of sunburn that have made children ill. You all have seen them burn until they were a mass of blisters. With some unfortunate people this takes a few minutes in the direct rays of the sun.

When the Quints were first born they were too delicate and their skins were too sensitive to be exposed to the sun. We waited until about October when we were in full sunshine, to give them the full benefit of the sunshine.

By that time the sun wasn't strong enough to hurt them. But next spring we started again, and the nurse forgot that their skin was a little more delicate than most babies their age and she exposed them a little too long. I remember I was called out in the night to see the children because they weren't well and they were having cramps in the legs. It didn't take long to identify sunburn.

Ever since then we have been exceptionally careful, and today they are enjoying the sun in any amount of sun. And it does them good.

Protests Are Made To Tokyo Gov't

London, July 29—(CP)—British officials said today Sir Robert Craigie, Ambassador to Japan, has been instructed to make representations to the Tokyo government over continuation of anti-British demonstrations in the Orient.

The officials indicated the current Anglo-Japanese negotiations in Tokyo over China policy have not been going well.

MOON ON THE WATER

By Ruby A. Cayze

"Here's the train," she said suddenly, and her eyes were bright with anticipation. "She'll be travelling first, of course; she always travels first even when she hasn't much money."

The train crept up to the platform and stopped, and then the carriage doors began to open.

Gavin knocked the ashes from his pipe on the heel of his shoe, and regretfully slowed it away in his jacket pocket.

"Is my hat straight?" he asked jokingly.

"You look beautiful," Jane answered, laughing, and then she gave a little rush forward. There she is!"

Dulcie had already commandeered one of the few porters the little country station could boast, and had hauled him her traveling coat and suitcase.

Dulcie always traveled like "ten thousand a year" as Jane expressed it, even when she had only about fifteen shillings in her pocket, and she looked serenely beautiful now as she turned a carefully powdered cheek for her sister's kiss.

"How are you? How is everyone?" she asked carelessly.

Jane answered breathlessly. "Every one's all right—I've brought Gavin to meet you—here he is."

There was a supercilious little smile in Dulcie's eyes as she turned to the man standing behind her sister, but it suddenly faded, to give way to a look of sharp interest.

"How do you do," she said in her sweetest voice, and she held out her hand.

"Any luggage?" Jane asked.

"Two trunks," Dulcie said, and she looked again at Gavin.

"I'll find them for you," he said, as he walked away Dulcie's eyes followed him.

"Well?" Jane asked eagerly. "What do you think of him?"

There was a little silence, then Dulcie laughed.

"I congratulate you," she said calmly. "I didn't expect any one half so attractive."

Jane's face fell—and the quick hurt thought flew to her mind. "She thinks I'm not good enough for him."

Not that it mattered what Dulcie thought! Or did it?

Gavin stayed to supper that night.

"Dinner," Dulcie always called it, and she laughed when Jane reminded her that they never had anything half so grand.

"I forgot!" she said carelessly. "You see, I've been away from home so long, and in town we always dressed for dinner. I think I'll change my frock anyway, even though it's only supper."

"It's not a bit necessary," Jane called after her a little anxiously. She knew that Dulcie's clothes were always much smarter and more expensive than her own. and it was a mystery to her how Dulcie could afford to be so extravagant.

"Not that I should look any better if I changed my frock a dozen times a day," she told herself honestly, but it hurt to remember that Dulcie looked well in anything—even in a cotton overall or a dairy maid's coat.

He looked at her with raised brows.

"Cross?" he inquired.

She smiled instantly, and went back to his chair, nodding her head against his cool sleeve.

"No, I'm never cross with you," she said. "But—somehow Dulcie always makes me feel—out of things as if I'm always in the circus."

"The clown at the circus is the greatest attraction to small people," Gavin answered kindly. He dropped a light kiss on her hair. "Ought I to have dressed in honor of the great occasion?" he asked, "I have a dinner jacket of sorts knocking about somewhere."

"You'd do quite well as you are," Jane said, but again that queer little hurt feeling touched her as she remembered that Gavin had never suggested dressing before Dulcie came.

INSTALMENT 3.

Jane moved away from Gavin and went up to her room, opening the wardrobe door and staring disconsolately at its contents.

Jane had very few clothes—they were particularly interested her but now the thought came to her that with three thousand pounds she could have done so much.

And then instantly she was ashamed. Wasn't she doing much with the money as it was? Wasn't she doing what she most wished to do, and making it possible for her to marry the man she loved?

"You're a horrid, unthankful little brute," she told herself disgustedly, and she flung off her frock and began vigorously to brush her unruly hair.

But it was not a very successful brush, and presently she dropped the brush and turned away with a sigh.

"It's no good, my dear," she said aloud. "You'll never be anything but what you are, and you may as well make up your mind to it."

She put on her second best frock which had long ago seen its best days, and a necklace of amber beads which had belonged to her mother.

And then she looked at herself critically in the mirror, too critically to realize that she was really an attractive personality—different from other girls—and that it was a thousand pities to attempt any alteration.

"But—Gavin loves me," she thought and for a moment she was almost beautiful.

Dulcie came into the room.

"Do you like this frock?" she asked. She held out her arms wide, turning slowly for approval. "It was given to me—and I think it's rather a pet."

"It's lovely," Jane said, and suddenly all her radiant happiness was gone as she looked at her sister.

Yes, Dulcie was beautiful—it was no wonder that all the men fell in love with her—no wonder that all the girls were a little jealous of her.

"Nobody would ever believe we were sisters," Jane thought.

"Where did you get that necklace?" Dulcie was asking. "It would suit me much better than it does you."

"It was mother's," Jane said. She lifted her hands and unclasped it long. I had a most exciting proposal to make you. Nobody likes the feeling that they're just going to be used for ulterior purposes and then thrown back into the discard. Of course a lot of prominent women will prefer to be there and it would be a perfect place to break in my new hat, but nobody can force me to buy anything, she said.

Then, why not go? pop said, and ma said, I believe I will, Willyum, thanks for the advice.

Proving the only advice people really want is the advice they would give to themselfs anyways.

Lost For Eight Days, Boy Reunited With Father

Donn Pendler, 12-year-old Rye, N.Y., Boy Scout who, for eight days was lost in the Maine wilderness around Mount Katahdin, is shown reunited with his father, Donn, Sr., from her throat. "You have it," she said generously.

At RIGHT is Nelson McMoran who found the boy near his hunting and fishing camp near Sherman. The elder Pendler is a patient at the hospital suffering from an eye injury received during the search for the boy. The lad is now a co-patient pending general physical check-up.

"Oh, did you?" Jane forgot everything in this new interest. "Who is he? Do tell me! Are you very fond of him?"

Dulcie screwed up her face.

"Fond of him! He's fifty—and a bit dull, but he's rich—and he adores me."

"Fifty!" Jane said, aghast. "Why, that's nearly as old as father."

"What does that matter? None of the young men have any money nowadays, and I've had enough of pinching and scraping to last me a lifetime."

"I'm sure we've always had everything we want," Jane said warmly.

"You may have had everything you want," Dulcie agreed calmly, "but it takes a good deal more to satisfy me, I want a car, and to be able to spend the winter in the south of France—and Maurice can give me all I want. He's promised to make quite a handsome settlement, too, if I marry him."

"Then—are you going to marry him?"

Dulcie shrugged her slim shoulders.

"I don't know—I haven't said definitely. It depends whether I find any one I like better."

She linked her arm in Jane's as they went downstairs.

"What have we got for supper?" she asked.

"I don't know—Pamela always arranges the meals."

"They'll be dull then." Dulcie said with a sigh. "She's got no ideas about anything. Rice pudding, I expect, for dessert."

Jane did not answer, but there was a tight little feeling in her throat as together they walked into the drawing-room.

Gavin was still there alone, but he dropped his paper as she girls entered, and Jane was quick to notice that his eyes went at once to Dulcie.

She told herself generously that it was only natural. Dulcie was so well worth looking at—and besides, she was somebody fresh.

"To cocktail-drink," Dulcie said. Jane flushed.

"You know we never have cocktails," she answered sharply.

Dulcie looked at Gavin with a little smile.

"I've been living in the lap of luxury for the past six weeks," she explained. "And it's a bit of a drop to come home to bread and cheese, as it were."

"I think it's horrid of you to talk like that," Jane said indignantly, but Gavin only laughed.

"You seem to be the spoilt child of the family," he said to Dulcie.

"I've always insisted upon being spoilt," she answered calmly. "It's the only way—if you appear too capable you get all the disagreeable jobs to do—and I hate disagreeable jobs."

Her soft eyes sought his appealingly.

"I can't imagine your doing disagreeable jobs," Gavin said.

He glanced at her hands, so slim and white, against the dark wood of her own hands behind her back, painfully conscious of their sunburn.

Ma was looking at the crossword puzzle in the paper, and when I came saying to pop, Willyum will you give me some advice?

Yours to command, on 24 hours duty, pop said.

Meaning no, and ma said, Well then I with you would.

Oh, any subject whatever? pop said, and ma said, Certainly not silly, I want your advice on whether or not I go to Mrs. Thornton Willows private exhibition of drawings and paintings by German, Spanish and Chinese refugees, It's a very special affair and admission is strictly by card only, do you think I ought to go, Willyum?

Why not, you can fiddle in your bandtag as if you had a card and test it, pop said, and ma said, But I really have a card, that's the point, I mean the point is Mrs Thornton Willows was very anxoitoh to me the last time we met and invited me and I have a detailed recollection of my name and only the faintest of my face and I don't realize that the honor of receiving an card to the exhibition includes the expectation that I'll buy one of the exhibits.

My advice is not to go, my advice is to stay away and mind your own business, pop said and ma said, It would just serve her right I admit. Then the stalemate rule, serve everybody right, pop said, and ma

CONNIE HARRIS WHIFFS ELEVEN TO BEAT OILERS

Corbys Win First Game in O.A.S.A. Playdowns by 3-2 Count

ALLOWS 4 HITS

Oilers Blanked for Eight Innings After Scoring Two Runs

With pitcher Connie Harris in the driver's seat and in complete control of the evening's activities, the Corbys A. C. drew first blood in the Belleville intermediate "A" playdowns of the O.A.S.A. at Coleman Flats last evening defeating the Shell "Oilers" 3 to 2 in a thrilling game of the local league final softball play-offs. The series continue on Monday evening.

Harris was in rare pitching form striking out 11 of Frank Sedore's "Oilers" and blanking them for eight consecutive innings, the losers scoring their two runs in the initial frame and collecting but four hits throughout. Harris was opposed by Johnnie Bawden the league's leading pitcher on the year's play, but last night Bawden had to bow to the courageous effort of Harris, who proved a sterling clutch pitcher. Harris' triumphal effort came in the ninth inning as the Barnett-led nine scored their winning counter, the last half of the ninth with, a hard double to centre, Harris forced Johnston at third to pop out to the catcher, while Whalen's hit was taken by Art Cole near the fence and then Lambert shot out pinch-hitter Harold Bawden, swinging.

Oilers Score Early

The "Oilers" scored early as Sero opened the first inning with a Dickey aboard for the only two runs scored by the losers. Simpson scored Corbys first run in the third after singling and racing home on Cy Barrigar's double. Corbys in the fourth the Corbys clinched the game as Reid opened with a single and scored ahead of Art Cole, who drove a hard hit into deep right field for a three run. Corbys got two more hits in the fifth, but failed to score as Bawden was seen to tighten up. From that point on Corbys only counted one hit off Bawden.

The "Oilers" only collected four hits off Harris, and did not hit safely from the fourth until the ninth, as Corbys turned the ball boys back in order for four consecutive frames. The ninth was the blow and a double was the only thorn in Harris' side, while Simpson, Reid and Cleveland connected two hits each off Bawden and Cole hammered out a homer.

Cubs Move into Second Place On Ninth-Inning Home Run Which Beat the Giants 5-4

Giants Suffer 13th Loss in Last 15 Games and Are in Second Division

YANKEES WIN

Red Rolfe Singled in Ninth to Beat Chicago White Sox 2 to 1

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

Second place changes hands quickly these days, in the National League. What with Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals and Pittsburgh Sllowing each other in and out of the spot.

Yesterday it was the Cubs who went in thanks to a last-minute ninth-inning home run, that was good for a 5-4 victory over New York Giants.

The Cubs became the chief challenge of the first-place-leading Cardinals by uphill battle, when Glen Russell parked his homer over the left field wall in Chicago's lone tough tilt the Giants to take because they left the game almost in the sack and then had to take their 13th loss in 15 in the last 15.

The other two of the triumvirate making such a spirited bid for a chance to starpshoot at Cincinnati Reds had tougher sledding. The Cardinals were nosed out 5-4 when Vito Tamulis and Hugh Casey combined to end a Dodger losing streak of two games by holding the Cashouters to nine hits, including Mickey Medwick's seventh homer of the year.

Pirates back in Fourth

And the Pirates, whose sensational climb from sixth to second was the talk of the league, are back to fourth place now after their second straight loss, this time at the hands of Jim Turner's slow ball and the hitting of Max West and Tommy Cascinella that enabled Boston to beat the Pirates 7-1.

While the talented trio were thus engaged the team they're all after, the Cincinnati Reds, were taking off, rained out of a tilt with the Phillies.

In the American League, it looked for a 1-3 innings as though Edgar Smith, Yankee southpaw star, were going to wave that magic wand of his and bamboozle the Yankees for a 2-0 victory, but they got the bases full, and up came Red Rolfe. Red singled and the Yankees won 3-1.

Browns Snap Losing Streak

Second place Boston Red Sox got the surprise of their lives—and a 9-6 defeat—at the hands of the Browns rose up with a three-homer, 11-hit barrage to snap their losing streak at 10 games. Chet Laabs and Joe Gretz, the latter with two, did the homering.

Young Ken Chase of the Senators, after having his ears pinned back some 13 times this season, chalked up one with a magnificent two-hit masterpiece that bested Bobby Feller and Cleveland Indians 2-0 in a tight mound duel. The Senators, for once, got Ken's support and Chase got his 12th win with from the third inning.

Bobo Newsom's latest nine pitching chore to win his first Major League shutout victory by hurling the Athletics to a 3-0 victory over Detroit Tigers.

BUFFALO BISONS BECOME THREAT TO JERSEY SQUAD

Tied for Second Place With Rochester 4½ Games Behind Leaders

TORONTO WINS

Leafs Team Has to Go Eleven Frames to Defeat Bears 7-6

It's been a long, hard struggle, but the creaking arms and cracking bats of Buffalo Bisons finally have put the Bisons up where they're a real threat to the pennant-hungry Jersey City Giants.

The progress of the herd from seventh place, where it started late in June, to the present virtual tie with Rochester Red Wings has been notable for two things—the home runs clouted in the home park and the way the ancient sluggers have won winning games.

The Bisons have no fewer than four candidates for the role held a couple of years back by old Bill Hallahan, one of the best for Buffalo he won himself another year in the big time before returning to the International League with Jersey City.

Ken Jones, one of the oldest of the former major leaguers, gave an outstanding example of the kind of pitching that's been doing when he blanked the Little Giants with five hits while Jack Ory got Buff's 3-0 victory in the second game of a doubleheader after Jersey City had taken the opener, 4-2, behind Johnny Wittig.

A Mound Duel.

Ash hooked up in a mound duel with Jack and while he wielded the whitewash brush the Bisons collected an unearned run in the third inning, then bunched four hits for two more runs in the eighth. With the younger fellows doing the hurling, Wittig easily outshone Bill Zuber, ex-Giant southpaw hits and fanning fifteen.

Although the split left Buffalo 4½ games behind the league leaders, the Bisons moved into a tie practically even in terms with Rochester, which took a single seven-inning licking from Baltimore, 5-0. What started out to be the first game of a doubleheader ended up in a duel between Harry Matuszek and Mike Ryba in which the former got the decision on a three-run rally in the sixth, capped by Nick Etten's homer with one aboard. Rain and lightning wiped out the second game.

Leafs Win in Eleven Frames.

Montreal and Syracuse staged a similar abbreviated bill with the Chiefs winning out in six innings, 3-1. But Newark's Toronto made up for it by going eleven frames before the Maple Leafs won out, 7-6.

Johnny Gee hung up his sixteenth victory of the season by limiting the Bears to seven hits and a single run in the sixth with two on base. Montreal's starter, Gene Schott, counting on a last-out-of-the-ninth bugaboo, him and Wayne Lamaster for five runs in the first inning.

Toronto, scoring four times in the first inning Just the lead twice before winning out. Walt Judnich, who has been only four times, scored in the ninth to give Newark a tie, but the Bears couldn't get another run and Johnny Haley finally gave one in the eleventh when Eqqie de Jonghe's single brought Bob Elliott in from second base.

Playground Notes

At approximately three o'clock Wednesday afternoon, a midget softball game got under way between the boys 13 years and under, from the West and East Hills of the latter grounds. A close, hard-fought game followed with the West Hill midgets emerging victorious at the end of a scheduled seven inning game, the score being 9-7. Bruce Sword, pitching for the winners, was the main thorn in the side of the East team, both in his pitching and hitting. Bob Buntin, put in for Billy Anderson at the beginning of the fifth, did a fine job of relief hurling, pitching out six men while only one run was chalked up against him. The final will carry from behind in these innings to garner three runs, leaving the final score standing at 9-7. Donnie "Red" Simms added two of these runs in the last of the seventh as he knocked a mighty home run to score both himself and Pavy Lee on yer, and make it appear for the moment as if his team might knott the score. Sword and Badgley were the best hitters for the West, Moore and D. Moffett for the East.

Lineups:

West — Bill—Ostrom, Baragar, York, Rogers, Wright, Smith, Rossett, Badgley, Sword.

East Hill—Cronin, Buntin, Moore, Milligan, Lockyer, D. Kellett, S. Kellett, Anderson, Taylor.

Batteries: Sword, Rosett; Anderson, Cronin, Buntin.

Wednesday afternoon at their own grounds, the West Hillers won another victory as Rex Young, their champion baseball thrower, defeated Bert Silver, the champion of the East, by the decisive scores of 20 and 21-8. In so doing he became the "champ" of both the Parents playgrounds and won the right to have sent them in the Horseshoe Tournament to be held at Sir Mackenzie Laurier Park. By right of his victory, he will play in the men's singles, teaming up with Silver for in the doubles.

With two defeats rankling in their minds, the Parents playground 11 years and under, left for the West grounds at 10 o'clock Wednesday morn determined to take a win home with them. In doing just this, they surprised even their most ardent supporters, not to speak of themselves, by the one-sided game they swamped their rivals by a score of 26-6. At the end of each fourth, no one had any idea of the batting spree the East Hill was to enter upon, as the score stood at a modest 9-7 in their favour. In their last time up, however in the first of the fifth, their bats really spoke as every member turned slugger and started hitting the ball from one end into the fence. After two relief pitchers had been knocked out of the box, the West Hill pitcher, Strahan, Bob Buntin returned to the mound to strike out the remaining two batters. Nineteen runs were scored by the East in the batting as Cronin, Buntin, Winer and Jones, all hit for the circuit, while Boyle, Galbraith, Lockyer and Anderson hit doubles or triples. Bob Buntin, the winning pitcher, was the best plower used by either side, as he really triumphed with nine strikeouts and a perfect day at the bat. The outstanding player for the losers was Billy Strahan, the smallest plower trotted out by either team and the despair of the opposing pitcher.

Lineups:

East Hill—Cronin, Winer, Buntin, Boyle, Anderson.

West — J. Galbraith, Lockyer, Donovan, B. Galbraith.

Batteries: Buntin, Cronin; Strahan, Stackhouse.

HENRY MARTELL AND KEN BLACK IN TITLE MATCH

Two Westerners Will Battle for Canadian Amateur Golf Title

BOTH SOUND GOLFERS

Martell Defeated Defending Champ and Black Beat Farley in Semi-Finals

By SIDNEY GRUSON

St. Bruno, Que., July 29 (CP)—The man they've been waiting to see knocked out for four rounds came up today in the final of the Canadian amateur golf championship against a chubby young fellow who has the great golfing tradition of his father to uphold.

After a week of upsets, culminating in the defeat of champion Ted Adams of Montreal, 11 to 10, Henry Martell of Edmonton against Ken Black of Vancouver, one of Canada's best professional nearly two decades ago.

These were the two of the 142 who started nearly a week ago. Today they go at it for 36 holes of heat over Mount Bruno's exacting layout where Martell trounced Adams, 3 and 2, and Black knocked off Phil Farley of Toronto on the last green of their 36-hole semi-final.

No matter what happens today this championship will be a family affair with thrills for the 36-year-old Martell, champion of Alberta. He has been the tournament upstart. In successive rounds he has beaten four-time champion Gordon Hunkenberger of Charlotte, N.C., Ed Meister of Cleveland, Ted D. Adams of Boston and, finally, the champion.

Black Consistent.

Black's presence is no surprise. He has been playing tournament golf for ten years and for six years has been recognized as one of the country's finest players. Twice he has beaten the continent's best in western open tournaments and he got to the amateur final against Scotty Campbell of Seattle in 1933, and lost.

History will be made whoever wins. The final match will be played by golfers with two westerners and a westerner never has won.

Martell will be playing for more than the championship. Back of Edmonton, Alta., his home town, will be the thought that a victory might help get the 36 holes staged him for six months.

As he puts it he'll be playing "for the old home town" and he'll get a big welcome back again".

Martell has some of those worries. He wants the title, then to fly back to Edmonton "to see the baby and then of mine is getting along". Golf and gardening are his hobbies.

PRAYER FOR PEACE

A war-time rumor, asked which letter has remained firmest in his memory, says he can recall only word for word. Here it is: "For the 10th, and last time I tell you I'm not spending my money on booze and mademoiselles. I'm having all my pay allotted to you. So now for the love of Mike stop worrying and let me fight this war in peace."—British Manchuan Magazine.

When Clark Griffith, ABOVE, president of Washington senators, had his lumbering first baseman, Zeke Bonura, waived out of the American league and sold to the New York Giants, he assured all and sundry that the Yanks wouldn't miss the jovial Banabas. Currently playing first for the Senators is Jim Vernon, the FIFTH guardian tried at that post since Zeke left. Veterans and rookies have been tried and vanished swiftly from the scene, without ever giving any signs of knocking 114 runs over the plate as Bonura did last year.

90 SCHOONERS AFTER SWORDFISH

Fishing the Broadbill is One of Most Dangerous of Games

By MALCOLM MacLEOD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Louisburg, N.S., July 29 (CP)—There's a fleet of 90 salt-off Louisburg harbor today, the biggest fleet that's been there since Admiral Warren's victorious British frigates blasted their way into the rock-bound inlet in 1745. But the fleet isn't chasing the French—it's after Broadbill Swordfish.

The season on the slender, wicked game fish, the North Atlantic's most vicious fighter, opened yesterday as the first big school churned the water off this Cape Breton port, once a French stronghold, then the fleet went into action.

All along the coast the schooners shouted ahoys, lookouts standing in the "pulpits" built over the bowsprits, stere and there a flash of activity betrayed the presence of a fish.

Only Four Landed
Only four were landed, however, small fish weighing between 300 and 400 pounds dressed.

Loughrey's fighting Broadbill is known throughout the sporting world as one of the gamest fish that swims. Specimens have towed heavy dories for a day and a night before giving in to the gaff.

Besides its sporting reputation the Broadbill is an excellent food, firm and nicely flavored. Meat of the swordfish taken on the East Coast of North America are brought in off here.

Fishing the Broadbill for pleasure is a vastly more dangerous under-taking than handling tuna. The tuna is bigger and possibly stronger but he isn't armed with a five-foot spear of bone that can go through the side of a vessel. And a tuna hasn't a disposition like home-made dynamite.

Fish Often Charge Vessel

If a fisherman's boat isn't lined up with the Broadbill's path when the hook is taken, something has to go—the line or the fisherman, but never the fish. That's why sturdy twin engines and steering boosters are favored by Broadbill guides.

The fishermen who go out to earn their living when the swordfish appear harpoon the fish and bring them board with a large steel hook called a gaff. Numerous cases of swordfish charging a vessel have been reported, and in many the fish has rammed their swords right through the vessel's side.

A Gambler's Chance

By FRANK BENNEY

The horse veered crashily and stumbled to his knees. The rider sprang clear of the saddle. So this is where it's going to end, Sheriff Jackson thought bitterly as he gazed at the dying animal.

Jackson faced the east and looked with hand-shaded eyes across the blazing sands.

In the distance he could see a tiny thread of dust, and he knew that Pete was following, and following fast.

The sheriff cursed himself for his carelessness in leaving his office to cross the street, unarmed.

But how could he know that Pete would be looking for him at that precise moment?

He had seen Pete just in time to dodge around a building and get to his horse.

Then Pete had begun to shoot, and Jackson had had to ride for his life.

The sheriff turned toward the fallen horse, unhooked a canvas-covered canteen, and weighed it in his hand. About half full, he decided.

Suddenly he smiled grimly, dropped to his knees, scooped out a shallow hole in the hot sand, and carefully buried the canteen.

After wiping off all traces of the hiding place, he arose and turned westward.

A quarter-mile walk brought him to a great mass of rocks, a mile-cropping of limestone that lifted itself high above the desert. He sat down to wait.

"God pity anyone who dies that way."

There was a short, tense silence, then the gun was lowered.

"That's your proposition?" Pete asked.

"Just this," Jackson replied. "First, you are to dismantle your 45 and give me the cylinder—then, we'll take a coin," he drew a half-dollar from his pocket—"and flip it. If it's heads, you take the water and get out! If it's tails, I take the water and you stay."

Pete shook his shaggy head.

"It's no good—you'd hold out on me if I won."

"Don't be a fool, Pete," snapped Jackson. "It's a fifty-fifty chance my way; your way—there's no chance for either of us."

For a long minute the big man eyed the sheriff; then slowly broke open the gun, removed the cylinder, and twirled it around the cylinder, fingers. His face was white. He tossed the cylinder to Jackson and said, "Flip your coin, but flip it high or it's no go."

The coin spun through the air and half-buried itself in the loose sand. Both men stooped over to read their fates in that silver disk glittering in the heat.

"I won!" Pete gasped hoarsely. "I won, damn you! I won!"

But the sheriff straightened slowly and looked at the big man.

"You'll find my canteen buried under a flat rock near my horse's head," he said dully.

He sat down wearily.

Later, Sheriff Jackson arose to his feet and started his way to the far side of the limestone formation.

Hidden under a ledge was a trickle of water that dripped into a small, shallow rock.

He took a deep "mouthful of the cool, sweet water, then stretched out in the shade of the ledge. He smiled. He knew that soon some of the boys would come looking for him, and he knew that Pete would be overtaken and captured easily.

He drew the coin from his pocket, turned it over several times, and smiled as it affectionately.

It was an imitation half-dollar, and it had heads on both sides.

He was glad that he had taken it away from the Hollister kid the night before. The fool kid might sometime, thought Jackson as he returned the trick coin to his pocket. He yawned, closed his eyes and dozed peacefully.

Finds 'Right Building' At Last for Suicide

New York, July 28.—(AP)— Success came at last for Mrs. Sophie Beck, 36, after she sat through the night on a lonely roof and then searched all day for the "right building".

She plunged to her death last night from the fourth storey window of a hotel in Brooklyn. It had been two days since her husband reported her missing to the police.

Mrs. Beck, who also suffered nervous breakdown recently, left this note to the local coroner:

"With the prospect of a 17-storey jump I seem to feel at my best. Before I was walking all day trying to find the right building . . . will I have the courage? . . . I sat on one roof all night and decided it was too high. It is 6 p.m. now and I must start . . . or rather finish—soon."

"I think it's about time the men in this country organized as the women have, to defend themselves.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—The Toronto Stock Exchange rounded out the week with a dull performance today. Little ground and small trading only about 150,000 shares.

A few of the golds were sold in considerable volume at minor price concessions and Pamour was offered down to 2.30 for a loss of 16 cents. All indices were off slightly.

Pamour's decline to a new low for the last two years was the result of a report that ore values were showing a considerable decline. Losses of a cent or two spotted the board and Bankfield, Aumar and Powell-Rouyn. Hollinger firmed a small fraction and other senior golds were steady.

Francoeur featured the penny list, trading in heavy volume on an advance of 21 cents to 44. Paymaster and Sherritt-Gordon and McWatters was stronger at 61.

Recessing were of minor importance in the base metal ground. International Nickel and Smelters weakened about ¼ and Bell Telephone and Sherritt dropped a cent each. Eldorado was firm at 1.17.

The market was lower for the most part when it opened. Base metals, utilities and senior oils, Dominion Bridge advanced ¼, and Canada Cement, Can National Steel Car, Page-Hersey and Dominion Stores, Walkers common declined ½.

Declines of 2 to 5 cents were boarded by Home Oil and Calgary-Edmonton. Other western oils were dormant with bids barely firm.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 29 (AP).—A tired looking stock market today napped in a lower berth.

With the exception of a handful of inactives, the list displayed slipping tendencies at the start. Closing declines ranged from fractions to a point or so, but numerous issues were unchanged or only off a shade.

Transfers for the two hours were around 300,000 shares, quite a stepdown from last Saturday's turnover of 806,110.

Brokers could see little in the news to account for the indifferent proceedings. Attendance was exceptionally slack in board rooms.

Lagging the greater part of the day were shares of U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union, Anaconda, Air Reduction, U. S. Gypsum, Phelps Dodge and Goodyear.

Rails and utilities were only a shade in arrears. Loft, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak and Du Pont managed to post advances at one time.

Except for a minor loss in International Nickel, Canadian shares showed little variation. Dominion Oil was under moderate pressure in the late market.

Strangers in District Couldn't Tell Miss Where to Find Deer

The scenery was beautiful and those two lovers of things given to this weary world by Mother Nature, President Howard Clarke and Secretary Orland Pinkston, of the Belleville Rotary Club, were enjoying it to their hearts content.

Travelling through the breath-taking beauty that belongs alone to the Algonquin Park, the two travellers, Ken Spencerville and Maitland all had heavy 45-minute rains.

Peterborough reported freakish storms that gave some parts of the county heavy rain, mainly in the south, but Peterborough City itself missed all but light showers.

Rainfall in the Sudbury district was worth $1 an acre, agricultural representative Romeo Leroux of Chutney said. He expected the district's 4,000 farmers benefited to the extent of $30,000 with the rains that ended a two-week drought.

Rain also checked the fire danger for a while. Polcyet had a one-inch fall of rain.

Toronto, July 29—(CP)— Gene Tunney was in Toronto Friday as the guest of J. P. Bickell, prominent Ontario sportsman. Tunney came here on a business-pleasure trip which will embrace a visit to Porcupine mines in Northern Ontario, and a few fishing excursions. Earlier this week Tunney was guest of Premier Hepburn of Ontario at the Premier's farm home in the St. Thomas district.

NIAGARA FALLS AREA DRENCHED

All Western Ontario Received Good Soaking From All-Night Rain

Niagara Falls, July 26—(CP)—Unofficial returns to fall today in the Niagara Falls area, the rain had totalled a meagre 1.06 of an inch. G. Howard Fisher, a big fruit farmer, said a "wonderful" rain was falling in the Queenston area and it would do a "world of good" for rain hasn't fallen there in 12 days.

T. S. Cooper at Owen Sound said Grey County is getting suffering from drought but "last night's rain will do a world of good and will add thousands of dollars worth of value to all kinds of crops."

The eastern counties got rain, too. Lindsay reported heavy rains in Haliburton County saved extensive timber limits from destruction. Brockville completely missed rain that passed within five miles of it to the north and south. Lord's Mill, Spencerville and Maitland all had heavy 45-minute rains.

Peterborough reported freakish storms that gave some parts of the county heavy rain, mainly in the south, but Peterborough City itself missed all but light showers.

Rainfall in the Sudbury district was worth $1 an acre, agricultural representative Romeo Leroux of Chutney said. He expected the district's 4,000 farmers benefited to the extent of $30,000 with the rains that ended a two-week drought.

Rain also checked the fire danger for a while. Polcyet had a one-inch fall of rain.

BOMB USED IN FILMING BLOWS HOLE IN GERMAN WARSHIP

Wilmsenede, Germany, July 29— (AP)—A bomb, exploded for theatrical effect during the filming of a historical film, tore a hole in the 2,000-ton German warship Reliefe Thursday in the Baltic Sea, injuring Emil Jannings and a group of other Nazi actors.

Units of the German navy were co-operating with a Jannings company in producing a film recounting the story of the Koenigin Luise, famed German ship which ran a blockade to mine the mouth of the Thames river in August, 1914.

Jannings and Werner Kraus, two of Germany's topflight actors, and the rest of the company were removed by lifeboats from other ships.

Thaw Melts Drifts Of N. Z. Blizzard

Auckland, N.Z., July 29 (CP Cable)—Thaw today relieved New Zealand of the worst blizzard in 30 years.

No loss of life was reported, but no word has been received from the scores of Public Works employees in the Banks Peninsula where the worst storm within memory of settlers caused severe losses among livestock and 20-foot drifts isolated settlers.

University students packed provisions and set out to relieve the Waiaua Hospital. Much historical interest was aroused when, the barge belonging to the late Captain Scott, Antarctic hero, was taken from the Lyttelton mole and used to carry supplies to the staffs of isolated meteor stations.

NAZI PAPERS CHARGE BRITISH PROPAGANDA

Berlin, July 29 (C-Havas)—German newspapers today charged today that Britain is polishing up its 1914 atrocity propaganda.

The newspapers, commenting on Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare's statement in the House that Britain has prepared the skeleton of an information ministry, were categorical in the charges.

"The old stuff all get" is going to be written again, according to the Berliner Zeitung.

ANOTHER PARALYSIS CASE REPORTED AT SARNIA

Sarnia, Ont., July 29 (CP)—Another case of infantile paralysis was reported here today but the situation generally seemed improved. The last victim is Robert McDonald, 16, who was placed in an iron lung.

The condition of 10-year-old Pauline Hayward who had been in the lung was improved to such an extent authorities were able to take her to London for further treatment.

WINNING ARTISTS TO ASSIST BAND

Featured by the appearance of Ralph Clapp, clarinet virtuoso and his Moorman, cornetist, two of its prizewinners at the recent Waterloo Music Festival, the Belleville Municipal Band will offer another of its popular Tuesday night summer concerts next week.

A variable program of popular and classical numbers has been arranged by Bandmaster Fred Jobson.

Woman Fisherman Second

Lindsay, Ont., July 29—(CP)— Mrs. Jack Murphy placed second in the casting contest staged by an Anglers' Association here. She was 17 points ahead of her nearest rival.

SPEND NIGHT IN OPEN

Sturgeon Falls, Ont., July 30— Three children missing since they left their home here early yesterday on a berry-picking trip, were found today by another member of the family after a search was organized by police. All three children were reported not to have suffered any ill effects from spending the night in the open.

The children, named Vachon, were aged five, seven and nine. They were located in the bushland district, 3 1-2 miles north of Sturgeon Falls.

Butter Again Climbs to Higher Price Level

Toronto, July 29—Butter prices took another step upward while the cheese and eggs stood firm on the Toronto egg, produce market, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported today. Trading showed little activity throughout the day.

Although egg receipts were still light, offerings were not as scarce as they have been during the past week. Demand fell off, chiefly due to the heat spell, but prices remained firm on a quiet market.

According to a Department report, "the egg market has been firm all week. With receipts approximating a shortage, there was some brisk trading between local dealers. An upward revision in prices was recorded, amounting to from 2c to 3c a dozen. The market was steady at the close of the week, due to prices being in line with Montreal quotations."

Montreal Eggs Steady.

Montreal, July 29.—Egg and butter prices ruled unchanged on open produce markets, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. N.B., Maine and P.E.I. potatoes were again in heavy supply and prices dropped about five cents. Cheese offerings firmed slightly.

Creamery, butter prints to retailers were unchanged, 31¾-32 cents a pound and solids for 22-23½ cents. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21¾. Receipts: Nine boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 12½. Quebec white was quoted at 11¼A, and colored at 11½A. Receipts: 1,649 boxes.

Graded egg shipments used free cases sold at 27-28 cents a dozen for A-large, 25½-26 for A-medium, 18-19 for B-large, 15 for C. Receipts: 746 cases.

Potatoes—N. B. and Maine No. 1 Mountains 75's $1.25-$1.30; P.E.I. No. 1 Mountains 75's $1.25-$1.35; Quebec new crop No. 1 75's 70c-80c; Quebec new crop No. 2 75's 60c-70c.

Reasons Beyond Control of Farmer

Occasionally I am obliged to make the following notation on a manifest in the place of grade "died in transit".

There are several reasons why hogs die in transit and the majority of them are beyond the control of the farmer. There is however one cause of death that is a direct result from excessive feeding before the hogs leave the farm.

Hogs are not accustomed to travelling by truck or by rail and like humans experiencing their first ride they become sick. If a hog becomes sick with an excessive amount of feed in his stomach the result is usually fatal.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of July 28, 1939, are as follows:

"OOMPH GIRL" OF TENNIS COURTS

"New "oomph girl" of the tennis courts is what they're calling Alice Marble, ABOVE, Uncle Sam's best feminine racquet-swinger, seen as she returned from Europe after her conquest at Wimbledon'... where she won the women's singles crown, and comprised half the teams that captured the women's doubles and mixed doubles. She will defend the American championship she won last year in September. Alice has what the scribes and fans like in their feminine athlete, ability combined with pulchritude.

Woolwich Arsenal Heavily Guarded As Precaution

Britain's Greatest Ordnance Factory and Storehouse Protected from Possible Bombing Attempts by I.R.A. Terrorists

GUARDED BY INFANTRY

Immense Store of War Materials Kept at Arsenal 40 Miles from City of London — War Office Takes Measures for Unusual Protection

London, July 31 (CP)—The War Office has thrown a heavy infantry guard around Woolwich arsenal, great Britain's largest ordnance factory, as a precaution against possible bombing attempts by members of the illegal Irish Republican Army.

An immense store of war materials is kept at the arsenal, about ten miles from London.

Father Coughlin Is Threatened 'By Labor Day'

Detroit, July 31 (AP)—Rev. Charles Coughlin, declaring the receipt of letters threatening his life, yesterday challenged the senders to "carry out your threats, if you dare".

The priest, broadcasting his weekly broadcast, said within the last two weeks he had received three letters "setting Labor Day as the deadline for the threats to be fulfilled.

He added he had been receiving threats "for thirteen years".

In his address he said: "I am not important, nor is this battle between individuals. Carry out your threats—if you dare, but recognize that this contest is between God and anti-God, between the principles of Americanism and the principles of Socialism".

Father Coughlin said the letters, all anonymous, had been turned over to postal inspectors.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, July 31 (AP)—Showers have been general from the lower lake region eastward to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, while the weather over the week-end has been fair and warm in the Prairie Provinces. Pressure is high from Manitoba northward to the Arctic and over the southeast portion of the United States, and relatively low from the Ottawa valley northeastward to Hudson Straits and over Alberta.

Lake Superior—Fair and a little cooler tonight and Tuesday with moderate northeast winds.

Manitoba—Moderate to fresh east and southeast winds, fair and moderately warm. Tuesday, partly cloudy and warm with scattered thunderstorms.

Saskatchewan—Partly cloudy and warm with scattered thunderstorms. Tuesday, partly cloudy and becoming a little cooler; probably scattered thunderstorms over east portion.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Water-vapor and clouds! Water-vapor, the raw material of clouds, varies greatly in its distribution both horizontally and vertically, some parts having very moist and others very dry. It diminishes very rapidly with elevation being at 5,000 feet elevation one-half, at 3 miles one-fifth, and at 6 miles only one-thirtieth of the amount at the surface. This rapid reduction in amount with height is due to continually lower temperatures with increasing height. The height of the highest clouds, the thin, hair-like cirrus, varies from about 27,000 feet at high latitudes to 350,000 feet at low latitudes during the summer, and are somewhat lower in winter.

70 SCHOOLBOYS FROM CANADA SEE AIR STATION

Are Allowed to Run All Over Hendon R. A. F. Station for 7 Hours

'SEE FOR YOURSELF'

London, July 31—(CP)—Seventy students from public and private schools in Canada have been allowed to make a seven-hour probe of Great Britain's airpower secrets at the Hendon Royal Air Force Station, near here.

The Air ministry heard that the boys were here, invited them to "come and see for yourself", allowed them to run all over the place, fed them on airmen's "grub" and almost recruited the bunch.

Most of the youngsters from secondary schools are touring Europe under the direction of Dr. G. Hilton Armstrong, Toronto, some are being led by D. M. Dewar, of Appleby College, Oakville, while the third section is a cricket team of private school students touring England in charge of J. C. Ashburner, Ridley College, St. Catharines.

Two of the many Canadian flyers in the Royal Air Force conducted the party through the huge hangars, workshops, parachute rooms and barracks of the airdrome. They were flying officer D. J. McKenzie, Toronto, and flying officer Ray, Vancouver Island, and Flying Officer Hugh Dunlevie, of Calgary, who is doing light duty at Hendon while convalescing from injuries he received in a crash in Iraq a few months ago.

The boys swarmed all over the huge Bombay and battle bombers, had dinner and spanners for busy mechanics in the workshops, discussed air problems with Squadron-Leader R. S. B. Yule, second in command of the station, and gasped at the colorful formation drill by some of Britain's 450-miles an hour Hurricane fighters.

Park Pies and Gooseberry Pie

They demolished twenty-two pork pies and a hundredweight of gooseberry pie in the officers' canteen.

Among the boys said home they will leave behind L. G. Langley, of Toronto, who is taking a course to play cricket and is staying to learn about flying. He is applying for a short service commission in the R. A. F. and, if accepted, will stay here for six or four years.

15,000 JAPANESE ACCUSE BRITAIN OF BREAKING PACT

Storm British Embassy at Tokyo as Report Spread Negotiations Deadlocked

WANT CHINESE MONEY

Japanese Delegates Ask Britain to Surrender $3,880,000

Tokyo, July 31 — (AP) — Fifteen thousand Japanese gathered in front of the British Embassy today after two meetings in which speakers accused Great Britain of refusing to live up to the spirit of the agreement on Japanese rights-of-way in occupied portions of China.

The demonstration, similar to that put on by a much larger crowd July 14 on the eve of the Arita-Craigie conference to settle the Japanese deadlock, followed weekend reports that the negotiators were deadlocked anew.

Uniformed quarters in London expressed fear the talks, in which Japan already had acknowledged "special requirements" for Japanese interests in the under Japanese control in China, were headed for a breakdown.)

Refugees to Give Up

The conference reached a deadlock Saturday on Japanese insistence that Britain agree to the surrender of $3,880,000 Chinese dollars (about $3,880,000) deposited in banks in the British and French concessions at Tientsin—enemy of the central Chinese government for its use against Japan.

HEAVY RAINFALL BREAKS DROUGHT ACROSS PROVINCE

Inclement Weather' Not Conducive to Highway Travel — Three Killed

COOLER WEATHER

By The Canadian Press

A week-end of heavy rainfall did much to relieve the anxiety of Ontario farmers over the fate of their crops with the burden of the drought in many districts also relieved. The usual crop of weekend motoring fatalities to low figures for the inclement weather, but not conducive of highway travel.

Only three persons—two women and a six year old girl—were killed in motoring mishaps, all died Saturday. The province's fourth accidental death was that of 34-year-old Ernest Hopkins, drowned in Lake New Dundee Lake near Kitchener Saturday when a rowboat overturned.

Great Britain's John Citizen Armed For Holiday Forgetting All War Talk

London, July 31—(CP)— Great Britain's John Citizen went ahead today with his summer plans and left political worries to the experts, they are reached.

Surrounded on all sides by intense activity to bring Britain's armaments to unprecedented peacetime heights as the end of August or September international "danger period," drew closer, Bank Holiday Jollies did their bit, arranged vacations and left the talking to others.

The King and Queen prepared for their Canadian vacation at Buckingham Palace; families have at least one member in the regular services; and the Territorials or many reserves such as the 12,000 London Transport men called up today to man 130 ships of the reserve fleet.

But the average home was unruffled. Instead of war talk there was keener interest, for instance, in the radio program of Gracie Fields, England's favorite musical comedy star who has just recovered from a serious illness.

Let Fuehrer Take Care of Self

Despite the anxieties of many observers over the events of the next two months, the attitude of crowds on subways and buses—even of those whose brand new uniforms marked them as newly mustered territorials or conscripts—was to let the fuehrer take care of itself.

"War? We'll take care about that when it comes," or "we've got a navy and an air force haven't we? We're not just scrapping about it. These were the usual replies to questions.

Britain's fighting fleet—vessels withdrawn from active service for maintenance by newer craft—will remain on emergency footing through August and September.

Retired officers, non-commissioned officers and seamen began reporting today to the big three naval bases, Portsmouth, Chatham and Devonport. With 3,000 reservists mobilized since last May the roster of reservists on active duty will be increased to 14,000.

Home Fleet Sails

The home fleet sailed yesterday for a cruise preparatory to manoeuvres in the Channel fleet late in August—at a time when Germany will be staging her air and army exercises and Italy will be holding fleet and air force manoeuvres.

Saturday the Royal Air Force will begin manoeuvres to include a blackout of London. Other of Britain's services are bringing their training to a peak.

MAN SOUGHT ON ABDUCTION CHARGE

A province-wide search is now in progress for Arthur Carter Agnew, above, for whose arrest a warrant has been issued, charging him with abduction of 12-year-old George Connor of Toronto, RIGHT. Connor disappeared on July 8 and police have received information that he was seen swimming with Agnew Armstrong.

3 COWS, CALF HORSE KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Ivanhoe and Roslin Section Area of Violent Storm

FREAK LIGHTNING

Bolt Follows Line of Sheeting Nails and Finally Kills Calf

Freakish lightning wreaked havoc in the middle sections of the county on Saturday when one of the severest electrical storms of the year, swept in from the west, killing three cows, a horse and a calf, destroyed a barn and its contents, damaged two others severely and struck two houses.

The heaviest loss of the storm was suffered by Donald Cain, West Huntsville farmer, when his barn, entire hay and grain crop and a sheep pen destroyed by flames caused by a lightning bolt. Loss was estimated at $1,200.

Water Seeped Out of Puddles

Neighbors, scooping water out of puddles that dug in the grain nearby, waged a successful fight against flames when a bolt struck the barn of John Douglas, East Ivanhoe. The bolt entered the barn through the roof and ignited a large mow of hay. Water carried with will building the flames before structure entered the building through a door, followed cow stanchions and a line of sheep pens. Other live stock were in pasture. The lightning did not ignite the building.

Sideboard in Flames

A sideboard in the kitchen of William McCabe, near Bonarlaw, broke into flames as a small bolt entered the house. Fortunately the storm was of short duration and the river stood outside the door, and residents were able to extinguish the flames before further damage was done.

THREE INJURED AS CAR HITS TREE

15-Year-Old Boy Has Fractured Pelvis and Sister Broken Arm

Skidding on the wet grass highway one mile east of Belleville on Highway No. 2, an automobile driven by Lorne Vernon Tweedie, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Tweedie, Toronto, turned over and crashed into a tree on the north shoulder of the four-lane highway, injuring the occupants of the car.

Fifteen-year-old Bobbie Shinler, a passenger in the vehicle, sustained a fractured pelvis while Betty Tweedie, 26-year-old daughter of the driver, suffered severe lacerations and a fractured arm. While Mr. Resnick complained of internal injuries. Mrs. Resnick escaped without serious injury. The injured persons were treated at the Belleville General Hospital.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Eggleston investigated and found the newly-oiled highway at the point of accident, in a slippery condition following yesterday's heavy rains. The motor car was badly damaged as it turned over on the loose gravel and crashed into large elm tree.

U. S. Officials Question If Actual Settlement In Antarctic Possible

Washington, July 31—(AP)— Some officials preparing the way for the government's Antarctic exploration believe the United States will have to eat a few of the words about Antarctic claims which Charles Evans Hughes set down when he was Secretary of State.

Discussing a possible United States claim in Wilkes Land in the Antarctic, Mr. Hughes wrote in 1924 that "the discovery" lands under international law, even when coupled with a formal taking of possession does not support a valid claim to sovereignty unless the discovery is followed by the actual settlement of the discovered country."

Study of Official Claims

This opinion, which has since held sway at the State Department, accounts for the lack of official claims to Arctic or Antarctic territory following the explorations of Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Hubert Wilkins, Byrd and Lincoln Ellsworth. Now, as the Byrd Antarctic government expedition prepares to set out for the Atlantic, officials say they are about to make some actual settlement in the Antarctic where previous claims are difficult.

The expedition, leaving in October, will settle in the Antarctic for possibly a year, and undoubtedly will lay claim to hundreds of thousands of square miles of territory. But, the officials contended, "What is the United States going to do after that? Must we keep Americans in the Antarctic for years to come in order to valid claims?

'Occupation' or Settlement

Some would like to create a little from the position assumed by Mr. Hughes, they noted, that substitute occupation—not necessarily continuous and permanent—for his idea of "actual settlement." They would not give up the principle of occupation, because that would be yielding to nations which stake their claims on the sector principle, which is:—

Nations contiguous to the Arctic or Antarctic regions may lay claim to imaginary lines from their borders to the poles, and claim all the land lying within the triangle, whether they discovered it or occupied it or not.

Great Britain, Canada, France, Norway, New Zealand, Australia and Argentine uphold this principle. The United States has not formally believe in the occupation principle.

742 Czech Fliers Join French Force

Paris, July 31 (AP)—France gained 742 trained aviators for her air corps today with the arrival of two groups of former Czecho-Slovak army fliers at Gallic air bases.

The aviators, mostly under thirty years of age, came from Poland where they fled just before their country was dismembered.

Ratepayers of Sidney Twp. Unanimously Approve Fixed Assessment for Shoe Company

Vote Taken Saturday is 295 to 2 in Favor of Township By-law

$20,000 FIXED

Only About One-Third of Those Entitled to Vote Exercised Franchise

Foxboro, July 31 (Special)—With only about one third of the eligible voters exercising their franchises in Saturday's election re municipal money by-law, ratepayers of the Township of Sidney were practically unanimous in granting to the Sata Import and Export Company a ten-year guaranteed fixed assessment on their proposed manufacturing plant south of Frankford.

Only 297 bonafide property holders of the municipality, out of a total eligible voting list of approximately 1,000, considered the measure important enough to warrant casting their ballot, but out of the number there were only two dissenting votes and the fixed assessment by-law passed with the overwhelming majority of 295-2. Thereupon, beginning on January 1, 1940, and continuing for a period of ten years, the Sata company will pay approximately 750 acres of land now under option by the Sata Company will be increased from the present $7,800 to $20,000 and this amount to be applicable only on one manufacturing unit and one community house to be constructed before the end of 1940, and any additional construction work undertaken thereafter to be assessed on the same proportionate basis and also for a period of ten years.

Start This Year

According to the immediate plans of the Sata Company, this Autumn will see a start made on the construction of the first one of eight manufacturing units, one community house and about thirty five roomed bungalows, which will be but a very modest beginning for their ultimate self-contained community.

The C.N.R. tracks will be the eastern boundary of the industrial part of the town from the residential section as will industrial sections of 16.5 chains constructed east of the railway. All manufacturing units will be of identical construction having dimensions of 263 feet in length, 63 feet in width and will be three stories high, and in order to facilitate shipping operations will be built in two rows of four, and with the sides of an 1,800 ft private railway spur line which will be constructed for that purpose. The residential section will be self-contained community will be situated to the west across the railway and the town planning scheme calls for construction in the form of a huge U with the open end facing the east, while the different streets will radiate outward at right angles from this central point.

Chamberlain Tells House He is Not Prepared to Make Statement on Far Eastern Situation

London, July 31 (CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain acknowledged before the House of Commons today that definition of the term "indirect aggression" was the major snag holding up negotiation of the proposed Anglo-French-Russian mutual assistance pact.

He made this disclosure in a foreign affairs debate a short time after he had announced Great Britain and France would send military missions to Moscow—probably this week or next—to discuss the pact with Soviet staff talks.

Mr. Chamberlain said the British mission would be headed by Admiral Sir Reginald Plunkett-Ernle-Erle-Drax.

34 INJURED AS POLICE ATTEMPT TO QUELL RIOT

3,000 Pickets Mass at Gates as Workers Called to "Stop Plant"

TEAR GAS USED

Cleveland, July 31 (AP)—Rioting at the strikebound Fisher Body plant of General Motors Corporation today injured at least 34 persons, while police attempted to put down the demonstration of club wielding, rock slinging pickets with tear gas and streams of water.

Wayne Bonds said as nearly 3,000 pickets massed at gates of the sprawling plant after C.I.O. United Automobile Workers were called to "stop this plant".

Many of those injured were non-striking employees attempting to enter the plant. Some were struck by missiles hurled by pickets, while others were overcome by tear gas and streams of water.

Police Chief George Malowitz said workers had agreed to a truce pending a union committee conference. Captain Joseph Blackwood said at least 200 tear gas shells and bombs were discharged in the course of the rioting, which lasted about an hour.

"Pickets had tear gas shotguns with gas shells which we believe were

Television in Every Home in U. K. Soon Reality Says Board Chairman

Montreal, July 31.—(CP)—Television, with programs received now by sets within 50 or 70 miles of London, soon will be brought into every home in the United Kingdom, according to Sir John Reith, chairman of the Board of Governors of the British Broadcasting Company.

"We are favorably placed for the construction of television sets for public service," Sir Allan said yesterday. "We have not had to face competition in any form, so that we have been able to pool our best brains in developing the science and the art."

Sir Allan arrived here yesterday on a holiday trip. He said plans already are underway to establish a centre for television in Birming-ham, which will be hooked up with the London studios. From then on, it would be nothing to extend the network to every major city.

Sir Allan was enthusiastic about the coronation of the King and the King and Queen from their visit to Canada. "The Queen, for Lancaster; varied programme. Loud speaker. (Ladies bring refreshments.) j31-a2-3

FALLS 35 FEET INTO TREE

Caledonia, Ont., July 31 (CP)— A soft maple tree will live long in the memory of 11-year-old Peggy Banks. She fell 35 feet from a back verandah early today and escaped with minor injuries when she fell into the tree. She was believed to have been resting in a deep sag and climbed over the railing.

Doctors could find only a small cut on the girl's forehead and consider luckiest they decided to take the girl to hospital at Hamilton for a complete X-ray check up.

Peggy's was the second narrow escape in the family's recent experiences. Her three-year-old brother was knocked down by an automobile a short time ago while crossing the street and he escaped uninjured.

REPORTED AMERICAN WOMAN INTERNED

Paris, July 31 (AP)—The United States Embassy here disclosed today it had asked the Embassy in Berlin to investigate reports that a young American woman has been interned in a Nazi concentration camp at Dachau, Germany.

The Embassy based its inquiry on the story of a German, Frans Lem, who said the girl, Miss Dorothea Dessauer, is behind barbed wire. American wife whom he said was the former Lili Harriere, born at New Orleans La., April 4, 1914.

London, July 31 (CP)—The King today received Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, presumably to hear a report on the international situation prior to the Royal family's departure tonight for an 11-week vacation in Balmoral, Scotland.

ARMED POSSEMEN SURROUND BARN

Eccentric Retired Farmer Barricades Self After Killing Police Chief

Cynthiana, Ky., July 31—(AP)— Four shots, fired at short intervals in the darkness early today brought a concentration of armed possemen today about the home of Charles Allen, 70, eccentric retired farmer an expert marksman, accused of shooting to death Cynthiana's police chief.

Lieutenant of their quarry's reputed prowess with a rifle, officers surrounded Allen's barn and outbreak to investigate the shots and determine whether the fugitive had escaped.

The Allen place, located near the Harrison County line, centered Kentucky town of 5,000, has been under surveillance since a heavily armed and all-night siege of his barn with gunfire and clouded policemen and sheriff's deputies to make his escape early yesterday.

Six officers and bystanders were wounded, apparently none dangerously.

Sheriff Victor Ross ordered posse members to "shoot to kill" if they sighted the fugitive. Police Chief George Dickey, 77, was shot to death in front of the county jail late Saturday night. He had gone there in response to neighbors' complaints that Allen had enticed a girl into the barn.

City and District News

GREENER PASTURES TO HELP MILK FLOW

Pastures turned greener in the district almost overnight, following the heavy Sunday rain, and the milk production in the district is expected to show an immediate rise, according to a survey of local dairy officials, who last week reported a decline in milk production which was estimated to have fallen off one third in some sections. Though no actual scarcity or threatened famine of milk was reported, the decline had resulted in reduced cheese make in some of the factories.

FISH ARE HERE PICTURE PROVE IT

Three United States visitors will carry back with them from the district pictures of the largest fish they didn't catch—though their friends back home will probably not be advised of the latter fact.

On Saturday the tourists called at Kiser's warehouse at Consecon Point, made a careful survey of the stocks of lake trout, and after admiring the largest and finest of the fish in storage, took turns in photographing each other while holding the large catch.

LAKE TROUT GONE INTO DEEP HIDING

Lake trout fishing in North Hastings has been decidedly poor, and catches of any size or weight have been reported, according to word of local residents who journeyed north for the fishing over the week-end. A few trout are being caught, according to lake dwellers, but the fish have apparently gone to deep water due to the recent unusual heat of the north, and deep trolling has been necessary.

TAME BLACK SNAKE FANNANDIGES ANGLERS

A black snake of near record size, of unusual tameness and with a decided preference for newly caught fish while it did not allow to catch for itself was reported today by a local fishing party which journeyed down the bay on Sunday. Members of the party encountered the reptile in Bay anxiously themselves catching perch and throwing the wriggling fish to the water. Each time it neared but a few feet from the boat, gulping down the perch as fast as caught.

RECORD SIZE SPIDER CAUGHT AFTER RAIN

Resembling in appearance a larger than usual tarantula, a spider of record size, measuring almost a foot limb in the lower section of the city on Sunday afternoon was exhibited by Wilfred Burke who equipped with large fangs and ruby red eyes. It was referred to the local Dominion Entomological Bureau for classification.

ATLANTIC SAILINGS JUST ABOUT NORMAL

"Business has been about normal. There was a slight increase in tickets to overseas points following the visit of the King and Queen here, but this has gone almost entirely into than normal business," reported K. M. Dyson, manager of the downtown ticket office of the Canadian National Railways.

"Toronto reports fairly heavy business in steamship tickets lately, but that rush has not been extended to Belleville. We have been finding business just about as usual."

SKUNK IS GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN

Motorists using the bay bridge road over the week-end made sharp detours just north of the first span of the bridge. A large skunk, which became a traffic casualty early Saturday morning occupied the centre of the highway, while a heavy aroma saturated the surrounding air.

National Grocers' Employees, Friends Hold Enjoyable Picnic

Employees of the National Grocers and their friends enjoyed a gala day at Cedar Dale yesterday when they held their annual picnic. About seventy-five were present and motored to Cedar Dale in fine style for the well planned outing. The beach and water were much enjoyed by many swimmers while the interesting program of sports events arang, ed by the committee in charge, resulted in most enthusiastically by the guests.

Carloads of the picnickers arrived at the grounds about noon and a delicious picnic dinner served in one-thirty the program of sports events began under the efficient management of the picnic committee, Everett Liddle, Miss Hackborn, Cecil Bowen, Harry Cordon, Harry Kemp, Jim Walmsley, Ed. Harp, George Mountain, Freddie MacDonnell, with Mr. Jim Smith as Master of Ceremonies, and Miss Mercedes Kelly as clerk of the course. There was fun for everyone from the tiniest tots up with plenty of variety in the races so that all might be included. In addition to the various races there were peanut scramble, gum and toffee scrambles.

After a very satisfying supper there was a ball game. With the score tied at 20-20 the game was called on account of darkness.

The results of the sports events are as follows:

Tiny Tots' Race—1st Denton Hackborn, 2nd Teddy MacDonnell; Girls' race 5 to 8—1st Betty Shepard (only girl participating); Boys' race 5 to 8—1st Jack Kemp, 2nd Blake Scott; Girls' Race 9 to 13—1st Evelyn Reid, 2nd Helen Hackborn; 3rd Lois Liddle; Boys' Race 9 to 13—1st Bruce Kemp; 2nd Bill Shepard; Misses' Novelty Contest—1st Bernice Cordon; 2nd Lois Liddle; Young Ladies' Race—1a Winnifred Sandy, 2nd Bernice Cordon; Office Girls' Novelty Race—1st Mrs. F. Shepard, presented with, having the largest family (eight); Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Shepard were nearest to the lucky spot.

BUT NOT IN DITCH

Charlotte, N.C. July 31 (AP)—A crowd gathered at the scene of a bad automobile wreck here and hampered police in their rescue work. A car was found overturned at the ditch kept saying, "hey up there, lemme out." And here, to the astonishment of the crowd got out of the way and tried to find out where the voice was coming from. By the time the injured had been put in ambulances, the light finally

PARCHED LANDS BENEFIT BY RAINS

Market Gardeners and Farmers Hail Sunday's Rain as Saver Crops

Parched lands and burned pastures of the section took on new life and greenness today and the threat of total loss in many areas was apparently ended by the refreshing shower of rain early Sunday morning, a rain that penetrated deeply into the thirsty ground, but one that has not as yet been sufficient to give the land all the moisture needed, according to local offices of the Dominion Department of Agriculture this morning.

Commencing before day break the rains on Sunday descended steadily, unaccompanied by the usual electrical display, which has been expected following the extended drought of weeks, but with the northern section of the county the red threat of fire in tinder-like brushland and woods was apparently ended by the downfall, and through the south greener pastures reflected new promise of immediate upturn in milk production and cheesemaking.

Market gardeners of the district hailed the rainfall as the saviour of thousands of dollars worth of roots and other vegetable which had been suffering greatly from the dryness; berry growers were more optimistic in their outlook today, while orchardists of the area counted the rain a blessing for their crops. Livestock men who had been driving their animals to the bay morning and evening over long distances, hoarded the first trickle of water into dry wells.

Officially precipitation at the city water works plant was registered as 0.31 inches on the rain gauge, a downfall which in ordinary years would be regarded as normal summer shower. But to the parched and sun-dried section upon which rain has fallen but lightly so far this season, the moisture was magnified by its apparent need.

Holloway Farmer In Possession of Large Meteorite

With falling meteors in various parts of the country "making" metropolitan newspaper headlines, and creating more or less interest in these phenomena of the heavens, Frank Hagerman, farmer, residing near Halloway, points with pride to a ten-year-old or older specimen that at present forms a garden adornment in front of his home.

Discovered approximately ten years ago in a field on his farm the fused oval-shaped stone, that resembles a giant clinker, is chocolate brown in color, and is pitted with hundreds of small holes. Slight depressions are noticeable on its surface.

Apparently the flaming meteor struck a large boulder, for about its top third is a shelf of marble-like rock, that protrudes roughly three inches outward. The rock and meteor-like body are fused together giving the impression the while hot substance melted the stone, the two flowing into each during the cooling process.

Estimate weight of the meteor is five hundred pounds. It is roughly four feet in length, three feet wide and about three feet in height.

Mr. Hagerman noticed the strange-looking stone while cultivating a field some ten years ago. He discovered it near a fence bottom on his farm in the midst of a large pile of boulders or "hardheads."

He brought it to the house and placed it on his front lawn where it has been the pleasure of the eyes of a large number of curious visitors down through the years.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH EARLE SMITH

Joseph Earle Smith, late residence 264 Annis Street, Oshawa, and a former resident of Belleville, died in the Belleville General Hospital shortly before noon on Saturday, July 30th. He arrived in this city early the same morning to visit relatives and shortly after arrival he was taken with a heart seizure and passed away in the hospital soon after admission.

The late Joseph Earle Smith, who was in his 64th year, was born in Belleville, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Smith. For some years he resided in Belleville and of late years he had made his home in Oshawa.

In religion he was a member of the United Church in Oshawa and attended Simcoe Street United Church when he resided in Belleville. Old friends here will regret to learn of his sudden passing.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Edith Florence Talmadge; four daughters, Hazel, Winnifred and Sylvia, all at home, and Mrs. W. Richards, Oshawa; four sons, Clifford, Howard, at home, Earle Asa, at home; four brothers, Mr. Percy Smith, Buffalo, N. Y., Mr. Ray Smith, Toronto; Mr. Don Smith, Kirkland Lake, and Mr. Croft Smith, of Oshawa.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon at two o'clock from the Rural Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. Interment was made in Belleville Cemetery.

MRS. LESLIE A. BROAD (Bancroft)

After a brief illness Mrs. Leslie Allan Broad, late residence in Bancroft, Ont., passed away in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday, July 29th.

The late Mrs. Broad, who was in her 39th year, was born in Bancroft and had resided there nearly all her life. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Lucinda Irene Hall, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall, Bancroft. She was a member of the United Church in Bancroft and took an active part in church work, being a valued member of the choir, the Woman's Auxiliary and Mrs. Earl Peoples Association. Her passing has brought sincere regret to many friends.

Surviving her besides her husband are her husband, Mr. Leslie A. Broad; one son, Eugene Hall Broad, age 8 years; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Delyea; two sisters, Mrs. George Thornhill and Mrs. Ivan Watson, and one brother, Mr. Fred Delyea, all of Bancroft.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon at Bancroft.

MRS. JESSE TICE (Tweed)

Stirling, July 31 (Special)—The death occurred on Friday, July 28th, at the family residence, Tweed, of Jesse Tice, former citizen of Stirling, who passed away after a lingering illness. Deceased, who was the late Mrs. Tice who was in her 68th year, was born in Rawdon Township the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Darius Green, Rawdon Township. For many years she lived on their farm in Rawdon Township, where she was active in the field of agriculture, Mrs. Tice along with her husband and only child predeceased her. She was a faithful member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Tweed, taking an active part in all the women's organizations.

The funeral service was conducted on Sunday afternoon at the home of Rev. H. Earl Hicks, B.A., assisted by Rev. W. H. V. Walker of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Basing his thought on John 4-13, Mr. Walker spoke comfort to the bereaved family and friends gathered to the fine example of true Christianity that was manifested during the life of the departed during the service. Hymns dearly loved by her were used during the service, and ordered by Arthur Duncan, "Still, Still With Thee."

Surviving are her husband, Mr. Jesse Tice, Trenton, one daughter, Mrs. Ernest Hicks, Tweed, and one son, Trenton.

Pallbearers were Messrs. F. N. McKee, J. S. Morton, Clinton McGee, G. H. Lucey, C. F. Linn, Clifford Cook. Interment was made in the Stirling cemetery.

MRS. LOTTIE MAUDE PRESTON (Bridge)

Stirling, July 31 (Special)—After an illness of only two weeks' duration there passed away at her home in Stirling, Mrs. Lottie Maude Preston wife of Mr. John Preston, on Friday, July 28th. Deceased, who was in her fifty-first year, was born in Rawdon Township, the daughter of Mr. James Dunkley and the late Mrs. James Dunkley, who predeceased her some years ago. She resided in Rawdon Township until some thirty years ago when along with his family she moved to Stirling. In religion she attended the church of England.

The funeral service was conducted by Rural Dean Gillis of Marmora, in the absence of Rev. A. G. Dog-

RAIN AT LAST

Rain has at last fallen on the parched lots of the city, on the common acreages which have been a source of anxiety to residents in the vicinity of these open spaces, because of the rapidity with which grass fires spread (and there were enough of these grass fires on vacant land to more than justify the fears), and on the farmlands near Belleville. The immediate district about Belleville had escaped rain for many weeks, but outlying centres and districts had had rain, so that Sunday morning's downpour was one of the most welcome of rains hereabouts as elsewhere.

Rains have been called million dollar rains, but they might as well and more truthfully be called multi-million dollar rains for every single inhabitant receives benefit, though in some few cases recently damage was done at points at a distance where fields were flooded and soil washed out. By providential means the rain which fell on this district was part of a great general rain which fell across the province Western Ontario receiving its share on Saturday, many hours before it fell in the dreary region to the eastward in Eastern Ontario. At the same time this storm was not violent and had no electrical disturbances accompanying it for which every person was grateful.

The common things are the most important things. Rain is more precious than gold, silver or diamonds. Rain by one of the laws of nature has made vegetable and animal and human life possible on this planet. It is one of the many fine-adjusted conditions necessary for life. Just last week the world has been talking of Mars and the question was put to it by the radio, we do not know whether there is rain on Mars or whether a form of life could be possible on Mars or any other planet without rain. Science realizes that if there were life and no rain on one or more of the "stars," life would be vastly different from what life is on earth.

But life on this earth is what it is and what it will be because of beneficient conditions, rain, atmospheric pressure, various physical forces, chemicals and other factors and conditions, which man in general is brought in contact with. Rain is the one with which man is perhaps most familiar. He has learned to use it. Nature taught him lessons in agriculture as the race grew up and the modern farmer can feed a hungry world.

FOODS IN SUMMER

The question of food poisoning is noted by the Sarnia Canadian Observer, because it is not an uncommon condition in the summer season. "Food is exposed to great change of temperature, which is one of the factors that may cause it to be unfit for consumption. There are however, many different kinds of food poisoning, some of which might prove dangerous."

"Consumption of food that is tainted is likely to make ill the individual who eats it. Medical authorities say that extra care ought to be taken during summer concerning the same food that is clean and fresh. Canned meat or fruits that show signs of fermentation ought to be avoided. In fact, any food that is showing signs of having been kept too long in a temperature that will promote fermentation ought not to be eaten. There is little doubt that many persons suffer attacks of the poisoning that results from tasting fermented food in summer and do not realize the cause of the indisposition. They have stomach ache and other symptoms that soon disappear but sometimes such attacks are sufficiently severe to merit medical attention. Extreme care and cleanliness with regard to handling food at all times, but during the hot season especially, are very necessary. Screens on windows to keep out the flies, adequate refrigeration to ensure that food and drinks are maintained at a safe temperature, careful cleaning of all dishes and utensils associated with the handling of food will contribute to immunity from food poisoning."

In this age when there is so much food eaten in so many forms it is well to be careful. The whole world furnishes from every clime food of every other clime as well as for the inhabitants of the same clime. So great an array of different kinds of food has never been assembled before any time in world in history. This is due to the fact that modern science, particularly through refrigeration and canning and transportation, makes it easy to keep food in a good condition. Still, as the Sarnia Canadian Observer points out, there remains the duty upon those who have the handling of food and preparation of the meals of seeing that those conditions are maintained which preserve food fresh or make delivery of fresh food possible at all times.

MIDSUMMER WALK

Swaying daisies in the grass
Demurely lift their heads and smile
As I pass.

The rustling boughs of a maple
Cast blessed shade on this sun-washed way
To welcome me.

Far off in the steady blue of the sky
A fleecy cloud, like a milk-white sail,
Floats idly by.

A phoebe calls from a distant limb;
A robin trills a musical note
To answer him.

And in a field of fragrant hay
Bronzed men toil gladly in the sun
All through the day.

This road is old and quite apart;
It lingers . . . . far from traffic's tide
Or busy mart.

Here warring thoughts and turmoil cease;
Kind Nature spreads her healing balm,
And all is peace.

TORONTO GLOBE EDITOR, in the coolness of his ornate air-conditioned office, turns to the rural exchanges for inspiration and finds it is that interesting, well-edited weekly, The Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville, in which Newcastle correspondent reports: "And wherever we went we saw lots of people, all at peace with the world and one another. . . On Saturday evening we joined the crowds at Newcastle doing their weekly shopping and innocent gossiping, and saw Scott Pollard cutting up and parcelling meat at Fisher's in succession to Mr. Robert Duck, Sr., who is taking time off to enjoy retirement." The Newcastle correspondent, as noted by the Globe, records a meeting of the Horticultural Society, preparations for a large family reunion, girls softball game, band concert, etc. "This is not an unusual picture," says the Globe, "it may be seen in any part of older Canada where people are lifelong acquaintances. There is news in all their doings but it is news of the calmer features of life. 'Small town stuff,' the cynics may say. So it is, and that's what makes it so welcome. Just a neighborly interest by the people in one another."

FROM VAL D'OR TO TIMMINS about $700,000 is going into school buildings this summer, according to a news-letter issued by the Montreal Chamber of Mines. Ten schools are being built this year in this mining region, while in other mining areas schools are being extended. Ontario mining camps seem to have a promise of permanence, or at least indications of long life lacking in other provinces and countries, as is indicated by the investment of such public utilities. At Kirkland which lends color to the report that $25,000 was paid for a desirable business lot in one of Ontario's flourishing mining towns, after gospels had reported favorably on the indicated long life of the mines which provide prosperity for the community. Guarding Skies Over Britain

Britain's mainstay in the way of anti-aircraft guns at the moment is the 3.7. But a vigorous programme is, it demands a crew of nine. This mighty piece of mobile mechanism, which takes only a minute or two to set up in "action" position, requires something over ten tons. In one minute it can fire a dozen shells—twenty-pounders. And in that time one of those shells takes to get up to ten thousand feet is eight seconds. Only eight seconds! An amazingly swift passage. But an aeroplane in a hurry can travel quite a distance in that time. A shell aimed directly at an aeroplane would be, therefore, arrive in time to hit the target. The guns must be aimed where else at the moment of the shell's bursting.

The shell has got to be sent, not where the plane is at the moment of firing, but where that plane will be when the shell actually arrives. The aeroplane, large target, there, will be fired at directly. The gunner's job is to place his shell in that part of the heavens and so to make explosive contact with the speedy target.

Several things have to be allowed for, including direction and force of the wind, in working out complicated calculations before the gun is fired. And as the aeroplane pilot will be doing its best to get somewhere between the shell and him whatever for contemplative headscratching among the gun-crew they've got seconds only to "fix" that target, and without any margin of error whatsoever for the shell that enters a most astonishing mechanical brain.

Before the moment of firing is reached quite a lot of other things have had to happen. You don't get after your sir target on spec. Without its warning eyes and ears in even of the 3.7-inch type, would be pretty wild shots. Something else—rather than the natural eyes and ears of the human gun crew is demanded. First of all, news of the attack that is going to arrive must be assured in time to allow of the defensive guns being set up in suitable positions. Further, it isn't sufficient to know merely that hostile planes are somewhere in the neighborhood. They've got to be heard long before their approach is audible to the human ear. So mechanical "ears" are pushed into play. A remarkable trumpets spaced four feet apart, connected by tubes, receive sound locaters pick up otherwise inaudible sounds and magnify them and, incidentally, the revealed "note" fixes the make of aero engine responsible for the sounds.

One of these grouped trumpet-ears is the size of a house. One looks after the "ear" which is listening in the vertical direction, and one deals with the "ears" which is groping from left to right. Their job is to help the gunners to get the correct bearing of the target. Height is another matter, and, incidentally, the revealed "note" fixes the make of aero engine responsible for the sounds.

The investigations of Dr. Hoix and others showed that these changes in the rate and rhythm of the heart disappeared after the tonsils were removed. These and numerous instances of the heart occurred in about half the cases of tonsillitis due to streptococcal infection. The heart and the nerves controlling the heart are linked.

While it is not recommended that every patient with tonsillitis should undergo the electrocardiograph test, it is emphasized that physicians should be especially careful during the first few days after the disappearance of tonsillitis. Rest during this period is essential and may be sufficient to prevent chronic heart disease.

Dr. Holix recommends that cases of chronic tonsillitis be permanently removed whenever it is possible. Where electrocardiograph tests and clinical findings show heart disturbances, the tonsils should be removed.

REAL BASEBALL

Baseball is a game played on a hot afternoon under the watchful eyes of indifferent umpires. A game played at night under the lights of a baseball park is not baseball. It is something else. The specialist may be playing the big league parks, day or night, but baseball, the game of the people, true genuine baseball, in the opinion of many is the game played in the back lots, with a home team and the visitors a game attended by the entire population and a game which enforces a public holiday because the stores are deserted anyway. That is baseball—Halifax Chronicle.

When Gentlemen Dress for Bed

The shops are becoming conscious of a revolt among males against pyjamas, pants, trousers or, breeches. These garments are seldom the height of comfort and in hot weather they irk.

What is the alternative? The old-fashioned nightshirt suggests itself, but for years it has been an outcast, something to be mentioned in a whisper. They will come up for a fresh, perhaps even a big, go for the home customer, although size 18 will fit men up to 200 pounds. But the standard nightshirt, its linen like graceful than those of a circus tent, remains one category to wear outside the home. Who dares to don it in hotels, staterooms or liners? Faced with a laundry bill the coward dinniers his two-piece pyjama suits.

For him and for the thousands of other men who have worn pyjamas and pants protestingly new garments are being shown. They are an advance. They resemble an abbreviated bathrobe made of handkerchief cloth, buttons down the front and, illogically, a belt although as if the captivity of belts were not the very thing that the pyjama slave seeks to escape. And some have pockets, not merely the breast pocket to hold a handkerchief but side pockets intended to hold heaven knows what; surely not cigarettes, matches and the practical reading matter! With those pockets filled and a belt knotted about the waist the sleeper would never sleep.

But a start has been made and a form will go along without assistance from the New Deal. No belt, that pocket, smaller larger or none at all; the way is clear to the old freedom without the ugliness of the old nightshirt. Some may accept the garments offered them saying that they are better than nothing. There we came to a stymie, for there are revealed in the making of night attire for men who contemplate neither belt nor slit—Saturday Night—New York Sun.

It All Seems So Confused

The thing is all mixed up, writes the editor of the Chatham News.

Germany has armament, but needs food; and is thinking of invading Romania to relieve economic pressure at home.

Romania has wheat, but she needs armament to defend herself against possible attack by Germany.

So Germany sells armament to Rumania in exchange for wheat; so that Rumania can defend herself against Germany with German-made armament.

It's beyond us—we don't know any sense out of it.

Walk Your Way to Health

Whether it be long or short, a walking tour is the cheapest, healthiest and most interesting of all vacations. While this is widely recognized, it is practised much more commonly in the Old Country and on the Continent than it is in Canada. Here the great distances may save the hiker, or perhaps we think we have, the "drudgery" or "quaint" villages or inns. But walking can be quite as seminal and as fascinating on this side of the water, and you don't have to go to the continent to get glue-fingers to satisfy your curiosity.

You emerge from merely taking a walk from a point to some objective where you will spend the night, therefore a hiking trip can start any noon Saturday and finish Sunday night, or can extend itself, as mine do, to months on the path and road. Other faster and more popular methods of locomotion abound lack the intimacy with nature, things and people that are the compensating reward of those who take to the open road with a packsack. You stop when you want to; go as far as you feel like, and if you should, on occasion, be in a hurry, travel the extra mile or two to reach your destination for the night and then overcome your dinner and bed will be.

Of course, the state of mind those of us who have to think of the physical comforts and who have a particular appetite for the companion without whom a holiday is as ashes. Every one likes the image of a walking tour, but many are tempted away by the thought of the hard work. For it is an undeniable fact about walking—it is more satisfactory done. The first day or two for the shrewd walker all the same as the chain and its weakest link. Then, as one or very few, lifts given to duets; then there is a second wind, a change of gear and of fatigue, of starting hour, of temporary domicile. But the joy of this walking never goes. You will meet many to talk to if you must talk and very few to trouble you, even of many types. Your movements on the road will be free, and the chances that you will be allowed that glorious privilege of being utterly selfish, of doing exactly what your mind wants to, are very good indeed. I suggest that intending-voyageurs get from the library Robert Louis Stevenson's essay on walking. It will enthuse you and add greatly to your fun.

I carry a packsack, I still prefer the old-fashioned variety padded with horse collar material and a small waterproof which folds into the pack. Everything on a walking trip except the clothes you wear is a luxury; you have to carry it all, so keep the weight down. Try not to exceed total weight of thirty pounds. Wear on your feet a pair of walking shoes and a pair of tennis shoes for the evening, and slippers, the pairs of woollen socks, two suits thin wool underwear, one woollen or flannelette shirt and two cotton shirts with soft collars. You should have one sweater and one windbreaker, or ordinary sports coat. Take a pair of grey flannel trousers for the evening, a mackinaw, poloskin or corduroy on the road. I don't like breeches or shorts. Take a pair of pyjamas, belt and slippers. Your toilet articles, a facecloth, pyjamas, bath towel and handkerchiefs complete your packsack. Do not carry an overcoat or waterproof. Wear an old hat.

In the haversack go your toilet articles, a camera, maps and provisions sufficient for one meal, stationery, fountain pen, an extra pair of eye glasses, diary, and a first aid kit, together with other articles of personal adornment. Don't be fooled into lugging around a thermos bottle or flask. You can get it filled. You will find this will add up to about twenty pounds by the time you have added the odd personal thing which you cannot be happy without and the weight of the equipment will be considerable. Don't economize on it; you'll be using quite a lot of fuel. Two dollars per day will cover the cost.

Unless you are anxious to cover a certain distance, keep off the main highways and to the side roads. You won't get many lifts, but you will see a lot more. Be a farmer's rig and you'll be given a glass of buttermilk and a chat at every farmhouse. Resist the temptation which will surely come, of leaping 50 miles push some one on to the lift that far. Distant fields are no greener and the feeling of having covered the corner of a country lane.

Take the rest you will learn as you go along, and you will love the lesson.—Dr. S. Balfour, in Hamilton Spectator.

POOR WILBUR!

Our heart bleeds for a certain reporter on the staff of the Winnipeg Free Press, whose very own newspaper put him in the doghouse, so to speak, when sweetheart is concerned, a week or so back. His name is not mentioned in the story but Wilbur's girl friend's sister was being married, and the said friend was the bride's bridesmaid. Wilbur, a bigbrained fellow, volunteered to report the wedding, considering his previous experience had been with policemen, calling cards, divorces and such, rather than with doings that land in the society page. That's understandable. In all his self-chosen task, Wilbur turned in what he considered to be a neat job of reporting on the wedding, then, when the paper was on the street flipped the pages to find his story. There it was down Wilbur's second column ere-down Wilbur's second column ere-down the first paragraph appeared:

The bridesmaid wore a black ensemble with insave and a florida shirred bodice. Her corset was of mauve orchids.

By Labor Day Wilbur's girl friend will be speaking to him again—he hopes.—Maclean's Magazine.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Tonsillitis Does Cause Heart Disease

It is often a number of weeks after an attack of tonsillitis that rheumatic pains and perhaps heart symptoms appear so that the tonsils are the cause of both the rheumatism and heart disease.

Many of the tonsils of tonsillitis are not followed by rheumatism, there may be many, including physicians, who do not believe that tonsillitis can affect the heart. It is interesting therefore to have some reliable information from the medical clinic of the University of Toronto, Connaught.

Dr. H. W. Boltz, Basel, in the State Medical Journal reports that during the first part of 1938 there was an epidemic of tonsillitis and many of the patients developed heart disease.

There were many with symptoms of tonsillitis and also inflammation of the tonsils, and abscesses were present in the deeply lying large number. The severity of the tonsil symptoms did not always cause the same degree of disturbance of the heart rate and rhythm as was expected. Sometimes there was very little heart disturbance and slight tonsillitis was followed by a great amount of heart disturbance. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the doctor should not seldom suspected of being the cause of heart disease.

The investigations of Dr. Hoix and others showed that these changes in the rate and rhythm of the heart disappeared after the tonsils were removed. These and numerous instances of the heart occurred in about half the cases of tonsillitis due to streptococcal infection. The heart and the nerves controlling the heart are linked.

While it is not recommended that every patient with tonsillitis should undergo the electrocardiograph test, it is emphasized that physicians should be especially careful during the first few days after the disappearance of tonsillitis. Rest during this period is essential and may be sufficient to prevent chronic heart disease.

Dr. Holix recommends that cases of chronic tonsillitis be permanently removed whenever it is possible. Where electrocardiograph tests and clinical findings show heart disturbances, the tonsils should be removed.

RAIN AT LAST

Rain has at last fallen on the parched lots of the city, on the common acreages which have been a source of annoyance to residents in the vicinity of these open spaces, because of the rapidity with which grass fires spread (and there were enough of these grass fires on vacant land to more than justify the fears), and on the farmlands near Belleville. The immediate district about Belleville had escaped rain for many weeks, but outlying centres and districts had had rain, so that Sunday morning's downpour was one of the most welcome of rains hereabouts as elsewhere.

Rains have been called million dollar rains, but they might as well and more truthfully be called multi-million dollar rains for every single inhabitant receives benefit, though in some few cases recently damage was done at points at a distance where fields were flooded and soil washed out. By providential means the rain which fell on this district was part of a great general rain which fell across the province Western Ontario receiving its share on Saturday, before it reached the first drops began to descend in Eastern Ontario. At the same time this storm was not violent and had no electrical disturbances accompanying it for which every person was grateful.

The common things are the most important things. Rain is more precious than gold, silver or diamonds. Rain by one of the laws of nature is necessary to vegetable and animal and human life possible on this planet. It is one of the many fine-adjusted conditions necessary for life. Just last week the world has been talking of Mars and the question whether it is inhabited, and we do not know whether there is rain on Mars or whether a form of life could be possible on Mars or any other planet without rain. Scientists declare that if there were life and no rain on one or more of the "stars," life would be vastly different from what life is on earth.

But life on this earth is what it is and what it will be because of beneficient conditions, rain, atmospheric pressure, various physical forces, chemicals and other factors and conditions, which man in general is browning in contact with. Rain is the one with which man is perhaps most familiar. He has learned to use it. Nature taught him lessons in agriculture as the race grew up and the modern farmer can feed a hungry world.

FOODS IN SUMMER

The question of food poisoning is noted by the Sarnia Canadian Observer, because it is not an uncommon condition in the summer season. "Food is exposed to atmospheric changes, of temperature, which is one of the factors that may cause it to be unfit for consumption. There are however, many different kinds of food poisoning, some of which might prove dangerous.

"Contaminated food of any kind is likely to make ill the individual who eats it. Medical authorities say that extra care ought to be taken to keep summer conditions in mind to be sure that food is clean and fresh. Canned meat or fruits that show signs of fermentation ought to be avoided. In fact, any food that is showing signs of having been spoiled, or any kind of a mixture that will promote bacterial action, ought not to be eaten. There is little doubt that many persons suffer attacks of the poisoning that results from eating fermented food in summer and do not realize the cause of the indisposition. They have stomach ache and other symptoms that soon disappear but sometimes such attacks are sufficiently severe to merit medical attention. Strict rules of cleanliness with regard to handling food at all times, but during the hot season especially, are very necessary. Screens on windows to keep out the flies, proper refrigeration to ensure that food and drinks are maintained at a safe temperature, careful cleaning of all dishes and utensils associated with the handling of food will contribute to immunity from food-poisoning."

In this age when there is so much food eaten in so many forms it is well to be careful. The world now furnishes from every clime food of every other clime as well as for the inhabitants of the same clime. So great an array of different kinds of food has never been assembled before any people there in history. This is due to the fact that modern science, particularly through refrigeration and canning and transportation, makes it easy to keep food in a good condition. Still, as the Sarnia Canadian Observer points out, there remains the duty upon those who have the handling of food and preparation of the meals of seeing that those conditions are maintained which preserve food fresh or make delivery of fresh food possible at all times.

MIDSUMMER WALK

Swaying daisies in the grass
Demurely lift their heads and smile
As I pass.

The rustling boughs of a maple
Cast blessed shade on this sun-washed way
To welcome me.

Far off in the steady blue of the sky
A flecky cloud, like a milk-white sail,
Floats idly by.

A phoebe calls from a distant limb;
A robin trills a musical note
To answer him.

And in a field of fragrant hay
Bronzed men toil gladly in the sun
All through the day.

This road is old and quite apart;
It lingers . . . . far from traffic's tide
Or busy mart.

Here warring thoughts and turmoil cease;
Kind Nature spreads her healing balm,
And all is peace.

At a meeting of the Harbor Commissioners yesterday it was decided to crib the island at the mouth of the river. It has not been decided to what use the island will be devoted.

A boat with two boys in it went over Coleman's dam last evening. The boys fortunately were none the worse for their adventure.

Guarding Skies Over Britain

Britain's mainstay in the way of anti-aircraft guns at the moment is the 3.7. For its efficient operation it demands a crew of nine. This slightly piece of mechanism which takes only a minute or two to set up in "action" position, weighs something over ten tons. In one minute it can fire a dozen shells—twenty-eight pounders. And the time one of those shells takes to get up to ten thousand feet is only seven seconds. Only eight seconds! An amazingly swift journey. But an aeroplane in a hurry can travel quite a distance in that time. A shell can't go directly at an aeroplane would not, therefore, arrive in time to hit the target. The plane would be somewhere else at the moment of the shell's arrival.

The shell has got to be sent, not where the plane is at the moment of firing, but where that plane will be when the shell actually arrives. The aeroplane target cannot, therefore, be fired at directly. The gunner's job is to find by his sight in the part of the heavens where it will make explosive contact with the moving target.

Several things have to be allowed for, including direction and force of the wind, in working out complicated calculations before the gun is fired. And as the invading plane will be going its best to get somewhere between the guns, there is no time whatever for contemplative headwrenching and much gun-crew sweating. They've got seconds only to "fix" that target, and without any margin of error whatsoever. This fact alone enters a most astonishing mechanical aid.

Before the moment of firing is reached quite a lot of things have had to happen. You don't go after your air target on spec. Without its warning eyes and ears a gun, even of the 3.7-inch type, would be pretty well useless. Something other than the natural eyes and ears of the human gun crew is demanded.

First of all, news of the attack that is going to arrive must be assured in time to allow of the defensive guns being set up in suitable positions. Further, there is equipment to know merely that hostile planes are somewhere in the neighborhood. They've got to be heard before their approach is audible to the human ear. So mechanical ears are brought into play — big movable trumpets spaced four feet apart. Sound is caught and propagated locaters pick up otherwise inaudible vibrations in the air. These, and, incidentally, the revealed "noise" of the plane's own engine is responsible for the sounds.

One of those grouped trumpets catches the sound in the sky. That locks after the "ear" which is listening in the direction from which comes the sound. Then, by the mechanical arrangement as to source—or perhaps the direction of the sound, the mechanical ears in complex agreement as to the source—or perhaps the direction of the sound. That question determined, their brains make it possible to calculate the exact position of the invading plane.

He knows that the mechanical ears are not hearing with absolute accuracy—or rather that because the sound is taking some time to reach them the plane is not in the spot where the "ears" are indicating. It has moved on. For every 1,100 feet travelled by a sound-wave there is a second's time lag away. It's the same time-question encountered by the human listener.

He makes his swift calculation, and the complicated machinery of the sound-locator crew are paired work on the resulting figure. Presently the gun light suddenly pierces the sky. And there, at the moment of firing, is the invading target. No groping about the lark sky. The mechanical aids have placed the mechanical ears and attendants finds the plane immediately.

And now the exact height at which the invading aeroplane is speeding must be determined. The searchlight cannot make that fact known—by the mechanical aid. Instead, it is the two height-finder knows all the answers—or rather how to get them. With a team of three to attend upon it, this piece of brilliant mechanism works (to put it crudely) like a horizontally-placed telescope and automatically registers the height. And ever till widely spaced eyes see.

Next there comes into action a mechanism which, when it goes by the prosaic name of Vickers Predictor, Mk. I, simplies it. It is to it that the task of this mechanism to predict several things. Six men hover about it. They spring to action when the men at the height-finder instrument known the height of the aeroplane which is to be the gun crew's target. The moment the Vickers Predictor has done its work. The height figure is registered on a dial of the predictor by one of the six. The other five attend to their own particular dials, keeping pointers on the move, pinning down the target, as it were, bound it by means of the predictor.

They are the servants of the machine. When it has completed the predictor works out the gun elevation required for firing into the consideration those natural phenomena which ordinarily affect the deadline passage through the air of any shell, variations in the nature of the atmosphere high up, and direction and force of the wind.

Also the predictor indicates the exact time-fusing which is required in order that the shells, when fired, shall burst at the predetermined moment—that very moment when the enemy plane has arrived at the spot where these various mechanical calculations contrive that the shell also shall be.

Electric cable provides contact between the predictor and the anti-aircraft gun, and the predictor's dials are in close contact with the waiting weapon, on whose dials they are registered. Watching the moving electrical dials, the gun layer concentrates on causing mechanical pointers in the gun sights to follow the manipulation of small wheels.

Thus are combined considerable accuracy, unfaltering and with swiftness, thus the gun is "set". The gun is ready to fire on the given word of command. What happens then is a story acted in three scenes and the shell streaks skywards straight from its muzzle. Whether it hits or misses it cannot but hit the fast-moving bomber above.

Then comes the balloon barrage the squadron drones on its deadly way, less one of its number. The scene changes. One by one with methodical precision, the remaining the number of planes decreases until the last has been safely against the raid and returns to the coast—defeated—Montreal Star.

Tonsillitis Does Cause Heart Disease

It is often a number of weeks after a severe attack of tonsillitis that rheumatic pains and perhaps heart symptoms appear. Many of the rheumatic ills are not blamed for the rheumatism and heart disease.

Only a small number of tonsillitis are not followed by rheumatism, pain in the joints, muscles and articulations, who doubt the statement that tonsillitis can affect the heart. Your family physician can give you some reliable information from the records of the University of Zurich, Switzerland.

Dr. H. W. Bolin, Basel, in the Swiss Medical Journal, states that during the first part of 1938 there was an epidemic of tonsillitis in many of the nursing staff contracted it. There were many with symptoms of tonsillitis and disturbed hearts. It was decided to make electrocardiograph tests, and all patients who had inflammatory disorders of the tonsils, and showed disturbances of the heart, a surprisingly large number. The severity of the tonsil symptoms did not always cause the same degree of disturbance of the heart rate and rhythm. Sometimes mild tonsillitis caused very little heart disturbance and severe tonsillitis caused only a slight, a great amount of heart disturbance. It is not to be wondered at that the poisoning of the heart muscle and the nerves controlling the heart action.

While it is not recommended that tonsillitis be avoided, it should undergo the electrocardiograph tests, it is emphasized that all tonsillitis should be avoided during the first few days after the disappearance of tonsillitis. That period in bed after tonsillitis may be sufficient to prevent chronic heart disease.

Dr. Bolin recommends that cases of tonsillitis should be treated before sore throat—should, if possible, have electrocardiograph tests and if there are disturbances of heart disturbances, the tonsils should be removed.

REAL BASEBALL

Baseball is a game played on a diamond, with nine men on a team, and under the watchful eyes of indifferent enthusiasts. It is a game of home runs and floodlights is something else. The specialist may have invented baseball as it is now played in the big league parks, day and night, are really baseball. The real, true genuine baseball is played in the open air on a field of grass by a small town between the home team and the visitors a game attended by the entire population and a game which enforces a public holiday because the stores are deserted anyway. That is baseball.—Halifax Chronicle.

When Gentlemen Dress for Bed

The shops are becoming conscious of a revolt among males against pyjamas, nightshirts, or breeches. These garments are seldom the height of comfort and in hot weather they irk.

What is the alternative? The old-fashioned nightshirt suggests Heaff, but for years it has been an outcast, something to be mentioned to women only in a whisper. They will not stay up for the persistent, and since 20 for the huge customer, although she is still in favor with the British public. But the standard nightshirt, its lines less graceful than those of a circus tent, require too much age to wear outside the home. Who dares to don it in hotels, staterooms or Pullmans? Faced with a journey, the coward diminishes his two-piece pyjama suit.

For him and for the thousands of other men who have worn pyjamas plants professingly new garments are now known. They are an advance. They resemble an abbreviated bathrobe made of handkerchief cloth, thrown down the front and, illogically, a belt also—as if the captivity of belts were not the very thing that's why pyjama slave began to escape. And some have pockets, not merely the breast pocket to hold a handkerchief but side pockets intended to hold heaven knows what; surely not cigarettes, matches, soda crackers or reading matter! With these pockets and a belt, it is hoped, most fits the wiatt the sleeper would never sleep. It is a start but has been made and the reform will go along without assistance from New Deal. No pocket, smaller lapels or none at all; the way is clear, to the old freedom without the ugliness of the old nightshirt. Some may accept the garments offered now, saying that they are better than nothing. There we came to a principle, for there are arguments in the matter, of night attire for men who contend that nothing is better than anything.—New York Sun.

It All Seems So Confused

The thing is all mixed up, writes the editor of the Chatham News.

Germany has armament, but needs food; and is talking of invading Rumania to relieve economic pressure at home.

Rumania has wheat, but she needs armament to defend herself against possible attack by Germany.

So Germany sells armament to Rumania in exchange for wheat; and that Rumania can defend herself against Germany with German-made armament.

Walk Your Way to Health

Whether it be long or short, a walking tour is the cheapest, healthiest and most interesting of all vacations. Provided it is widely conceded, it is practised much more commonly in the Old Country and on the Continent than it is in Canada. Here the great distances may serve as the excuse for the timid, but there are no "historic" or "quaint" villages or inns. But walking is a fine and instructive on this side of the water, and you don't have to go to the old country to satisfy your curiosity.

You merely merely starting a walk when you plan some objective where you will spend the night. Even a hiking trip can start at noon Saturday and finish Sunday night, or it can extend for a week-end, to months on the path and road. Other faster and more luxurious methods covering ground lack the intimacy with nature, that exchange that are the most satisfying reward of those who take to the open road with a packsack.

You can stop when you want to; go as far as you feel like, and if you decide, on occasion, be forced to travel the extra mile or two to reach your destination for the night, the more welcome your dinner and bed will be.

I have particularly in mind the case of any age who have to think of the pounds and how to get rid of them. Hilarly congenial companion without whom a holiday is so sahen. Every one likes the leisure of a walking tour, but many are tempted away by the motor and its fare. For it is an undeniable fact about walking that it is economical, and the less pace is set by the slowest walker—all the same as the chain gang or the weakest link. There are no or very few, gifts given to duels; then there is the saving of the clothes and wear and of fatigue, of starting hour, of temporary accommodation, of unhealthy, this walking alone. You will meet many to talk to if you must or like and they will, I can promise be of many types. Your movements on the road will be free and easy and that you will be allowed that glorious privilege of being entirely lazy.

Before giving a few practical hints I suggest that intending voyageurs get from the library Robert Louis Stevenson's essay on walking. It will enthuse them and inspire them to avoid fun.

I carry a packsack, 17x21 inches, with shoulder straps padded with horse collar material and a small haversack which rides on the packsack. Everything on a walking trip should provide you also with a little luxury; you have to carry it all, so keep the weight down. Try not to exceed total weight of thirty pounds.

Have a good pair of walking shoes and a pair of tennis shoes for change, several pairs of socks, a pair of woollen socks, two suits thin wool underwear, a pair of flannel-shirts, one shirt and two cotton shirts with soft collars. You should have one suit of woollen or tweed for the road, but not of serge, broadcloth, or ordinary sports coat. Take a pair of light trousers for hot weather reading, but wear moleskin or corduroy on the road. I prefer the knickerbocker pants, but that's a matter of taste. Handkerchiefs, pyjamas, bathing suit, a sweater, complete up your packsack. Do not carry an overcoat or waterproof, but take an oil felt hat.

Take haversack go your toilet article, a camera, emergency rations sufficient for one meal, stationery, pencils, maps, a pair of eye glasses, diary, and a first aid kit, to-bacco and other articles too numerous to mention. Don't be fooled into lugging around a dressing bag, a suit case, but that's a matter of taste. Handkerchiefs, pyjamas, bathing suit, a sweater, complete up your packsack. Do not carry an overcoat or waterproof, but take an oil felt hat.

MOON ON THE WATER by Ruby M. Ayres

Pamela bustled into the room, looking a little hot and worried. "I'm afraid supper will be late," she said. Mary has had a little accident with the pudding."

"Blue pudding?" Dulcie inquired.

Pamela looked at her.

"Well—yes—it is rice pudding," she admitted, and then as Dulcie burst into laughter she flushed. "There's nothing funny about a rice pudding," she said defensively. "And there are custard apples with it."

But Dulcie still laughed, and Gavin rushed into the breach. "Well, as for supper will be later, what shall we do? Shall we have a game of cards?"

"I'll tell your fortunes," Dulcie said. "I'm really quite good at it," she appealed, looking at Gavin. "Get some cards, Jane—and I'll tell Gavin's first."

Gavin's Jane knew it was silly to mind because his name came so easily to her sister's lips, and yet she did mind, and her lips pressed as she turned to fetch the cards.

"Here you are!" she said, and laid them down on the table.

"Gather them, Dulcie commanded airily. "Come along, Gavin and prepare to hear the worst. Cheerio! Here goes! Then cut with your left hand."

Gavin drew up a chair opposite to her and gathered the cards with attention: "I don't believe in this," he warned her.

"You will!" Dulcie answered, and gravely proceeded to deal the cards into three piles.

"What is—what will be, and what you will—she admitted.

Jane stood behind Gavin, her face a little pale, her fingers nervously twisting her engagement ring.

"Such nonsense!" Pamela protested in annoyance. "She knows nothing at all about it." And she walked on of the room.

There was a little silence before Dulcie spoke.

"You are a wanderer—a man who never settles for long in any place. You have known many disappointments, but for the moment the outlook is brighter. You have crossed the water more than once—and soon you will cross it again."

"Alone?" It was Jane's voice that broke the silence, and Dulcie glanced up at her, frowning, before she went again to her task.

"Yes — I think alone," she said confidently. She pushed the first little heap of cards aside.

"This is what will be. Money—I can see money in your life—quite an amount of money, and—two women."

One dark and one—"

"One fair!" Gavin interrupted in amusement. "That's what all the fortune-tellers say, isn't it? A fair woman who will bring me unhappiness—is that it?"

"A fair woman who will—cast a cloud over your life," Dulcie's soft voice went on. "And please don't interrupt." She dealt three cards face upwards on the table, and gave a little cry of triumph as she saw that the centre one was a knave and those on either side queens.

"You see!" she said. "You, and the fair woman and the dark woman—" She puckered her dainty eyebrows. "They both seem to be in love with you," she said.

Gavin laughed. "And the lucky one who gets me?" he asked.

Dulcie touched the dark queen. "This one—"

Jane gave a smothered exclamation and, bending over the table, she scattered the cards in all directions.

"I hate it," she said passionately. "It's — hateful — uncanny — I don't want to hear any more."

There was an amazed silence before Dulcie said in her sweetest voice "But I'm not telling your fortune—it's Gavin's."

Jane was very pale, and her lips trembled when she tried to answer. "I hate it, anyway. Gavin, don't let her tell you any more—please."

Gavin half turned in his chair, looking up at her, his face a little flushed.

"But, my dear child" he said, and then suddenly he thinks of Dulcie's hated supper bell broke the silence, and she pushed back her chair and rose.

"The rice pudding is apparently ready," she said. "And Jane is so superstitious—"

"I'm not—superstitious," Jane broke in agitatedly. "I don't believe in it, only—"

"Only you don't like the fair woman," Dulcie added coolly. She left the room, and Jane followed her. "Oh, well, I'm hungry—let's go and eat."

She walked out of the room humming a little snatch of song, and Jane said: "I'm sorry I've arranged the cards beforehand—I believe it was just a trick—"

"It was a trick, why take it so seriously?" Gavin asked. She looked at him with a humorous eye.

"I don't want her to know your fortune," she said in childish defiance. "It's not her business — she always interfered with everything in my life—"

Gavin laughed and put an arm round her.

"Silly child—it was only a bit of fun. Come along and let's tackle the rice pudding!"

But Jane resisted.

"Gavin!" she said pleadingly.

A faint look of impatience crossed his handsome face.

"Yes—what is it?" he asked.

Jane suddenly relaxed.

"Nothing," she said.

When Jane was in bed that night Pamela came tapping at the door.

Jane raised herself on an elbow.

"Is anything the matter?" she asked quickly, for Pamela and she had very little in common, and the visit was a surprise. Pamela closed the door and stood at the foot of the bed.

"What do you think of Dulcie?" she asked bluntly.

"Of Dulcie? .What do you mean? She's the same as usual, isn't she? I've always liked her," Jane said.

"Oh, yes, she's the same as usual," she agreed dryly. "Still all her old tricks—I wonder you stand it."

Jane sat up in bed, her hands clasped round her knees.

"What do you mean?" she asked very quietly.

Pamela's eyes wavered.

"I mean—the way she was setting her cap at Gavin. I call it disgusting. She can't let any man alone—it doesn't matter whether he's engaged or married. She talked to Gavin for hours this time—over supper, and you just sat there and never said a word."

Jane tried to laugh.

"Why should I say a word? They seemed to be getting on quite well. Gavin likes her—"

"She means him to like her," Pamela said. "It's a pity she came down—she has been having her, really—I wish she'd stayed away."

"That's unkind," Jane said. "It's her home as well as ours—"

But Pamela went on, indignantly. "All that nonsense about telling fortunes—it was just an excuse to get Gavin's attention. I've seen her do it before. She knows no more about fortune-telling than I do. And you were annoyed—I know you were."

Jane turned her face away.

"I think—perhaps I'm a little superstitious about that sort of thing," she said with an effort. "It isn't that I believe in it exactly, but—"

"You're always been superstitious about the moon and other things, haven't you?" Of course, I think it's nonsense, but they do say that when any one is superstitious it's because they've got a sort of second sight, and can see more than other people can." Pamela sat down on the side of the bed and folded her brown dressing-gown around her thin figure. "Anyway, don't you have any of Dulcie's nonsense," she said firmly. "You know she's attractive—and Gavin—"

Jane broke in quickly, "Gavin loves me—and if you think I'm going to be jealous—"

Pamela shrugged her shoulders.

"Well, it's your funeral," she said carelessly. "I've warned you."

Jane laughed. "Don't be silly," she said. "Dulcie told me this evening she's almost engaged—to some man who's got pots of money."

"That won't stop her flirting with other men," Pamela answered. "Nothing will stop her. She's taken a fancy to Gavin—I know the signs. Of course, Mary was different, she won't care about him not having any money, because she knows Gavin doesn't think of Dulcie's hated supper bell broke the silence, and she pushed back her chair and rose.

"The rice pudding is apparently ready," she said. "And Jane is so superstitious—"

"I'm not—superstitious," Jane broke in agitatedly. "I don't believe in it, only—"

"You know nothing about men," she said. "Gavin likes Dulcie very much as I do. Gavin may be madly in love with you, for all I know, but all men like to feel that they attract a pretty woman and—"

Jane flung the cushions on the pillows and drew the clothes up over her shoulders.

"Good night," she said firmly, but Jane said, "I'm shudding."

Jane said, "I'm shudding," but then suddenly she sat up again. "If you want to know," she said resolutely, "I don't like Dulcie—I'm quite soon. Gavin's bought a partnership in a firm in London—and we're going to be married."

Pamela stared at her.

"Bought a partnership! I thought he hadn't any money?"

Jane flushed, and her eyes wavered.

"Well, anyway, he's bought it," she said.

There was a little silence before Pamela spoke.

"Don't you mean—you've bought it for him?"

Jane's eyes defied her.

"It's not your business what I mean," she said. "I don't know why you suddenly take such an interest in my affairs—nobody ever did—till I met Gavin."

They looked at each other silently for a moment, then Pamela said bluntly, "Well, I never thought you'd be such a little fool. I suppose that is what it was after all the time—that was a surprise. Pamela closed the door and stood at the foot of the bed.

Jane sprang out of bed, her eyes blazing. She caught her sister by the shoulders, shaking her.

"How dare you say such a thing—how dare you!" Her voice trembled with passionate anger. "Go away—go away at once, do you hear?"

"Oh, I'll go," she said. "But I think you're a fool all the same. As a matter of fact, I rather suspected this."

Jane broke in. "You mean that of course no man would ever look at me if I hadn't any money—that's what you mean, isn't it? Well, it's a cruel lie—Gavin never knew about the money—he never knew until long after he asked me to marry him—never!"

Pamela walked out of the room and closed the door, and Jane stood there firmly behind her.

Jane stood quite still, staring at it —her eyes very wide and piteous, her hands clenched, and presently she moved to one side. A voiceless whisper, "He never knew, I tell you —he never knew."

But there was nobody to answer.

It was a long time before she crept back to bed, shivering in every limb.

Her thoughts were going round and round in endless circles, and she tried in vain to steady them into coherence.

Had she told him about that money before he asked her to marry him? She could not remember. What difference did it make if she had?

Gavin loved her—not perhaps as she loved him, but he had said, with a deep feeling in his voice:

"I think he would be rather a good thing—shared with you."

She had always remembered those words and had hugged them to her heart, but now their memory was spoilt—made ugly by Pamela's answering words. Perhaps he had only meant that he would be good to share her money. Jane tossed her face into the cool linen of the pillow—her whole body burning with a sense of angry shame.

But she told him? She felt as if two people were at war in her heart and brain; one was protested that it could make no difference whether she had told him or not, and the other who cruelly echoed her sister's cutting words: "Just a fortune-hunter!"

"It's not true," Jane told herself passionately. "He's not like that—he's fine and honorable—it's a wicked lie."

But she felt as if a storm of birds were wheeling around her, screaming a denial.

And then the tears came, and she sobbed broken-heartedly.

Why need Pamela be so cruel and unjust? Why, just when she was so happy, had Dulcie come home to spoil that happiness?

She tried not to remember that all the evening she had felt insignificant and unimportant, and, remembering, blamed herself passionately for permitting any thoughts of jealousy.

The moon on the water! The words stole into her brain, bringing a fresh, insidious pain.

"Alone?" She seemed to hear her own voice asking the sharp question, and Dulcie's calm reply.

"Yes—I think alone."

Jane sat up in bed and turned on the light.

Foolish to lie there in the darkness imagining all sorts of shadows which had no real existence.

She dried her eyes and plumped up the pillows.

To-morrow she would be happy again—to-morrow she would begin to laugh at her fears—to-morrow Gavin would be with her and they would be happy.

And Dulcie would be there, too . . . She rocked herself to and fro, as if in an endeavor to ease the aching of her body.

She loved him so much—she had no thought now which was not bound up in him. There was no sacrifice too great to make in order to keep his love—no weapon too cruel with which to fight for her happiness.

But presently, when she was calmer, she blamed herself for even doubting him. He loved her—because—and she was the disloyal one. What did it matter because Pamela had chosen to say cruel things about him? She closed her eyes and remembered the strength and love of his arms when he had kissed her good night.

"He belongs to me," she told herself. "He loves me. But then there were still tears on her cheeks, and when at last she fell asleep it was to dream that she was sitting on the seashore watching a great ship ploughing its way through the waves—a moment going faster from her—till at last her straining eyes could see it no more.

And then she woke up to the knowledge that some one was gently shaking her, and that Mary, the middle-aged maid who had been with them since they were children, was standing beside her with the tea tray.

Jane started up with a smothered cry. She wished—oh, how she wished—that Mary had remained to supper last night instead of returning to Bingham's.

Of course the house was more lively now Dulcie was home; Dulcie had a way of "giving the party", no matter where she might be, and the undoubted gift of making people feel gloomy and unhappy.

But she was conscious of a sick feeling of fatigue when one afternoon Dulcie calmly asked Gavin to drive her in to the next village to make a call upon some friends.

"I could drive myself," she said calmly, "but it's going to be foggy this evening—I can feel it in my bones, and I'm such a helpless coward in a fog."

She looked at Jane. "Any objection?" she asked airily. And then before her sister could reply she went on. "Of course you could come too, only you said just now you had such a bad headache that I suppose you would rather stay at home. You shan't be back late, anyway." And then she turned to Gavin as the whole matter was arranged, she murmured that she would get on her hat and coat and be ready in five minutes.

When the door had closed behind her Mary said, and there was a moment before he answered dragged by like eternity and then he said, "I shouldn't if I were you. If you keep on with this affair, you'll probably be all right by dinner time." And then he added a trifle impatiently, "I don't know always what you mean to get her own way so easily?"

She flushed. "If you don't want to take her, you've only got to say so," she answered in a low, pitiful voice, but he made no reply, and suddenly she felt as if the tight little band that seemed to be round her heart snapped, so that she crossed impulsively to his side, laying a hand on the arm.

"Don't go, Gavin," she said.

He raised his eyes to her face.

"Don't go! My dear child, how can I help going?"

Her hand fell to her side.

"Don't be a little donkey," he went on good-temperedly. "There's no fog yet, and it won't be for hours! And I think she's right about the fog; it was bad last night. It's often like that in the spring—isn't it, after a few warm days?"

"Is it?" she said mechanically. He put his arm round her, drawing her nearer to him.

"Can't we do something for that headache?" he asked.

But Jane stiffened against the caress.

"I shall be all right," she answered, and moved away from him.

Gavin came running back. "I'm ready," she announced gaily.

Gavin knocked the ash from his cigarette. "Don't overdo it."

"I think it might do Jane good to come, too," he said with a sort of dogged reluctance in his voice. "Fresh air is a good thing for a headache."

Dulcie at once turned to her sister. "Jane, why don't you come?" she demanded freshly. "There's plenty of room for three of us. Do come, Jane."

Jane hesitated away. "No, thanks," she answered.

Dulcie looked at Gavin and shrugged her shoulders.

"Well—then it's no use waiting," she said.

She walked out into the hall, but Gavin still hesitated, and after a moment Jane said abruptly, "Why don't you go? Dulcie hates to be kept waiting."

He made an obvious effort to laugh. "Cross with me?" he queried, and then Jane's frozen coldness melted once more and she turned to him, her eyes shining with their appeal—

"It's asked you to stay," she whispered, and then as she saw cloud on his handsome face she added hurriedly, "No, I don't mean that—of course you must go, but don't be late in case it does get foggy; I shall be worried if you're late!"

JAPANESE LAW

This happened only a few days ago. A taxi driver, duly and properly licensed, was driving his car; and beside him sat a friend who was no professional driver. When going up a hill in a certain part of the town, they followed another car which, in the midst of the incline, suddenly stopped. The following car had to stop but the foot brake failed to work satisfactorily.

When the car began to slip backward the nonlicensed man, sitting beside his chauffeur friend, put the hand brake on and stopped the car. One of the officers who had always managed to get what more there was to spare, she who had had the holidays, she who had profited from the monology of home without making them, a slightest attempt to see that her sisters had their share of pleasure.

Even during the last few days since Dulcie had returned from her prolonged visit to the Lawsons, life had seemed vaguely different; it gave Jane a feeling of insecurity to realize how different. Even Mary, the middle-aged maid who had been with them for so many years, seemed to have smartened up a little and to take more interest in her work. She had tried her skill at cooking, and had suggested by Dulcie; she had even been persuaded to buy ringlets for the end of super bed and to announce the meals as each was ready, and she had secretly giggled and looked self-tomaciously pleased when Dulcie presented her with a soft-collored cap and apron to wear with her black afternoon dress instead of the accustomed white ones.

"I hope you'll pay for them," Pamela had told Dulcie, looking a little hurt, and Dulcie had answered calmly that Mary already had them, and that she considered them an enormous improvement.

"And all this for Gavin's benefit," Pamela had thought bitterly. Dulcie was out of the way. "She wouldn't care tuppence how Mary looked, or what she wore, if she thought that if there wasn't an attractive man present she didn't."

"I don't suppose Gavin notices anything different," Jane answered indifferently.

"Oh, yes, he does," Pamela retorted. "He's told him—he told me the other day how much smarter she looked."

There was an uncomfortable silence as Jane tried not to admit that what Dulcie really thought Gavin had certainly been a more constant visitor.

She was loyal enough to believe it was because Gavin thought her lonely that this was so, and yet against her will she found herself wondering if Gavin would be a week that he had remained to supper, and returning to tea at Bingham's.

Of course the house was more lively now Dulcie was home; Dulcie had a way of "giving the party", no matter where she might be, and the undoubted gift of making people feel gloomy and unhappy.

But she was conscious of a sick feeling of fatigue when one afternoon Dulcie calmly asked Gavin to drive her in to the next village to make a call upon some friends.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BECKMAN

May You be Hostess to Your Host-ess?

Most of us enjoy making generous bows of hospitality to other people. But in some circumstances we hesitate to carry out our wish because of our inclination may be more generous than proper.

Such a circumstance often occurs when we are visiting for either a short or a long visit. Our hostess and best have made all kinds of thoughtful plans for our happiness, have been the personification of hospitality. We have been so much on the receiving end that we yearn to make some gesture of appreciation. But, we wonder, will this be proper, appreciate?

Have no misgivings about the propriety and appropriateness of inviting your hostess, or your hostess and host, to be your guest (or guests) during your visit.

Decide what form of hospitality you wish to offer, present your invitation with exquisite taste. Whenever possible make your arrangements before the party. And, above all, be thoroughly definite, first about the fact that you are to be the hostess for that, and then about the time, the place, and the number of guests to be included in your hospitality. This puts everybody at ease, and especially desirable in this kind of invitation.

If your visit is in their country, keep your eyes open for a delightful wayside inn or tea room, to which to invite your hostess, or your hostess and the children, for lunch or tea, or your hostess and host for dinner, or family for Sunday lunch or mid-day dinner.

If you are familiar with the surroundings or if you are socially adventurous, you will no doubt find a way to order the menu and pay the check prior to the party. This will give even more ease and graciousness.

Or let's say that you are visiting a hostess who lives in the city, or are visiting a hostess who lives in the country and with whom you are going to the city to shop. There are many kinds of happy plans that you can propose to her. Your suggestion may be lunch . . . either with your hostess alone, or with one or two friends of your hostess whom you have met and especially like. The party may be lunch, followed by a matinee or movie; is possible for you to invite the hostess may be a matinee or movie followed by a "dish of tea". Or it may be to join you and the hostess for lunch or for dinner.

Gift to Erst Man?

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

I am going to be maid of honor at a wedding, and I would like to know whether or not I am supposed to give a gift to the best man? I have been told that this is expected of me.

Weddings

ACKER—ELLIOTT

West Huntingdon, July 31—(Special) — West Huntingdon United Church was the scene of a pretty midsummer wedding on the evening of July 29th at 8 o'clock, when Miss Hilda Marie Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Elliott of West Huntingdon, became the bride of Mr. Benjamin Cloyd Acker son of Mrs. Acker and the late Benjamin Acker of Halloway, Rev. James E. Beckel officiated.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore charming gown of white silk net with matching accessories and a veil of silk net. She carried a bouquet of bridal rose, carnation and baby's breath. She was attended by Miss Minnie Acker sister of the groom, Mr. H. Acker acted as groomsman. The church decorations were carried out in a colour scheme of baby pink and the entire front of the church was banked high with a profusion of seasonable flowers. Beauty was added to the whole setting by the presence of two tiny flower girls Mary and Shirley Elliott. The Wedding March from Lohengrin was played by Georgie Pitman and during the signing of the register Margie Haggerty sang "I Love You Truly".

Directly after the ceremony a reception and dinner was held in the neighborhood assembly hall with the ladies of the Women's Association arranging the dinner, guests numbering about 125 were received by Mrs. Elliott, mother of the bride assisted by Mrs. Acker, mother of the groom. Mr. Stewart acted as toastmaster and brief address were given by Rev. Stirling, Rev. James E. Beckel, Mr. Elliott and several other prominent guests. The cutting hall was decorated in tasty colours matching those used in the church.

Guests were present from Stockdale, Frankford, Wallbridge, Wellington, Belleville, Sine, River Valley, Moira, Holloway. Many lovely gifts

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Promised to the Girl Back Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past sixteen months I have been going with a young man who came from the other side of the country to work here. When he left home he was promised to a girl there and his parents are expecting him to marry her. But he says he doesn't care for her any more, although he does write to her.

He expects to go home this summer to see his mother, and then says he is coming back to me a free man. He hasn't actually said it, but I'm sure he loves me as much as I love him. What do you think of this affair?

Wondering

Sometimes these long engagements are very binding affairs, and I think if the young man really loves you he will write to his former sweetheart to marry you. It would be less painful for all parties concerned if he did it by letter. If she knows he is coming home, she would expect to get a letter and that would be told he had crossed the country just to end their engagement seems unnecessarily cruel.

His Good Will Precious to Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

One evening a certain boy whom I liked very much asked me to go to a show. I accepted because I had already promised another boy to go with him. He called for me who made the first date, and gave him no explanation and did not offer an apology. He was very nice about it and seemed to understand. Now he hasn't made another date, and although I see him occasionally he's very frigid. Much to my sorrow I seem to feel that by my date, and although I see him occasionally he's very frigid. Much to my sorrow I seem to feel that by my doesn't care, and I really miss his good will. It means so much to me. I would like to regain his friendship—can you help me with some of your wonderful advice?

Kate

Why not write the boy a nice, friendly note and tell him you're sorry about breaking the date, and hope that you can be friends again. At the some time invite him to Sunday afternoon tea. Have another date with him before and fix them a nice little supper, and you'll be surprised to see how quickly his hurt feelings will vanish. And now I suggest that you think twice before you break dates in the future.

Mother's Advice Sound in This Case

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We're both 22, and have been engaged since Christmas. We hope to be married this summer, but mother thinks I should wait another year as my fiance is not working and has not been, for the past three months. His work is not very steady.

I expect we'll wait after I am married but mother says that will be impossible if I should have a child and have to stay home.

I've always had a nice home and she says I will miss it if I have to do without the things I've always am accustomed. I have saved $200 and my fiance occasionally sends me a little to add to this. But mother does not approve of this and thinks that each of us should have a separate account. I should like to know what you think of the matter.

Anxious

You mother, I think, is right in urging you to wait until your fiance is employed before marrying him. It's hard for love to weather that sort of an arrangement. The man begins by the dinner and cooking it staying at home and the woman as well. At your time of life you can well afford to wait a year or so. And it's always safer for two unmarried young people to have separate bank accounts.

100-Year-Old Lady is Guest Of Honor at Picnic at Trenton

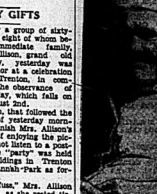
Mrs. William Allison, of Redneersville, is Life of the Party

MANY GIFTS

Surrounded by a group of sixty-five people, fifty eight of whom belonged to her immediate family, Mrs. William Allison, grand old Redneersville lady, yesterday was the guest of honor at a celebrating picnic given at Trenton, in commemoration of the observance of her 100th birthday, which falls on Wednesday, August 2nd.

Threats of rain, that followed the heavy showers of yesterday morning did not diminish Mrs. Allison's anticipated joy of enjoying the picnic. She would not listen to a postponement so the "party" was held in the Film Buildings in Trenton instead of at Hannah Park as formerly scheduled.

"My, such a bus," Mrs. Allison sighed last night, as she rested tired, but extremely happy at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hannah Russell, Redneersville, "I never had my picture taken so many times in my life, but I didn't mind. I was so pleased to see all my sons and daughters and grandchildren. They were splendid, and I enjoyed the day as much as I did those years ago, when we used to tramp through the woods to a picnic."



Mrs. William Allison, Redneersville, who yesterday received congratulations of fifty eight of her family and a large number of friends at a birthday party held in Trenton. Mrs. Allison will observe her 100th birthday on Wednesday, Aug. 2nd.

Pleased With Cakes

Her keen eyes gleamed as she spoke of the two huge birthday cakes, surmounted with 100 candles, that occupied the place of honor on the heavily-laden tables. The birthday dinner was served at five minutes before one o'clock.

Following the repast, Mrs. Allison was the recipient of congratulations of the assembling relatives and friends. A huge basket of floral tributes and telegrams lay at her elbow, bringing her the felicitations of her friends and admirers from far and near. Boxes of candy, a brand new silk dress, and other presents were numerous to mention lay in a pile on the table. In her same she lovingly held a huge bouquet of American Beauty roses and daffodils, the gift of her five stalwart sons and one daughter.

But all the attendant excitement of the celebration did not prevent Mrs. Allison from enjoying her dinner. She ate a hearty meal, and the puts it "enjoyed it immensely."

"I'm here another year? Why not?" she answered a curious fellow paperman, "there is nothing the matter with me."

"Why don't you take Jean's picture?" Mrs. Allison smiled when a battery of cameras flashed, "it is her birthday on Wednesday too." She was referring to Mrs. Earl Woods, a great granddaughter, who on Wednesday celebrates her twenty-first birthday.

86-Year-Old Sister

Near Mrs. Allison, sat her eighty-six year old sister, Mrs. Mary McCormaick. They are the only two remaining children of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dale, who lived at Long Springs, near Brighton years ago. Included in the large number of relatives present, many of whom came from the north countries, were Mrs. Allison's five sons, Joseph, Ray, Ernest, Robert, Belleville; William, Bay Front; Herbert, Trenton; Harry of Albury; and her daughter, Mrs. Hannah Russell.

Mrs. Allison was keenly interested in a letter she received from Mr. Arden Allison, R.R. 2 Meade, Pennsylvania, who desired to know the whereabouts of a chum of thirty years ago named Oliver Allison. Mrs. Allison and her sons could not place any connection with either Mr. Allison.

Oliver Allison, the letter stated, lived in Belleville some thirty years ago, and moved to Alberta.

A FAIRLY LIKELY day, with major ambitions favored, heightened spur for attaining long-cherished objectives. These seem to involve reorganized plans or even changed surroundings, with considerable activity and stubborn opposition of influential personages. These may be worn over by cleverness, notable acumen or" by force of popularity or personal appeal. It is a propitious time for uhing toward high goals, but use discretion with all papers or documents.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which you specia for achieving major ambitions, with ver yreparative influences at work favoring cherished business or social desires. Stubborn opposition may be offered by elders or influential persons, who may be placated by strategem or finesse. Change of plans may be needed. Be cautious with writings and documents.

A child born on this day will be energetic, ambitious and capable but may be inclined to attain its ends by erratic, irregular or dubious methods. Direct toward policy rather than principle. Early training in this respect is recommended.

Raise Your Eyebrows

By HELEN POLLETT

PAINT eyebrows are no beauty bargain. Dark ones, beautifully arched, glistening like the raven's wing, make the countenance vivid and interesting. Those pretties whose forehead acimilars are of a light shade can treat them with mascara or they can have them dyed. Dyeing should be done by a capable, conscientious operator who will carefully shield the eyes from chemical burns. As a new growth is constantly forming, old shafts falling and new ones popping out, the dyeing must repeated every few months.

Don't be talked into having your eyelashes dyed. That is a hazardous experience that has brought along serious grief. The crayon can be used, if sharpened to a point and applied lightly. The heavy touch will create smears and they are terrible.

Zigzag eyebrows, those that turn up at the corners, are the upped ones that get that way by too much tweezing along the under side, belong to a past day when women seemed bent on making their faces as rapid as possible. Now we follow the normal pattern, keeping clear-cut edges, getting after fumers that have strayed from the line.

Mineral oil applied with an eyebrow brush will keep the proper threads healthy and glittery. No harm will be done if it drops in the eye, but only Miss Sloopy Weather will do that. A light friction before the brushing exercises the tiny muscles at the hair roots.

When dandruff does not give up after a number of hot oil treatments and rousing shampoos, consult a medical man who specializes in diseases of the skin and scalp. Excessive desquamation of the scales of the scalp may lead to other serious troubles, and it is no help to the health and good appearance of the hair.

Brushing is advisable. No casual brushing, but hard sweeps of the bristles. Digging up the crusty particles with a comb or disturbing them with the finger-nails may produce abrasions that invite infection.

Dandruff is a horrid affliction. No man or woman should bear with it. It is stubborn, but continued treatment will do away with it.

Baseball Hysteria Mounting As Cincinnati Reds Move Towards First Title in Years

Reds Now 12 Games in Front With Three Wins Over Weekend.

YANKEES SPLIT

Freddie Hutchinson Wins First Major League Game Against the A's

By Bill White, Associated Press Sports Writer).

The way baseball hysteria is mounting in Cincinnati as the Reds move towards their first National Baseball League title since 1919, Cincinnatians are a cinch to tear down the town when the championship is finally clinched. And if they beat the Yankees.....

For years National League fans have boasted that tighter races in the league have produced better baseball than is found in the junior circuit, but the Reds are making hash out of that story this year. Latest evidence is found in today's standings which show the Reds are 12 games in front. Now the Yanks aren't that far ahead!

Yesterday the Reds won their third consecutive doubleheader and their fourth in a week over the Phillies when Bucky Walters won his 18th victory by 9-2 and Billy Myers clouted a two-run ninth inning homer for a 5-1 decision in the nightcap.

Path Far Second

While the leaders were gladdening the hearts of 30,000 fans there in three-horned second place race kept up its dizzy pace. The St. Louis Cardinals grabbed the brass ring and the same number when they sneak into second place by winning from Brooklyn twice by scores of 5-2.

Pittsburgh Pirates had lost the first game to the Cubs, 7-5 in the Windy City, but the second game was decided in the tenth when Manager Frankie Frisch's Bucs pounded out two homers to win the opener and thereby cut the lead to New Yorkers 5-1 with a seven his-ter in the nightcap.

Boston Red Sox won when Jimmy Foxx opened them in the seventh over St. Louis with his 26th home run.

Detroit's two victories over the Athletics were notable chiefly because the second game gave Freddie Hutchinson his first Major League victory. He didn't hit the entire game but got credit for the 5-3 triumph. Buck Newsom brought home his 12th of the year and his ninth for the Tigers, 14-0 by holding the A's to five hits.

And Washington Senators gave Joe Krakauskas, once of Montreal, another victory when they slammed out a 5-2 win over the Indians before 10,000 to take the series two to one.

While New York Yankees and Chicago were kept idle by rain Saturday, the cellar dwellers of St. Louis Browns gave up with a surprise 4-3 win over Boston Red Sox. Detroit Tigers defeated Philadelphia A's 7-6 and Cleveland Indians won 5-3 over Washington.

In the National League Cincinnati stretched their lead with 3-0 and 9-2 victories over Philadelphia. Phillies in Saturday's fracas at Boston hung up his 11th win of the season as he paced Brooklyn to a 6-5 victory over St. Louis Cardinals while New York Giants defeated Chicago Cubs 5-3, Pittsburg shaded Boston Bees 6-5.

FEATURE PERFORMER

One of the outstanding features of this year's renewal of the Royal Canadian Henley at Port Dalhousie Ont., was the showing made by Theo Dobbs, ABOVE, who uses a short, choppy stroke after the manner of World's Champion Joe Burk. He has proven it to be quite effective by winning the association singles and making a big impression on those present with his capabilities. He comes from the Argonaut Rowing Club, this being second to Joe Burke of Philadelphia.

KEN BLACK WINS AMATEUR TITLE

Defeats Henry Martell of Edmonton 3 and 6 in Final Match

St. Bruno, Que., July 31 (CP) — Davey Black, once the best professional golfer in Canada, taught his son well.

Ken Black, 27-year-old son of the four-times Canadian Professional Golfers Association champion, showed Henry Martell of Edmonton all the shots as he trounced the Alberta champion 3 and 6 in the final for the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship Saturday. Davey once runner-up for the Canadian open, couldn't have done the job better.

Streaking so well that it seemed absurdly easy, Black toured a three-under-par 67 at Martell in the morning round for a five-hole margin on which he coasted home to end the match on the 30th. For Black it climaxed seven years of trying in which he lost to Scotty Campbell of Seattle in the final six years ago.

Martell's 26-year-old tournament giant-killer, bowed to a game six-footer from toe to green. His play rallied off from that which eliminated four-career Americans in four successive rounds, including Ted Adams of Chillicothe, Mo., the 1938 champion, in the semi-finals. Black beat Phil Perley of Toronto to reach the final.

Black sank a 30-foot putt on the first hole and it was never behind. As Martell hooked and missed putts, Ken kept scurrying along for pars and birdies, that left him two up at the ninth, five up at the 18th and six up at the 27th. The match closed when Black, three times and present champion of British Columbia, sank a 10-foot putt on the 30th.

PETERBORO SNAPS LOSING STREAK BY BEATING GRADS

Danforth Aces Retain Leading Position in Intercity League

STRATFORD WINS

League Leaders Win Both Halves of Twin Bill Over Galt

(By The Canadian Press)

Rain nullified the Niagara District Senior Baseball League schedule over the weekend but sideline gossip kept things humming. League officials have a protest on their hands.

It all started last Wednesday when Merrittion and Port Colborne tangled. After one inning Port Colborne demanded another brand of baseball be used and when Merrittion couldn't produce them, the battle was waked off the field. Merrittion was awarded the game but managers of both teams went in a huddle and decided to replay the game tonight.

Port Colborne officials discovered on Sunday that the Merrittion club would not go through with the replay, thus the protest.

Other senior league matches were played and in each group, leaders won. Stratford Nationals, pacemakers, in the Intermediate group, defeated Galt in both ends of a doubleheader 12-5 and 8-4. Chris Abbott's league-leading Danforth Aces retained the No. 1 spot in the Intercity with an emphatic 11-5 triumph over Findlays and Copper Cliff increased its lead in the Northern district of Comiston with a 3-1 Nickel Belt victory over Creighton.

Peterborough Wins

In other friendly matches, Peterborough snapped a three-game losing streak with a 3-1 decision over Toronto Grads. Jack Ellis pitched Peterborough Petes to victory in the first game of a doubleheader with Oshawa Generals, 4-1 victory for Brantford over Hamilton.

Stratford had little difficulty defeating Galt in the opening game 12-5 when Jack Hall, a pilfering Ray Pawler, Nat Twirler, allowed Galt but five hits. Stratford had all the leaders down with eight. Irish Mitchell pitched a pilfering 8-4 win in the second game—a home run in the fifth inning with two mates aboard.

A six-run outburst in the seventh inning by Danforth Aces gave Intestate against Findlays. Aces conceded but 13 hits. Findlay batsmen were held to three until the ninth when they counted three more for two runs.

Copper Cliff met unexpected opposition from the bottom-placing Creighton Club. Each scored a run in the first inning and the score remained even until the seventh when the leadgs scored two.

HAMILTON WINS 8-OARED FINAL

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 31 (CP) Canadian oarsmen are looking forward hopefully to the 1940 Olympics—and if results of the Port Royal Canadian Henley regatta which concluded a seven-day aiard on the old Welland Canal course here Saturday are any criterion the Hamilton should be represented by a strong band of scullers in Finland next summer.

Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Leanderers were the regatta's performers in that they brought back to the Dominion two major titles, three as a pilsbury Pawler, Nat twirler, allowed Galt but five hits. Stratford had all the leaders down with eight. Irish Mitchell pitched a pilfering 8-4 win in the second game—a home run in the fifth inning with two mates aboard.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken I. Colling

It is genuine concern that a game resembling baseball was played long before Abner Doubleday improved upon the play that we now know. This year baseball's Centennial is being celebrated at Cooperstown, N.Y., where the modern baseball and the site of the game's Hall of Fame, where a National Baseball Museum has been erected to commemorate the occasion.

The feature of the National Baseball Museum according to the official souvenir booklet, is the Hall of Fame, the honor roll of baseball's great players. It gives the names of the players selected for the honor and the reasons as follows:

"The twelve who have been selected for membership in the Hall of Fame, on the other hand, it may be better." That, friends, is what you call covering the situation.

ORIOLES SIXTH AFTER WINNING 14 OF LAST 19

(By The Associated Press)

Quite the most amazing thing, that has struck the International Baseball League in many days is the recent winning streak of Baltimore Orioles.

In winning 14 of their last 19 games, including the last five in a row, the Orioles have jumbled Montreal on two separate occasions, Newark, Rochester and most recently Buffalo. They shoved past Montreal Royals into sixth place in the standings and are threatening Newark's hold on fifth.

Their latest move did everything but knock Buffalo Bisons loose from their hard-won grip on second place in the standings. Buffalo had just licked Jersey City in a Saturday doubleheader to take over second and clip the Little Giants lead to 1½ games when the Hired ran afoul of Baltimore yesterday. The Orioles promptly lifted out a 5-4 win and 16-7.

Since Jersey City and Rochester divided a doubleheader and Syracuse split with Montreal, the Bisons managed to hold second 3 1-2 games off the pace and a half game ahead of Syracuse Chiefs. Rochester and Newark continued to trail by another half game.

The rest of the Sunday program could almost have been taken more or less for granted. Baltimore won another Sunday bargain billthat seventh in a row—defeating Toronto 8-3 and 7-3.

Plenty of Hitting

The Orioles, of course, got plenty of hitting—33 hows, including a dozen extra-base jobs, in the two. They scored all their runs in two innings, but they needed them. They got surprisingly good pitching, too. Jim Reninger limited the Maple Leafs to one hit in the opener before giving way to a pinch hitter and Joe Vosmik, Baltimore's ace, in the nightcap before yielding to Harry Kimsey.

A couple of fine pitching duels marked the Jersey City-Buffalo twin bill. The Little Giants won the opener 6-3 as Roy Joiner, giving but five hits, outpitched Al Hollingsworth. Buffalo's Bisons came back with a 4-3 decision over Fred Rice coming out ahead of Hy Vandenberg when Carden Gillenwater singled and scored on Jack Sturdy's sacrifice fly.

Syracuse and Montreal split a pair of 4-3 decisions, the Chiefs taking the first behind Jack Salveson when Doug Dean's pinch hit drove in the tying and winning run in the ninth inning and the Royals winning the second for Bobby Porter with a three-run homer in the third inning.

Mickey Witek clouted two homers for the pig punch in Newark's only triumph. The first, with the bases empty climaxed a nine-run second inning rally against Jimmy Walkup. The second topped off a four-run 10-2 fifth frame of the second game.

SCULLING SONS FOLLOWING FAMOUS FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS

One of Canada's greatest scullers of many years and two of the up-and-coming-youngsters of today are seen in this picture taken at Port Dalhousie, Ont., during the 57th renewal of the Royal Canadian Henley. At the RIGHT is Lou Scholes, winner of the Diamond Sculls in England in 1906, and alongside in their shells, his two sons, Jack, LEFT, and Lou, Jr., CENTRE. The two boys are duplicating the feats up in doubles competition and brought a first to the family and Toronto Argonauts, for whom they row, in this year's Henley by taking first in the junior doubles. Lou, Jr., was third in the junior singles. The two boys are also shooting for the famous Diamond Sculls come next year or the one following.

JIMMIE BRONSON NEW MATCHMAKER

New Boss is Fanatically Honest and Burdened With Lofty Ideals

New York, July 31 (AP)—Local boxing circles were astounded during the week end by the announcement Jimmie Bronson, a product of Joplin, Mo., had been appointed matchmaker for the Bronx coliseum, the second largest fight arena in America.

For years Bronson has been a sort of showpiece of the boxing industry. Men have pointed him out as he stood quietly in the lobby of Madison Square Garden, perhaps and told wide-eyed visitors they were looking at an honest prize-fight manager.

It was the truth, too. Bronson not only is fanatically honest but he is burdened with a lot of lofty ideas that have caused him to have some thin times in his chosen profession.

For 26 years he has been in a business that is pretty soiled around the edges and yet, somehow, has managed to keep himself clean and fresh.

So it came as a pleasant surprise to practically everybody including Jimmie, when a new outfit took over the big shed in the Bronx and chose the dapper little man to run the works. It means that Bronson can go on being honest to his heart's content, and get paid for it, to boot.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Carl Hubbell, Giants: Although touched for 10 hits he won his fourth game, beating Cubs 3-1.

Don Padgett and Ducky Medwick, Cards: Padgett's homer in first game was winning margin over Dodgers; Ducky got three for four to lead Cards to double win.

Bucky Walters and Billy Myers, Cincinnati: Bucky won his 18th in opener and Myers homer gave Reds second tilt over Phillies.

George Caster and Johnny and Thornton Lee, White Sox: Former's two homers gave champs first game win, and Lee's seven hitter won for them in afterpiece.

Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox: His 26th homer gave Sox a win over the Browns.

Buck Newsom and Freddie Hutchinson, Tigers: Buck won his 12th and Freddie, though needing help, finally won his first Major League victory.

Joe Krakauskas, Senators: Held Cleveland to eight hits as the Nats won 5-3.

PLAY OF FAMOUS GOLFERS IN "OPEN" TO BE BROADCAST

GOLF players and students all over the North American continent will be able to follow the play of the leading players in the Canadian Open Golf Championship at the Riverside Golf & Country Club, Saint John, N.B., from August 17 to 19 inclusive as it was announced today that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the Royal Canadian Golf Association have completed plans for this event.

The C.B.C. will have one of its two mobile units on the job and the Open will be put on the air several times a day, including a resume of the day's results. The broadcast will be on a Canadian coast to coast network and in addition it will be aired over one of the major networks in the United States.

The C.B.C. mobile units, one of which will be used at Riverside, are the most modern on the continent, in fact the British and Germans are the only ones who can come close to rivalling the Canadian outfits. A mobile crew consists of a field man and an engineer, the former relaying the events which take place out on the course into a short wave transmitter which has a range of four miles. As this is more than sufficient to cover any point on the course the receiving station, installed in the trailer shown above, can be placed at the most suitable point on the course for reception and transmission. At the receiving station is a commentator, and two engineers and in most cases the field man is accompanied by a caddie who carries the 15 pound transmission equipment pack, and an "assistant who assists in answering details of the happenings. The commentator and the field man can carry on a two way conversation as the fishpole antenna of the former acts as a receiver as well as a transmitter.

The field man follows some of the outstanding stars each day and the two way communication system we will see the commentator at the mobile unit to inform him of players who are "hot" and thus enable him to get on the scene of one of the day's features.

The photographs above show the mobile unit at the bottom, the actual broadcasting in progress on the top right and left of the Seagram Gold Cup, prize trophy which goes with the first award of $1,000, and the three winners of the cup, left to right, Lawson Little (1936), Harry Cooper (1937) and Sam Snead (1938).

15,000 JAPANESE

The Japanese demanded the money be turned over to the Japanese-controlled Peiping government which has outlawed the Chinese currency in North China and is trying to replace it with its own banknotes.

Another factor in the reported deadlock was Japanese insistence on British support for the new North China currency and on withdrawal of British support for the central Chinese currency.

After the two hours' meetings where speakers shouted charges against Britain, parades formed and the demonstrators poured toward the Embassy grounds but were kept at a distance from the gates and wall by a ring of policemen.

Did Not Break Lines

They sang the same songs and carried the same banners as they did July 14. The crowd made no serious effort to break through the police line.

The foreign office spokesman was asked if such scenes might not hinder the Japanese-British negotiations.

"As long as they rise spontaneously from the feelings of the people we cannot suppress them," he replied.

Yesterday the touring Canadian basketball team, Vancouver Westlings, were feted after the game by the Tokyo hotel with the Canadians. Later the girls were punished by having a trip to China cancelled.

Consistent Slugger

One of the best and most consistent outfielder in the American League, although usually obscured because of his position with the lowly Philadelphia Athletics, is Bob Johnson, ABOVE, who goes along each year, missing very few of his team's games, scoring just under or just over 100 runs a season, and batting in about the same number. In his six years with the A's his average has fluctuated between .290 and .310. This year he's going better than ever with a batting mark close to .350 and a large harvest of runs knocked over the plate.

Playground Notes

Seven o'clock Thursday evening found both softball and volleyball being featured at the East Hill playgrounds, as the senior boys and girls from the East played host to both the senior boys' softball and the senior girls' volleyball teams from the West Grounds. The volleyball, a best two out of three game set was soon decided, the East Hill winning by the scores of 21-19, 4-21 and 21-1.

The softball tilt was a different matter, however, and might well be termed a game won twice. Originally scheduled to go seven innings it was eventually decided to the customary nine, due to a rather questionable decision that took place in the last of the seventh which gave the East still the winning run. The score at the time was tied 3-3, with one man down and the bases loaded. "Rod" Mallory, pitching for the West, steadied down and struck out the opposing batter, but the batter missed the ball, allowing the runner on third to start for home whether the runner was out at the home plate or not was a toss-up, the umpire calling him safe. In the ensuing argument another run crossed the plate really cinching matters for the East Hill hurlers as the West team being anxious and the East perfectly willing to play another two innings, the game was continued. For a time it seemed as if the home team had made a big mistake in agreeing to the extra innings, as the West pushed across six runs in the eighth to their two, and added two more in the first of the ninth for good measure, leaving the East Hillers with the task of collecting four runs to tie the game, five to win. To the rather incredulous amazement and joy of the spectators Clarke Pigden, Mcdonald and Theobold scored in order to tie up the game, with Theobold the man down. Then "Slub" Ethier, pinch-hitting for Robinson, did what all pinch-hitters must dream of doing, slammed a home-run to win the ball game by a score of 12-11.

"Mike" Powers, pitching for the East, and "Rod" Mallory performing the same chore for the West, both played a fine game, while Gord Theobold made a real game for the East. Herr and Theobold hit best for the winners, Austin and Bennett for the hard-battling losers.

Lineup:

East Hill—Theobold, Powers, Clarke, Kerr, Stewart, McBride, Pigden, Ayes, Robinson.

West Hill—Hibbard, Mallory, Austin, Bennett, Rose, Sward, Burns Young, Halk.

At the end of these two games the spectators and players from both grounds set out for the Belleville Beaches with weiners, buns and marshmallows to hold a roast calculated to wind up the evening properly. But, getting into more ambitious, and I might say, practical members set out to gather firewood while others went in swimming and still others sat around and talked of old times. Soon fires were blazing at advantageous points along the beach and weiners and marshmallows stuck precariously on the sharpened ends of sticks, were held over the blaze. Raw and burned weiners, not to speak of a few well-done ones, were soon devoured by over a hundred hungry boys and girls, while the amazing quantities of raw and burned marshmallows proved to the consternation of some of their owners that the hand is quicker than the eye. By a quarter to eleven, having eaten everything in sight and sung everything that could be remembered, the group broke up reluctantly and headed in the general direction of home. It was unanimously agreed that the entire evening had been a great success and doubtlessly will be repeated in the near future.

from Flint, Mich., and tear gas bombs, which we believe came from Pittsburgh," Blackwood said.

Brick Thrown.

The police captain said violence started after a brick was thrown through the window of a non-striker's automobile entering the plant. Fighting was stopped by police at once as that gate, but broke out anew at another entrance, Blackwood said.

"I heard a report that sounded like a gun, but I don't know if any shots were fired," Blackwood said.

After the rioting was checked, demonstrators collected around Donovan's Loop, a barroom near the plant. The crowd listened to the speeches and to announcements from a sound truck. From the truck came the announcement: "There are 10,000 here now. There will be 25,000 tomorrow, if necessary."

Given First Aid.

Of those injured, five were given first aid inside the plant before they were taken to a hospital.

The rioting was the first serious break at the Cleveland plant since skilled tool and die workers went on strike three weeks ago demanding a supplemental agreement.

Scores of women joined in the demonstration, police reported. Captain Blackwood said a number of demonstrators apparently came in from Detroit. Some of them wore steel army helmets.

Picket Lines Reinforced.

Detroit, July 31 (AP)—Picket lines were reinforced today by the C.I.O. United Automobile Workers at General Motors plants where skilled workers are on strike as the American Federation of Labor said its members would return to construction jobs at those factories.

The only disorder reported here as work began this morning, however, was a brief skirmish at the gates of Fisher Body Company's plant No. 37 which resulted in two arrests. Police quickly restored order after a worker, angered by the remarks of a picket, charged the man and was set upon by other pickets.

contractors on work at G. M. plants

It was not learned immediately reported for work. They have been how many of the 1,200 A.F.L. skilled- idle since the C.I.O.-C.I.O. called ing Trades workers employed by the strike July 3.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Minor Sunburn Involves Only Superficial Skin Layers

Sometimes your child will get sunburned no matter how careful you are and how often you turn him pell to stay in the direct rays of sun.

When the burn does occur, however, there are several ways of treating it. As a general rule, such a burn is relatively mild and more uncomfortable than dangerous. When this is the case it involves only the superficial layers of the skin. The result is redness and sometimes swelling of the burned areas.

If a cool lotion is applied to the skin, it will do a lot toward giving relief until the skin can heal itself. The cool lotion will have a burn is the sloughing off of the layers of skin that were burned, revealing the normal tissue underneath. There are dozens of helpful ointments on the market for these conditions. The tannic acid contents of some of these precipitates the destroyed material on the skin and prevents it from being absorbed. Such ointments are very valuable around a summer cottage. In fact, it is a brave household that goes away without some of them, for there is always someone around—not always a child—who doesn't realize that he cannot tolerate an unlimited amount of sunlight the first few days.

When burns are a bit deeper and more serious, we run across the situation where the burns form blisters. If there are a great number of these blisters—that is, if any considerable area is affected—then you do well to call a doctor, for this may be a serious burn. Sometimes there is a discharge from the eyes as a result of too much direct sunlight. This can be cleared up at once if the eyes are protected from the sun.

Hay fever is another malady that some children suffer when they go to the country. Some months ago we went pretty fully into the matter of hay fever and there isn't any need to stress the point just now.

As you all know, hay fever strikes those people whose mucuous membranes are sensitive to something in their environment. Usually pollens are to blame, and since pollens are present in the air during summer and fall, these are the periods hay fever suffers fear most.

Children rarely suffer from hay fever until they are four or five years of age, and since hay fever is often inherited, there may be a history of other members of the family having similar trouble.

If your child develops hay fever, you cannot do better than to see a doctor, and enlist his aid in identifying the pollen that is causing the trouble. Since this has been discovered the doctor will have little difficulty in inoculating the child against the recurrent attacks of this bothersome malady.

THREE-FINGERED WARNING

Nature does produce some things that are unkind to man —but she usually advertises their poisonous presence. For instance, the shiny three-fingered leaves of poison ivy cry out "Danger: Keep Out" to any one familiar with the Great Outdoors.

The advertising which men do to their fellow men is of a different sort. We advertise the GOOD things, and do not mention those we've found not good.

There's a reason for that. Merchants know that if they call attention to inferior merchandise, their reputation and consequently their business will suffer.

That is why you can safely rely on ADVERTISED products. Make a habit of reading the advertisements —and see how much time, money and shopping grief you save yourself.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Statis's Extra Job

By ETTA WEBB

Statia Hawkins knew she had no business to do it. Her friend, Mrs. Emory, with whom she made her home, told her so frankly.

"You let folks impose upon you, Statia," Mrs. Emory said. "I get so provoked with you sometimes I could take you across my knee and spank you. I believe I'd nobody asked you for your back hair you'd grab the shears and cut it off."

Statia felt of her back hair thoughtfully.

It was long, whereas other women's hair was short. She had had it so simply because she couldn't find time to run to the barber's to have it shampooed, shingled, and waved. A turn of the twist, four hairpins—and there you were. It saved time in the morning.

"I guess I wouldn't go quite so far as to part with my back hair," Statia said, smiling. "Nobody would want it anyway. It's red, and getting redder. It's as conspicuous in our office as a scarlet dress on an hot July day. But I console myself with thinking there's something inside my humble head that is useful to the firm.

"Oh, the inside of your head is all right, no matter how the outside looks," Mrs. Emory replied, as she cut the apple pie and passed a piece across to her boarder.

"Sometimes I feel, Statia, that you stand in your own light. Maybe you'd get a raise of salary, or a husband, if you'd take a little more pains with your appearance."

Statia became grave.

"I'm drawing all the salary I'll ever get for what I'm doing," she said. "As for a husband—there's only one man I'll ever want. And he doesn't want me. That makes me think I'll have to stop talking or I won't have time to eat my pie. I'm two jumps behind my schedule now."

Statia had recently taken on a second job in addition to one which most persons would feel was enough for them to handle.

By day she worked for an important corporation.

Evenings she gave to old Mrs. Lemon. Mrs. Lemon was a woman of many affairs upon which she still kept an amazingly close grasp. But she needed just such an alert, efficient, willing little person as Statia to keep tab on dates, write letters and check up on significant happenings.

Mrs. Lemon was rich, but she certainly was not fortunate for she had quarreled with all her relatives, who expected to inherit her fortune, and was so disagreeable to her friends that they only approached her cautiously. She had had eleven secretaries before Statia, and dismissed them all.

Tonight when Statia reached the old-fashioned house in which Mrs. Lemon had ruled like an autocrat for over half a century, she found her employer crosser than usual.

"My knee is paining me," growled Mrs. Lemon. "It's a nuisance, that knee. Sometimes I wish I had a wooden leg. But I've got to do so that director's meeting tomorrow. Get your pad and write down some things I am going to say."

Statia wrote obediently.

Occasionally her pencil faltered and she looked up inquiringly at the stern face of the aged dictator.

Protest was useless.

How did Mrs. Lemon dare to think she could say such biting things to Mr. Sturgis, and Clark Andrews and O. B. Untermeyer? Some of them seemed to be unjust, too. But she refrained from comment and wrote as she was commanded.

It was just before noon next day that the telephone on her desk tinkled.

It had been unusually quiet all morning, permitting her to do a vast amount of work. With a sigh of interruption she took down the receiver.

"Yes—Oh! Mrs. Lemon!—What!" The last word was followed by a gasp of dismay.

For Mrs. Lemon ordered her to go to the director's luncheon and make the speech she herself had intended to spake. Mrs. Lemon's knee had put her flat on her back in bed.

"I've called up Clark Andrews and he'll look after you," Mrs. Lemon said. "I'm sending my notes you made last night, by my chauffeur. All you've got to do is to read them. And don't omit one word. I want those fellows to sit up and take notice. Do you hear me?"

"Yes'm," Statia answered.

She hung up the receiver and clutched her head.

For a moment she was conscious of nothing but a great misery of responsibility. Job or no job, she had been commanded to do.

The luncheon was at 12.30.

She had no time to go home and change her dress. She needed every moment for her notes. They seemed even more alarming than they had been last night.

The words swam before her eyes. But the chauffeur was waiting to take her to the hotel where the luncheon was to be held. Mrs. Lemon had taken no chances on her escaping.

Clark Andrews came out as the limousine drove up.

"Just a word, Statia," he said kindly. "No matter what you have been instructed to say you must be careful. Ed Sturgis has it in for Mrs. Lemon. He is your employer. He has a hot temper. He will not make allowances for a single word spoken against his friend.

"Oh, I know that," moaned Statia. She was the only woman present at the luncheon.

It was signally a man's meeting. Her heart sank as she looked around the table at the businesslike appearance of the bald-headed, hard-working men who formed the group. Not the least of these was her employer, Mr. Sturgis. She felt that his steely eyes were fixed upon her quizzically, and she trembled.

She was suffering the worst struggle of a life that had been full of struggles.

She feared neither devil nor devices.

But she well knew that if she offended Mr. Sturgis she was out of a job. And she needed her job as never before.

Her sister, recently widowed, needed all the help Statia could give her at present.

On the other hand, there was Mrs. Lemon, who trusted Statia to carry out her wishes because there was nobody else.

When the time came for Statia to speak her face was so white that her red hair looked like a flame on her head.

She gripped the edge of the table with trembling hands.

There was something almost pitiful in her eyes as she began.

But as she went on her manner gathered grace and dignity.

She neither modified nor quibbled. She altered no facts.

She gave the message with far more force than Mrs. Lemon could ever have been capable of.

Mr. Sturgis' face was blazing red. Clark Andrews leaned forward, watching Statia closely.

When she finished and excused herself he escorted her to the waiting limousine. He said nothing. Neither did she.

That evening Statia found Mrs. Lemon sitting in her usual place. She looked pleased and triumphant.

"I understand Ed Sturgis was so mad at what you said that he fired you?" she began.

"Yes," murmured Statia faintly.

"Clark Andrews has been here. He said you covered my program to the letter. In any way, before we begin our business, I may as well say that you are engaged for twenty-four-hour service with me hereafter. I'll pay you a third more than you are getting with Mr. Sturgis. Until you marry—"

Statia looked up, startled.

"But I haven't the least idea of getting married, ever," she stammered.

Clark Andrews may be able to persuade you to have him for that. He's bound to do it." Mrs. Lemon chuckled. "Now, are you ready to take my dictation?"

WALL STREET

New York, July 31 (AP)—Traders shifted from one side of the stock market price fence to the other today and the result was generally lower quotations for honors.

Direction signs were dim at the start and trifle rallies thereafter failed to draw much of a following. Near the fourth hour dealings picked up a bit, after a dive morning and losses ran to around a point.

Loft was again a relatively hard mover on the upside, but it subsequently lost the better part of a fermenon advance of more than a point.

U.S. Steel, Chrysler and General Motors slipped after registering minor advances backward were U.S. Gypsum, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, Bethlehem Steel, Du Pont and Standard Oil of N.J.

International Nickel and McIntyre were clipped small fractions in the Canadian group while C.P.R. improved a trifle. Most others were neglected.

The price of lead was boosted $2 a ton, first increase since June 19, 10 a top mark since while no price. Mining and Smelting stocks, however, were modestly stimulated.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 31 (CP)—The small gold stocks made the Toronto market from leading tool of the general of them advanced widely in heavy trading. Base metal issues was barely firm under the influence of weaker prices in Wall street. Volume was run up to 371,000 shares for the first three hours, due to the action in the penny list.

Francoeur was a leader, trading above 62 cents up till 1 p.m. on a price advance of about 12 cents. Arnfield, Chibougamau, Bankfield, Stadacona and Tawagmac were other active and strong penny issues. A new body of ore was discovered on the Francoeur property according to reports.

Base metal shares were quiet and slightly off. The steels and utilities were steady and the loads quietly off 8. Other western oils held steady.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, July 31 (CP)—Further reductions were reported in bacon hog prices today at Hell where liveweights dropped 25 cents to $11.

Liveweights—Hell $8.25.
Dressedweights — Barrie $11.65, Hamilton $11.50, Hell $11.75, Peterborough $11.95, Stratford $11 plus transportation, London $11.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, July 31.—(CP)—Weakening trade was reported in livestock prices in early trading on Montreal markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Calves were 25 to 50 cents lower, Monday's top price being fully 50 cents lower. There were not enough choice cattle sales to establish prices.

Receipts—Cattle 723 including 225 held over from last week calves 1,566 and sheep and lambs 1,815; hogs 1,344.

Calves: Good veals off to $7.50; medium veals $6.50; common and grass $5.50 to $6.50, with the bulk of the trade at $6.50.

Sheep and lambs—Good ewes and wethers off 25 cents, mostly $7.50; culls $5.50; sheep $2.25 to $3.50. Lambs sold in mixed lots brought $7.75.

Hogs—Bacon fed and watered $8.25; thick fed and backward were $8.25 grade $12.30 hot weight; sows $5.25 to $6, stores $6 to $7.

Cattle sales in the regular cuts on off grades.

Toronto, July 31 (CP)—Calf prices strengthened on the Toronto Livestock Market at mid-session but hog prices were as much as 25 cents higher. The lamb market was weak and trade was slow in the cattle section, especially on weighty steers. Sheep were lower while no price changes established for hogs. Cattle holdover from Thursday was 600 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch, Ottawa, were: Cattle 1,900; calves, 1,550; hogs, 1,460; sheep and lambs 1,860.

Choice steers are quoted $7-$8 and a few butcher steers, and heifers, $6.50-$7. Butcher cows were mostly $3.25-$4.50. Some good bulls sold at $4.75-$5. Stockers were $5-$5.50 with common to $4.

Choice veal calves were generally $6.50-$7 with a few tops at $8.50. Bulk of veilers sold between $7-$8. Grass calves were mostly $4-$5.50.

Previous close on off-truck, bacon hogs $8.75-$8.85 with rail grades $11.75.

Few lambs made an early price of $9-$9.50 but bids were later reduced to $8.50-$8.75. Some lambs were sold at the lower price. Sheep brought $3-$4 cwt.

MINISTER NAMES

Air Marshal Sir Charles Burnett and Major-General T. G. G. Heywood.

"Where is no secret," Mr. Chamberlain declared, "about the fact that the British Government, the Soviet government and the French government conducted have not yet been able to agree upon a definition satisfactory to all parties on the term indirect aggression although they three realize that indirect aggression might be just as dangerous as any direct aggression and all three desire to find a satisfactory method of providing against it."

He added that political discussions on the proposed Anglo-French-Soviet Mutual Assistance Pact would proceed side by side with the military conversations.

Makes Explanation

The Prime Minister's statement was made at the opening of a Foreign Affairs debate at the beginning of Parliament's last week of sessions before recessing until autumn.

The Soviet Government has proposed that the the present state of negotiations it would be an advantage to begin preliminary discussions forthwith," Mr. Chamberlain said.

"His Majesty's government and the French government have concurred, and arrangements are being made to send British and French military representatives to Moscow as soon as possible."

France announced Monday that she was sending General Joseph Edouard Doumenc as the head of her mission.)

Replying to a question by Miss Eleanor Rathbone, Independent, the Prime Minister said the Missions probably would start this week.

Turns to Far East

Questioning of Mr. Chamberlain then turned to the Far Eastern situation and he was asked whether Britain intended to follow the action of the United States in denouncing her commercial treaty with Japan.

The matter would require careful consideration and he was not prepared to make a statement today, Mr. Chamberlain said.

Questioned whether the Dominion governments would be necessary, he added, "Broadly speaking, the answer is that His Majesty's government and the United States Government are on the same conditions are not exactly the same."

Philip Noel Baker, Labor, suggested Britain had "far greater interests" in America and therefore should start immediate consultations with the Commonwealth in view to action parallel to that of the United States.

"We shall keep in touch with the Dominions," Mr. Chamberlain said.

Mr. Noel Baker also questioned whether the formula recently agreed to by Britain and Japan permitted or implied any recognition of the jurisdiction of Japanese courts in China.

"No sir," replied Richard Sutton, Labor, suggesting Japanese authorities with the Government's Germany Following England With Torpedo Boats?

A scene in the Baltic Sea recently when the German navy gave final tests to its new tiny torpedo boats. The craft met every test to which they were put. Britain was the first to lay stress on these tiny craft and now the Reich seems to be following suit.

CARDINAL GASPARRI TO VISIT TORONTO

Enrico Cardinal Gasparri, prefect of the supreme tribunal of the apostolic signature, is pictured here with Capt. James W. Flanagan, Toronto, an old friend, as the cardinal arrived in New York for his first visit to this continent. Cardinal Gasparri will visit Toronto, after spending a few days in New York with Archbishop Spellman.

GAS IGNITED

Bush fires are invariably assumed to be caused by careless persons leaving live fires to burn and spread, and are as generally found to be caused by some such neglect. Other causes are found sometimes, and these defy either man's foresight or man's control. An instance of this is given in the official inquiry into the bush fires in Australia that inflicted harrowing loss of life and property last October. An unusual explanation has been given by Sir Herbert Gepp, who is not only director of the aerial, geological and geophysical survey of Northern Australia, but is also an authority on explosives. He said the widened range of the fires could be attributed to explosions of vegetable gases. Oils of eucalyt foliages, Sir Herbert explained rapidly volatilize in the heat, and to a certain extent partial distillation of the actual organic matter in the leaves and bark supplied extra quantities of gas.—Winnipeg Free Press.

PANTS FOR CHINA

Japan may not know it, but for months past she has been helping to provide the Chinese with trousers. Many of Australia's sailor flour bags come from Japan and when they are filled some go to China. Emptied, they are made by the Chinese into pants and the fact that "Best Australian" is stencilled boldly across the seats is a minor detail to the wearer. It is estimated that a consignment for Tientsin this month will clothe, partially, at least, 342,750 Chinese.—Australian Press Digest.

HEAVY RAINFALL

But though the number of fatalities was low, scores of persons were injured in numerous traffic accidents, some of which were attributed to unfavorable weather conditions. More than 15 accidents were reported in Toronto where eight motorists were charged with various traffic-law violations.

Killed in Collision

The women were killed in a motor-car collision near Chatham. They were Mrs. John F. McGill and Mrs. John Woodcock, both of Royal Oak, Mich. Three other persons were injured. The girl was six-year old Dorothy Wildfong, struck by a truck while playing near her home at Rockwood.

Heavy rainfall that began to fall early Saturday, breaking an extended drought, was of inestimable value to Ontario's farmers. It came as most field and fruit crops had reached the critical stage of their growth and as they had begun to wither and die from lack of moisture.

The precipitation extended across the Province from Windsor to Ottawa and was particularly heavy in the eastern districts. At some points the fall approached the proportions of a cloud-burst. Some streets and low-lying fields in the Brantford district were flooded while at Kingston, in the east, highway traffic was tied up for a time.

Cooler weather failed to come with the rain. At most centres, humidity was high during the week-end.

Screwy News

By GLADWIN HILL

New York, July 31—(AP)— The hilarious human race executed an unparalleled galaxy of prodigious feats last week. For instance—

Two Philadelphia cops in a patrol car chased a man three blocks driving backwards....A burglar concealed himself in a Pittsburgh store for an hour by posing as a show-window dummy....

After her car plunged 85 feet off a New York viaduct, a woman clambered out of the wreckage and exclaimed: "Where's my pocketbook?"....Mailing the government $1.50 a River Grove, Ill. Works Progress Administration worker reported he'd accidentally walked home with a sledge hammer....

Two softball teams in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., kept up a game for 242 innings....A Raleigh, N.C. chauffeur, instructed to wait, waited—for two days....

An absent-minded Professor in Blacksburg, Va., made an auto trip, forgot his car, went home by train, and when he took a train back to retrieve the car, bought a round-trip ticket....A man hitchhiked from Mexico City to New York to serve a jail term....A Bloomfield, N.J., man, 7 years old, paid his rent up for 30 years in advance....

A Kent bicyclist 45 miles from Brookeville, Fla., carrying an electric fan and four electric irons....A Little Rock, Ark., man gave police $5 to cover future parking tickets..

A New York man paid for a frock coat he rented in 1908....When a Mt. Sterling, Ky., bee keeper counted 75 pounds of honey in his garage, the bees lugged it all back to the hives.

HOLLYWOOD FASHIONS

In an article bluntly entitled "Women Are Easy Marks", Margaret Fishback comments in sprightly fashion on the absurdities of this season's fashions. "Little Miss" frocks, toeless shoes—she says—look smart and fetching on young, pretty, slim things. But on the average woman who doesn't rate at least two of those adjectives the little-girl styles of the moment are likely to seem unsuitable.

Miss Fishback puts a large share of the responsibility for the giddily girlish vogue on Hollywood where stars are picked for pulchritude and a rosette of a hat worn over one eye and a juvenile dress whose billowy skirt barely reaches the knees only call attention to their best points. Slimness and prettiness are Hollywood's stock in trade. But when American women of everyone, shape and age are outfitted with the same sort of costume, the effect in many cases is disastrous.

There is a certain irony in this situation. For years women who advocated sensible dress moaned under the yoke of French fashion dictators. Now that Hollywood is trying its hand at the job, the average woman on Fifth Avenue or Main Street is no better off than before.—N. Y. Times.
